The banking profession is no exception and skilled men are in as great demand in that line as any other calling. There was a time when one could, without any particular education, enter a business as an apprentice, and, through conscientious application and practical experience, succeed in working himself up toward the top of the ladder. That, however, is true to-day only to a limited extent, and he who possesses special training is infinitely better off than one who is compelled to rely simply upon practical experience for his education and advancement.

The American Institute of Banking offers to the young fellow desirous of accomplishing things worth while in the banking profession an opportunity to equip himself successfully to discharge the duties of official positions. As was pointed out by President Moser in his talk before the Kansas bankers this week, in the larger cities, where the Institute is a potential factor, about 90 per cent of the men appointed to official positions have been Institute men.

It is difficult to see how anyone with an eye for advancement can be insensible to the advantages offered by the A. I. B.

FOURTH NATIONAL ON MONEY MARKET AND BUSINESS OUTLOOK

Fourth National of New York says in its May circular letter:

"There is an easier tone to the money market, and the tension of a month ago has been somewhat relieved by the action of various corporation borrowers in postponing new financing until the investment demand broadens materially. Some of the largest roads are well prepared to do this, and from present indications it looks as if a great many bond offerings would he held up for the time being at least. In business circles, too, there is a disposition to proceed cautiously and to be governed largely with reference to making fresh commitments by what follows the enactment of the new tariff law. These tendencies are of immense significance at a time when the money markets of the world are just recovering from the strain incident to the financing of a complicated quarterly settlement. To this extent, therefore, it may be said that the money market outlook has improved, and that there is no longer danger of our having to make large shipments of gold to Europe. It is also evident that the much feared congestion in the bond market on a scale similar to that now being witnessed in London is no longer a possibility in Wall Street. There will have to be some important financing done later on in the year by railroads, industrial corporations, and municipalities. But the situation so far has been admirably handled, and there is reason to believe that the corporation borrowings of the near future will be scaled down to cover only such outlays as are imperatively needed. Business in some lines shows a slackening tendency, but the volume is still large enough to create a good demand for money from mercantile sources. The indications are that the enactment of the new tariff law will not be unduly delayed, and that as soon as it is placed upon the statute books there will be a better business generally in many of the important industries where future contracts have been held up pending final action by congress on the proposed schedules. Such a vital change in the government's fiscal policy as is represented by a thoroughgoing tariff revision must of necessity alter the selling basis for so many classes of merchandise as to force manufacturers and merchants to revise their price lists and to readjust their business in conformity with the new standards. This operation is always attended with more or less confusion, but in this instance the unsettlement has not gone far, and if the new tariff law is enacted soon it will not go far. In some industries this readjustment has virtually been completed already, but in others it will not be possible to provide for future business until the reduced duties are actually in force."

of representatives of constituencies. The only exceptions made in the draft of this are in the case of the president and the vice-president, and for obvious reasons the last past president. By this means it is hoped that the executive council may become a legislative body, where ample opportunity for deliberation and consideration shall be given, and where there can be no predominance of sections of the country, and where by reason of the uniformly large attendance, each section will be heard.

The executive council should be composed of the very best material to be obtained in the states, and the dignity and responsibility of the office of member should make it impossible for the action of the council to be warped by special influence or political arts. One reason for the abandonment of the chairmanship of the council was to banish as far as possible political activities from the council meetings.

The committee without further detail and with entire willingness to receive suggestions and give information upon any feature of the as yet unfinished work, makes this report and requests that the council shall make arrangements for the placing of the final report of the committee upon the program for the next annual convention to be held at Boston. And the proposed amendments will be submitted by the committee to the general secretary in ample time for the publication required in Article X of the constitution.

Respectfully submitted,

R. E. James, Chairman.
W.J. Bailey,
O. E. Dunlap,
C. H. McNider,
Gordon Jones,
Sol Wexler,
Committee.

Note

Wherever in the foregoing report provision is made for election of members of the executive council, or state vice-presidents, or members of the nominating committee, by "state bankers associations," it is thereby meant that such elections should be made by meetings of the members of the American Bankers Association in each state at the time of the meeting of the state associations. There is no uncertainty in this respect in the language of the prepared draft of the constitution.

APPOINTS BANK EXAMINER

Acting Superintendent of Banks Emery W. Lattanner has appointed Bert Foley of Toledo bank examiner for the district of northwest Ohio, outside Toledo.

CURRENCY PLAN MAKING ALL BANKS STATE INSTITUTIONS

department of issue and redemption should be managed as follows:

(1st.) By three ministers of finance who shall be nominated by The American Bankers Association, appointed by the president of the United States and confirmed by the senate.

(2d.) A manager and assistant manager for each subdepartment, to be nominated by the ministers of finance and appointed by the president of the United States.

(3d.) Three to five commissioners for each subdepartment to be nominated by the bankers association in each state, territory and possession in which a subdepartment is located and appointed by the president of the United States. Each state, territory and possession to nominate its own commissioners as proposed and if there is no bankers' association in any state, territory or possession the associated banks in the largest commercial city of each state, territory or possession shall nominate the commissioners and the president of the United States appoint.

(4th.) An advisory committee to consist of three ministers of finance and one of the commissioners from each state, territory and possession.

The ministers of finance shall have full power to control and regulate all subdepartments subject only to the provisions of the law creating the department of issue and redemption.

The managers of the subdepartments shall be responsible for all moneys and securities coming into the possession of the department and for the proper handling of the books and papers of the department.

The commissioners shall pass on all paper offered for discount by the banks and buy and sell all such exchange as is necessary in the conduct of the business of the subdepartment and act for the subdepartment as a board of directors would for a bank.

The advisory committee should meet every six months with the ministers of finance and discuss conditions in every section of the United States, determine the policy of the department and make such recommendations as it may see fit to congress for the regulations of the coinage and purchase of bullion. This committee should determine the method of declaring the discount rate so that the department of issue and redemption through the action of the ministers of finance may influence the movement of specie.

All necessary banking power should be granted the department of issue in order that it may meet world conditions, make the whole system elastic and protect the demands of the nation's commerce for world banking facilities.

Such a system as I suggest would strengthen individual banking, decrease the per capita circulation needed, establish confidence and bring out of hiding a vast amount of funds for investment.

The wonderful ability of the New York bankers along the lines of perfect organization and detail could take the suggestions herein outlined and develop a system of such checks and balances as to fully protect all interests and put the system to work promptly and without loss to anyone.

All ministers, managers, assistant managers and commissioners should be appointed for life, with an age limit, and be removed only for any activity in any political campaign and inefficiency or malfeasance in office.

I believe that the subdepartments handling the business of the banks of the United States (cash items only) should be able to effect the exchanges of the United States at par. This is based on the supposition that the profits from circulation and discounts will pay the expenses of the department.

The department should pay no interest on bank deposits but if there is a profit over a certain per cent to be used to create a surplus, the excess shall be divided between the government and the banks and paid the banks as interest on the average balances maintained during the year with the department.

All the bank reserves being concentrated in the subdepartments subject to the direction of the ministers of finance could be transferred from one subdepartment to another as occasion might require.

In case of a disagreement between the ministers of finance and the commissioners of any subdepartment, the ministers of finance shall call a meeting of five commissioners, one from any subdepartment they may select, including the department in which the issue is raised, and this committee with the ministers of finance shall constitute a board of arbitration and its finding shall be final.

CHANGES AT HELENA

W. J. Cooke, who has been connected with the Thomas Cruse Savings of Helena, Mont., for twenty-two years, recently being its secretary and treasurer, was elected vice-president of the bank at a recent annual meeting, succeeding F. H. Cruse, who resigned on account of poor health. The position vacated by Mr. Cooke's advancement was filled by the promotion of F. J. Lange, who has been assistant treasurer for the past eighteen years. The office of assistant treasurer was filled by the promotion of E. D. Day, bookkeeper. Thomas Cruse was re-elected president.

Even the ablest of the state rights party, John C. Calhoun, admitted that in order to secure the blessing of a sound and uniform currency the United States government must regulate and control its issue, and if the plan I suggest can be so safeguarded as to prevent the government of the United States from exercising the power of discount except through commissioners named by the banks, I am convinced it can be made successful. The government of the United States through the blundering legislation of the past now holds $1,671,606,369 of specie in its vaults and if we add to this the specie in circulation in the nation, I am firmly convinced that the nation is in better position to establish a sound system of government finance and currency than ever before, and that it is the solemn duty of congress to see that this is promptly done. The broader the basis of credit, the cheaper the paper currency, the greater the confidence of the people in the stability of the financial system, the greater will be the ability of the nation to absorb securities which, when doubt and uncertainty prevail, are unsalable at any price. We must continue to build railroads, develop our industries, encourage commerce and meet the demands of the people for municipal improvements; all this will require a vast amount of capital, therefore we must have a system under which it can be obtained and it is my opinion that this demand is going in the near future to bring disaster to the nation unless congress shall promptly (I mean immediately) give the people a proper system of banking and currency, somewhat along the suggestions of the monetary commission, or else along the lines I suggest herein.

This letter is humbly submitted to those whose ability the writer recognizes, whose patriotism he regards equal to his own and whose criticisms of the writer or what he has written will be honestly and frankly made.

I have failed to state so far, which possibly I should do, even if I am writing to bankers, that all United States notes issued as I suggest shall be payable in gold; that all subdepartments shall carry a specie reserve (per cent?) against deposits made by the government and the banks; that the national banks will have to obtain state charters as their articles of incorporation expire, and that the department of the comptroller of the currency and all subtreasuries will be abolished.

Alabama Convention

CENTRAL STATES LETTER

Cleveland bank clearings for April, 1913, were $108,376,112, comparing with $97,798,821, for the month last year. The showing this year is a gain of more than 10½ per cent over the month last year and in the face of the flood effects, which ran over into April, is in line with the splendid record clearings which it has been making this year. Clearings for April, 1913, surpassed those of every month in 1912, except July, when clearings in latter years have been biggest of the year.

Depositors Get Dividend

Depositors of the defunct Columbus Savings and Trust Company last week received a first dividend of 10 per cent. After paying out $141,000 to depositors, Liquidating Officer Sowers still has nearly $40,000 on hand which will be kept until the next dividend payment.

Opens New Building

The Third National Exchange Bank of Sandusky held a public reception last Wednesday afternoon that the citizens might look over its handsome new building. The Third National Exchange was established in 1872 and has grown from a comparatively small concern to its present proportions. The new building will be devoted exclusively to banking business and every modern convenience has been provided for patrons. The interior furnishings and finishings are said to be the handsomest in that section of the country. F. P. Zollinger is president; C. F. Schoepfle, vice-president; John Quinn, cashier, and W. F. Zimmerman and E. B. Gangware, assistant cashiers.

SECURITY NATIONAL LETTER

Security National of Minneapolis in its May letter says:

"With business generally so active and money so well employed that none is available for the financing of new concerns or for stock exchange operations, there should be little room for complaint in manufacturing and mercantile lines. Prospective tariff reduction is holding back some lines but the total volume of business is far above the average for this season. Some decline in imports and in manufactures will be apparent until the tariff bill has been disposed of. If the matter is properly handled by congress, there need be no upsetting of business and the effect of such tariff reduction as may be made will soon be dissipated in the increasing business which will naturally result.

"The best business conditions are still in the states touching the great lakes and on the Pacific coast. The poorest conditions are in the southeastern states, not including Florida, and in the recently flooded districts. The average of all business is far above the situation at this time in 1912."

CONDITION OF TEXAS BANKS

Between February 4th and April 4th there was a decrease of $1,864,078 in the resources of Texas state banks. The decrease in individual deposits subject to check during that period was $5,714,093. This decrease is regarded as a healthy showing, however, as it indicates that surplus money is being used on the farms and in business enterprises.

The report issued by the state banking department shows that between the two dates mentioned the capital of state banks and bank and trust companies of Texas increased a net amount of $1,227,500, making a total capital of all banks and bank and trust companies of $29,451,000; surplus and undivided profits $9,251,793; grand total capital and surplus $38,702,793, being an increase in surplus and undivided profits of $597,006; loans and discounts increased during the period $4,472,101; individual deposits decreased $5,714,093. Total reserve on demand deposits .453 per cent.

There are nineteen banks conducting a savings department. They are as follows: San Antonio, 1; Dallas, 2; El Paso, 5; Terrell, 1; Beaumont, 1; Denison, 1; San Angelo, 1; Marlin, 1; Brownsville, 1; Del Rio, 1; Tyler, 1; Waco, 1; Abilene, 1, and Paris, 1.

The actual cash on hand, being the required reserve of 15 per cent of the deposits in these savings department, exceeds this reserve fund $152,295.

HARRIS OFFERINGS

The Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago is bringing out in this market $2,155,000 Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company (Milwaukee & Northern Division) First Mortgage Extended 4½ per cent bonds, dated June 10, 1880, and due June 1, 1934, at 99½ and interest, and also $5,092,000 Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway (Milwaukee & Northern Division) Consolidated Mortgage Extended 4½ per cent bonds, dated February 11, 1884, and due June 1, 1934, at 98 and interest.

Secretary George W. Bartlett of the W. B. A. again reminds Milwaukee and state bankers of the meeting of Group Seven at LaCrosse, May 28th, of Group Six at Grand Rapids, May 29th, and of the special sleeper accommodations from one to the other.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

In his address before the convention of the Kansas Bankers Association at Hutchinson, Charles M. Sawyer, state bank commissioner of Kansas, outlined a new plan he has evolved for the bankers to get in closer touch with their customers. He proposed that the bankers in every county of the state get together in a county organization, and work out general plans for the banks to help improve their communities. "There are too many little petty jealousies among the bankers," said Mr. Sawyer. "There may be three or four dandy little towns in a county and each one with two first-class banks. The banks of one town are sometimes jealous of the banks of another town and they don't work together to help the county but are continually pulling and hauling for their own particular benefit. There isn't any sense in that. Every bank in every county is vitally interested in the general welfare of the entire county as well as in their own particular community. All the banks ought to be pulling together and helping each other and everybody else. What I want the bankers to do is to organize county units in every county. Every banker should be a member and maybe it would be a good scheme to have two or three representative business men from each town and two or three farmers from each township as members, too. About once a month the banks could well afford to close their doors at noon or shortly after and go to the county seat or to one of the other towns in the county for a meeting and dinner. At the dinner they could talk over business and business conditions and all take a hand in everything that is going on."

Mr. Sawyer also urged the bankers to get out among the farmers and help farmers work out agricultural problems. "The great failing of the Kansas bankers is that they don't take enough interest in farming. I want them to wake up and get busy."

Thornton Cooke Optimistic

Practically every square mile within the Central West has been drenched with splendid, soaking rains within the past week and all crops have been benefited wonderfully. These rains have been almost continuous in some sections for forty-eight hours and were of such a character as to do a maximum of good. "I am sure that I have never seen agricultural conditions more promising at this season of the year," said Thornton Cooke, vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, "and, while I do not look for a breaking record business this year, I believe it will be solidly and substantially prosperous. There has been a decided slump during the past two or three weeks, but this is normal and I see in it nothing alarming or even calculated to cause anxiety. Money has been rather tight here and elsewhere for some time but it is beginning to loosen up. I believe the whole country is feeling the suspense caused by the tariff uncertainty and the European situation. There is nothing fundamentally wrong anywhere, in my opinion." Bankers in Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma make enthusiastic reports of farming conditions.

Kansas Convention

More than 1,200 bankers, many of them accompanied by their wives, were in attendance at the annual meeting of the Kansas Bankers Association at Hutchinson, Kan., Tuesday and Wednesday, May 6th and 7th. It was the consensus of opinion that this was emphatically the most successful convention of the association ever held. President W. C. Brown of the New York Central lines, Byron W. Moser of St. Louis, president of the American Institute of Banking, and many other prominent bankers and men of large affairs were on the program. The sessions of the convention were held in Convention Hall. A detailed account of the proceedings appears elsewhere in this issue.

Two special cars attached to regular trains carried the eastern delegation, among whom were: New York—A. M. Young, Mechanics and Metals National; S. Chesney, Liberty National, and W. E. Purdy, Chemical National.

Chicago—G. A. Jackson, Continental-Commercial National; W. L. McKee, Fort Dearborn National and W. D. Dickey, National City.

St. Louis—Philip Kidd, National Bank of Commerce; F. M. Sowel, Mechanics-American National; John E. Swanger, Mercantile Trust, L. W. Fricke, Mississippi Valley Trust, and B. W. Moser, St. Louis Union Trust Company.

Kansas City—J. C. English and John E. Ryberg, Traders National; R. M. Cook and James Hellings. Interstate National; J. F. Downing and George G. Moore, New England National; Thornton Cooke and F. C. Cochran, Fidelity Trust; Charles H. Moore, Southwest National Bank of Commerce; W. J. Doughty, First National; Charles E. Waite, Stock Yards Bank of Commerce; J. A. Jackson, Gate City National; J. L. Johnston, National Reserve; J. D. Rising, Commerce Trust Company, and Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House.

Others who went from Kansas City were Carter Wilder of the Southwestern Banker; Clement Chase of the Western Financier; C. A. Chapman and C. C. Jones, financial brokers, A. Schooley of the Schooley Stationery Company, and the following bankers from St. Joseph, Mo.: George A. Nelson, cashier of the Burnes National; Ford E. Hovey, vice-president of the Stock Yards Bank; Walter S. McLucas, vice-president of the First National, and John Broaddus, assistant cashier of the German-American National.

Most of the eastern delegates left Hutchinson by special train late Wednesday afternoon for Wichita, where they picked up a special car and the party proceeded to Muskogee, arriving there early Thursday morning for the opening of the Oklahoma State Bankers Convention, which continued Thursday and Friday.

Central West Notes

Robbers wrecked the place of the Peoples Bank of Westville, Okla., early in the morning of May 5th, but failed to get into the money box. Much damage was done the building.

W. W. Brown, cashier of the Stock Yards State of Wichita, Kan., was arrested and placed in jail recently, charged with being responsible for a loan of $8,000 on spurious securities. Brown's arrest followed an examination of the bank's books by a state bank examiner.

Not long ago he confessed to having been implicated in the robbery of a bank in Murphysboro, Jackson County, Ill., six years ago, at which time Abraham Kimmel, one of the bank's officers, was killed. Swan at first denied that he did the shooting but has since changed his confession and now says it was he who fired the shot. A requisition has been honored for Swan's return to Illinois.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Ten thousand acres of fruit land in the Spokane river valley will market their crop co-operatively this year through the Spokane Fruit Growers' Company, a $125,000 corporation financed by Spokane business men in conjunction with the orchardists themselves.

Practically the entire output of the valley has been signed up by the company, which in turn is a part of the North Pacific Fruit Distributors, the organization resulting from the 1912 Spokane National Apple Show and which will market a large portion of the fruit crop of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

On account of the strong marketing organization the orchardists and the general public as well have more confidence in the stability of the fruit industry than ever before. In the Spokane country particularly is this feeling noted, for the organization of the growers here under a strong central system is perhaps farther advanced than in any other district.

Nature is showing signs of favoring the grower of fruit this year. Last year abnormally heavy crops, not only in the Pacific Northwest but throughout the United States, deadened the market considerably. This year growers in the Spokane country believe the crop of the United States will not be nearly so great. In the Spokane country irrigation will prevent much of a reduction.

This condition is considered favorable to growers here, however, because they anticipate the best quality of fruit, particularly of apples, ever grown. Thus, with a good market and a splendid quality of fruit, they anticipate good demand and big returns.

All danger from frosts is passed in the Spokane Valley, and no damage has been done.

Bids for the construction of the new union passenger station of the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul will be asked for in a few days, according to announcement of J. R. Holman, general manager and chief engineer of the O. W. R. & N. Company. The structure will be one of the finest passenger stations in the West, and will cost between $300,000 and $400,000. It is to be three stories high, of re-enforced concrete and brick, trimmed with ornamental stone. The interior will be finished with ornamental plaster and tile. The railroads have received bids for the contract of demolishing the old city hall, which will be replaced by the union station. The site is within two blocks of the busiest corner in Spokane. The old city hall was abandoned this week, and all city offices are now located in the new municipal building, corner of Front Avenue and Wall Street.

J. E. Ferris, treasurer of the Union Trust and Savings Bank, and for five years manager of the bond department, and George P. Hardgrove, assistant secretary of the same institution, have tendered their resignations, to become effective in the near future, and will engage in the handling of investment securities under the firm name of Ferris and Hardgrove. "The organization of an active firm by Mr. Ferris and Mr. Hardgrove to handle general and special investment securities will, I believe, serve a hitherto unoccupied field of individual endeavor in Spokane," said James C. Cunningham, vice-president and manager of the Union Trust and Savings, "and will assist rather than conflict with the bond and mortgage department of our institution and other banking institutions of Spokane. The management of the bond department of the Union Trust and Savings will be under the active direction of our secretary, Frank C. Paine, who has been the manager of our loan department, since the organization of the bank."

The third annual convention of the North Central Washington Bankers League, which is Group One of the Washington State Bankers Association, was held at Ephrata May 7th and 8th. Mayor John R. Kelly welcomed the bankers and M. E. Lies made the response. After the report of the secretary and treasurer, P. C. Kaufman, secretary of the state association, spoke and there were addresses by J. D. Bassett, George P. Wiley, D. A. Kuck and J. A. Stalwell. At noon the bankers went by automobiles to Soap Lake. In the afternoon there was an address by E. P. Coleman, and W. T. Clark spoke on "Marketing Apples." T. C. Bennett spoke on "Overdrafts," H. T. Jones on "Bank Accounting" and F. W. Schultz on "Bank Advertising." Previous to the appointing of committees and adjournment for the day there was an open discussion on the subject, "In What Way Can This League Be of More Help to Members?" At 7 o'clock the guests were given a banquet by the Ephrata Commercial Club. The second day was devoted to hearing the committee reports, the election of officers and an automobile ride. The route of the automobile trip was through Quincy and Hiawatha valleys to Moses Lake. Then there was a trip in launches across the lake to Neppel. At Neppel the bankers were entertained at luncheon by the Neppel Commercial Club.

Spokane Lodge of the Elks has started a campaign to raise $120,000 by selling bonds for the purpose of building a new $200,000 temple. Twenty-three thousand dollars have been raised to date, and a number of committees are engaged in securing the remainder.

The bank clerks from the banks of West Waterloo defeated the clerks from the East Waterloo banks 9 to 7 in a game recently played at Waterloo. W. F. Curtis, formerly vice-president of the Security Savings, but now a resident of Los Angeles, was official scorer. He has been visiting friends in Waterloo. The bankers of the city were enthusiastic rooters at the game.

The program for the coming state convention of the Iowa Bankers Association will be largely an all-Iowa affair. For that reason it will be better than usual, Secretary Hall says. W. I. Nolan, the brilliant congressman from Minnesota, has the honor of being the only outsider thus far engaged and it is probable he will be the only one. Secretary Hall believes there is sufficient talent in Iowa to satisfy the most critical Iowa bankers especially in view of the entertainment provided on the sedt by the Des Moines bankers and the trip to Ames, scheduled for the afternoon of the second day. The speakers, in addition to Nolan, include Governor George W. Clarke, President Pearson of Ames College, J. A. S. Pollard, the peerless Fort Madison orator, and James M. Parsons, attorney for the I. B. A., who will explain the recently passed law giving state and savings banks the power to act in a fiduciary capacity. Secretary Hall is sending out preliminary announcements stating that the Savery Hotel will be headquarters and that the sessions will be held at the Auditorium. The afternoon of the first day, the bankers will be guests at a ball game between Des Moines and Denver, Western League teams. That night there will be a novel entertainment, details of which have not as yet been announced.

Group Meetings

The group meeting season is nearing a finish. Group Nine met this week, May 7th, at Corydon, and Group Five met May 8th at Council Bluffs. Details will be given next week. Other group meetings to be held next week include Group Two at Emmetsburg, May 14th; Group Three at Nora Springs, May 15th; Group Four at McGregor, May 13th. This will complete the group meetings until next year. Thus far the sessions on the whole have been better attended and of more interest than ever before.

Hall After Alleged Forgers

Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association has been on the trail of at least three forgers. One of them is E. R. Harrison, a fellow who weighs 350 pounds and walks with a peculiar swagger. He is wanted at Sac City. Another is C. Watson who has been cashing checks in Iowa drawn on the Corn Exchange National of Chicago in which it is said he has no money. Number three has gone by the various names of B. Wheat, J. Perl, J. Williams, J. Ward and others. The Union Trust Company of Chicago furnishes the name of the institution. BANK COMMENTS ON ALIEN LAND BILL

American National of San Francisco, in its April financial letter, says, in part:

"The most significant movement in the social life of California is the rapid subdivision and colonization of large fertile tracts in the great valleys of the state. New settlers are coming in large numbers, and letters of inquiry by thousands are being received by those in a position to give accurate and impartial information respecting the soil and climatic conditions in various sections. The great impetus which the opening of the Panama Canal will give to this movement can only be conjectured. In view of this condition, it is natural that Californians should wish to maintain the ownership of lands in the hands of whites, and vigorously oppose the acquisition of farm property by aliens of another race. This opposition finds voice at Sacramento in the anti-alien bill, which, though perhaps not wisely conceived, is the earnest expression of a deep-seated conviction, born of experience, that Asiatics, whether Chinese, Japanese or Hindoos, regardless of their many superior qualities, cannot by any possibility be assimilated into our social body. The Pacific Coast must solve this problem now, or by and by it will become a national problem."

Governor Hodges Tells of Possibilities of Kansas

In an able talk before the bankers at Hutchinson this week he tells of the necessity for more agriculturists and good roads. Urges cultivation of the "get-together" spirit

Governor George H. Hodges in addressing the Kansas bankers at their convention this week on "The State," said, in part:

The state of Kansas needs more agriculturalists. We have about fifty-three million acres of land, one million seven hundred thousand people—thirty-three acres of land for each man, woman and child in Kansas. We need more men to develop our natural resources, to till our soil, to increase our land values.

Land values are so high that farming must not be done in a haphazard manner, but it should be carried on with the same scientific research that is given to other momentous affairs. As our land values increase, we must have larger returns, and those returns can only come by increased crops. When the acreage tilled by one man is reduced from 160 to 80 acres, then the cultivation of our soil will reach its highest degree of perfection and with man and nature working in accord with each other, we should grow 35 bushels of wheat to the acre, as the farmers of England do.

We want more agriculturalists in Kansas that every foot of soil may be farmed and farmed scientifically; that each acre of pasture land may become the home of a cow, or a steer, or a hog; that every inch of our soil may produce more wealth and with that added wealth we will build more and better schools, bigger churches, and become the active civic centers of prosperity and intelligence. The crowning glory of a state is the universal education of its people, and an educated people is a prosperous people. I do not mean prosperity in a financial way alone, but that degree of added citizenship that enables us to meet the responsibility of the present-day age. Life is more than meat and the body is more than raiment. Increased bank deposits and overflowing granaries give greater cause for gratitude but they only begin to solve the problem of state development. The prosperity of the farmers is more than fundamentally important, for upon our agricultural industry rests in turn the prosperity of the very large percentage of her people—but the prosperity of agricultural districts must not be measured alone by the individual wealth of the agriculturalists or stock raisers. The means of educating the children of the farmers, the comforts of the families, the facilities for transportation and communication, the provisions for the full enjoyment of country life so that it will be inviting to the young man and woman who are reared in the country or in the towns of the state are also problems that must now engage our thoughtful attention, and the thoughtful attention of you gentlemen who are the commercial molders of the state, if the one great asset of our state, agriculture, is to be conserved and nurtured.

The greatest of modern questions with which you gentlemen who are the individual leaders of your communities must deal, is that of the betterment of the conditions in rural life. Thoughtful men are directing their minds to this question. One of the real propositions that must concern all thinking men is the solution of the civic center problem.

I note with some gratification that some communities in this state are already taking hold of the movement and are now applying themselves to the community life, and the community life means "back to the farms," more pleasant surroundings for our young men and women. The influx of younger men and women to our cities fraughts our rural districts with grave danger. You must have better roads, more attractive social life, community centers, so that the younger generation will not feel that they are prisoners upon the farms but will learn to realize that farms and farming is the great basis of the wealth of this great nation. You, gentlemen, must cooperate and use all of your powers and ability to the end that Kansas may take the lead in the highest and best development of the plan of uniting each community in the state in one common center for the enjoyment of the educational, religious and social life of that community.

Since the creation of the human race the destinies of man have been molded by men who anticipated opportunity and, as is said of Texas, so can it be said of Kansas, that "a great hungry throng of home builders are standing upon our threshold awaiting welcoming hands to bid them enter and to guide and point the way."

The completion of the Panama Canal, the development of navigation of both the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, the attendant favorable railroad freight rates that must follow or precede water transportation will remold the commercial destiny of the Middle West and this state will pulsate with renewed agricultural and industrial activity. New avenues of trade, new markets, new people asking for bread stuff will bring to Kansas multitudes of men seeking our rich agricultural domain, and it is our duty to point the way. Kansas needs more men. We need men in the council of state, leaders who will not become frightened at new faces, increased population or try to stampede from us the force of progress, prosperity and wealth that a new population brings.

To meet the issues of the new commercial civilization about to invade us and that we welcome to our state, we must place in position of authority men who are state builders, those who will draw the tendrils of commercial activity towards Kansas. As Texas says, we must have statesmen who can pour wisdom into the fountainhead of dormant prosperity and wave the magic wand of genius over a state as full of opportunities as is the fertility of her soil.

We want our state to throb with industrial, as well as an agricultural life. We want more men, bigger cities, more industries. We must cultivate the "get together" spirit, we must build for Kansas and build permanently, throw wide our gates and let it be emblazoned upon every ray of sunshine as it rises in the east and sets upon the other horizon "that whosoever will may come," come to a land of peace, prosperity and sunshine, to a soil as fertile as the valley of the Nile, as full of possibilities as the Garden of Eden and as beautiful as an all-wise Creator could fashion it.

We want men of affairs in this state who can foresee and grasp the force of the new alignment of commercial progress made possible by the completion of the Panama Canal. The commerce of the new, as well as the old, world will be speedily changed and a great ocean of a new and, perhaps, strange commercial activity will beat against our shores. The time is here, now, and we are looking for men who will grasp the new conditions and make Kansas the birthplace of the Pan-American progress. The progress, development and wealth of a state depend upon those who plant and those who carry. Good roads the whole year round that unite the farms with shipping centers, the competition of water and rail rates, new, bigger and more accessible markets, with a greater tonnage for those who carry, as intensified farming becomes a fact, mean a pronounced increase of wealth for our citizenship, greater dividends for the common carriers, by reason of the greater tonnage moving, even though rates decline by reason of water competition, and unitedly they who plant and they who carry will share and share alike this new prosperity that is awaiting at our door ready to unfold like the petals of a rose. It is here—will we grasp it?

We need the "get together" spirit crystallized in Kansans who will comprehend this new swing of the industrial pendulum and who will see to it that the hands of the clock do not turn back, nor the pendulum cease to vibrate, and that every tick marks an onward step in our statewide opportunities, as they will be advanced by men who transplant and develop new industries and sow new cereals adapted to the soil and the climatic conditions of our state. Kansas needs a creative genius; Kansas needs more Burbanks; Kansas needs at this time more business and less politics, more pulling together and less pulling asunder, a building-up policy and a negative destructive policy. Let politics take a back seat and business builders take the reins and drive awhile. Prosperity is the one essential feature of state and nation and the leaders who will take up a campaign of state development, of the revival of business, regardless of party, will command the everlasting gratitude of a grateful public. We need business builders with a creative genius who will set in motion the wheels of commerce that have become stalled in the mire of business distrust.

We need men who will make brick out of clay and with those brick pave a street, build a hospital, construct a school, fashion a home, and with the same brick lay a foundation upon which the superstructure of a state will be builded that will endure until time shall be no more.

We need state builders—the greatest glory of man is to be a builder. Let those who hunger for political preferment understand that the highest recommendation of statesmanship is the ability to construct, to make two bushels of grain grow where one grew before—to put into active use some dormant natural resource—to husband the resources of your state to the end that mankind may be the direct beneficiary of his toil.

Let's have a little less legislation, less partisanship, less politics, less rancor, less factionalism, and more of the "get together" spirit for the common good of Kansas. We cannot legislate against bad business methods, without harming legitimate efforts as well.

Let us weave into the fabric of our state a true, a literal democracy—the democracy of good citizenship, the citizenship that elevates the good of state above individual desires, principles before expediency, the rights of man rather than property rights.

Oklahoma Convention

The 1913 convention of the Oklahoma Bankers Association was held May 8th and 9th in the new Severs Hotel, Muskogee. The opening session was called to order Thursday morning and the addresses of welcome de- by Judge N. A. Gibson on behalf of the city of Muskogee and D. N. Fink, president of the Commercial National, for the bankers. Response was made by R. H. Beatte of the Central Exchange Bank of Woodward.

After a solo by Lawrence P. Smith of the Union National of Bartlesville, President Asa E. Ramsay delivered his annual address, followed by reports from Treasurer J. R. Prentice of Duncan and Secretary W. B. Harrison of Enid. The Hon. H. G. McKeever of Enid told of legal technicalities affecting the banker and Oscar Wells, vice-president of the Union National of Houston, Tex., spoke on handling cotton. After the appointment of committees adjournment was taken for luncheon.

At 1:15 P. M. there was an adding machine contest for the state championship honors, with Burroughs championship cup and $50 in cash prizes. Headquarters room was at the Hotel Severs.

Friday morning the Hon. Andrew J. Frame, president of the Waukesha (Wis.) National, told of some facts and fallacies in banking reform. Byron W. Moser of St. Louis told of the relation of the A. I. B. to the country. T. J. Hartman then reported for the agricultural committee and reports also were heard from five group representatives. J. F. Darby, president of the Eastern Oklahoma Agricultural Association, spoke on agricultural development in Oklahoma and John T. Burns of Tulsa, secretary of the International Dry Farming Congress, spoke on the banker's interest in the dry farming congress. Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, chairman of the committee on banking and currency in the United States senate, who was down on the program for a talk, was unable to be present but sent a letter of regret to the bankers in which he expressed the hope that the meeting would be of special value in stimulating a knowledge of the principles and practice of sound banking.

After the reports of committees and election and installation of officers the convention adjourned.

Members of the A. B. A. met immediately after adjournment Friday morning to elect a representative on the executive council, a member of the A. B. A. nominating committee at Boston and a vice-president for the state. The meeting was presided over by G. D. Davis of Claremore, vice-president this year.

Officers of the Oklahoma Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, Asa E. Ramsay, Muskogee; vice-presidents, W. S. Guthrie of Oklahoma City and P. C. Dings, Ardmore; secretary, W. B. Harrison, Enid; treasurer, J. R. Prentice of Duncan.

President's Address

In opening his annual address President Asa E. Ramsay called attention to the fact that out of more than 950 banks in the state there are just twelve which do not belong to the association.

Mr. Ramsay pointed out the importance of agriculture and how it vitally affects the progress and welfare of the human race. The interest of the banker in the educational work of soil conservation and its scientific cultivation is great, for on the banker rests the obligation to finance the farmer. If the latter, through ignorance and antiquated methods, lose all or a portion of his crop, the banker is apt to fail to realize on the loan.

The speaker does not believe that the credit societies of European countries offer the best solution for improving the lot of the American farmer, and expressed the belief that before the latter can obtain cheap money there must be a more perfect development of men, methods and soil than we now possess.

He sharply criticised those who seek to instil into the minds of the people the element of discontent. He believes that the bankers should take a healthy interest in politics and endeavor to prevent the control of the government falling into the hands of individuals of that type.

Mr. Ramsay advocates the adoption of a more equitable basis of assessing the Oklahoma banks, stating that the banks are the only institutions in the state paying on a valuation of 100 per cent of capital, surplus and undivided profits, with no deductions allowed for bad debts or anticipated losses.

Senator Owen Absent

Senator Robert L. Owen, chairman of the United States senate committee on banking and currency, was unable to be present at the convention. The Senator, however, previously had sent a letter to the Oklahoma Bankers Association in which he said: "Our financial system has developed the credit system in a very high degree,—so much so that we have now in the United States about seventeen thousand millions of private credits as bank deposits and a still larger amount of bank credits outstanding in the form of loans and discounts. In addition to this we have a large amount of outstanding national bank notes, that are bank credits, and United States notes and silver certificates that find currency on the credit of the United States. Back of all these credits is a certain quantity of gold, in which they are supposed to be redeemable, and in which, in fact, they are redeemablle in normal times, and the redemption is easy, because nobody wants the gold,—they only want a credit equal to gold.

"Beside these credits, we have a volume of daily checks and drafts amounting to a huge sum of somewhere between one and three thousand million dollars, which suddenly shrunk 50 per cent in times of panic to the great injury of the debtor class compelled to sell property on a falling market.

"Our national banking system has been a valuable part of the financial machinery of the United States and, in fact, the national banks have been largely charged with the duty of carrying the national reserves, some of the states requiring no particular reserve by state banks. On an average the state banks throughout the United States have carried a very small percentage of actual gold, the primary redemptive money. It is of very great importance to the stability of the banking world that the reserves should be large enough in gold coin, or gold certificates, to provide against the time when a withdrawal of gold from the United States may cripple these reserves to a dangerous point. It has become necessary in the United States to establish a system by which the withdrawal of an excessive amount of gold from our reserves could be controlled by raising the rates to a point that would check the undue draft upon our national gold reserves by Europe. Our present system also needs to be amended so that the reserves themselves, in time of serious stringency, could be made available by the banks for the accommodation of legitimate commerce.

"Another important remedy which the banks of the country need is the right to be able to issue legal tender notes as against commercial paper of the best quality issued against goods in transit, of short time, so as to have elasticity of currency for commercial needs, and these notes should be issued under such conditions as to prevent any inflation.

"While I believe firmly in the policy of mutual insurance of bank deposits which are, in fact, the mutual insurance by the banks of private credits placed in their keeping, I have not thought it wise to insist upon this remedy being adopted in the United States at this time, for the reason that there is a somewhat violent and unreasoning hostility to it which would introduce a factor of possible danger to the speedy and immediate passage of the more fundamental and important provisions to which I have referred,—that is, the protection of the national gold reserve and elasticity of currency and the establishment also of a credit market where small banks can find accommodations to which they are entitled of merit.

"Where there is no guaranty fund insuring the bank deposits it would seem that the banks might nevertheless have available a fund which would take over an insolvent concern and pay off immediately the depositors up to the point at which the assets of the bank were ascertained to be valid, leaving the bank assets to be liquidated at leisure and without sacrifice. In this way the bank assets would repay the fund and it would be to this extent a measure that would prevent unnecessary disturbance.

"I have been gratified to see the improvement of the Oklahoma banking law and placing the administration of the guaranty fund in the hands of the banks who contribute this money."

Andrew Jay Frame Talks

Andrew J. Frame, president of the Waukesha (Wis.) National, in talking to the Oklahoma bankers at Muskogee this week, proved to be a highly interesting speaker. He criticized the banking systems of certain foreign countries and said that our own system, by way of comparison, shows up favorably.

Mr. Frame called attention to the tendency exhibited by certain speakers to convey the impression that ours is the only country suffering from financial panics. He cited statistics showing bank failures abroad and compared their magnitude and importance with those occurring in our country, showing that conditions in this country are not so bad as is popularly believed.

Would Reform Court Procedure

H. G. McKeever of McKeever, Walker & Church, lawyers at Enid, outlined to the bankers his suggestions for reform of court procedure, calling attention to the law's delay and pointing out that justice often is subverted owing to legal technicalities.

Kansas Convention

Twenty-sixth annual convention of the Kansas Bankers Association held in Convention Hall, Hutchinson, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week proved to be highly interesting and profitable to those who were so fortunate as to be present. Sessions were held from 10 A. M. to noon and 2 P. M. to 5 P. M. each day.

The regular annual convention of the Kansas League of Local Building and Loan Associations, which constitutes the Building and Loan Section of the Kansas Bankers Association, was held in connection with the convention.

A special meeting of the ladies in attendance at the bankers convention—with the ladies of Hutchinson—was held in the M. E. Church Wednesday morning. Mrs. Marion Wharton of Chicago delivered a lecture.

Tuesday morning the convention was called to order at ten o'clock. The address of welcome was made by A. E. Asher, president of the Commercial National, and the response by E. D. Crooks, president of the State Bank of Fredonia. President M. H. Malott of Abilene then delivered his annual address. Talks were made by Governor George H. Hodges on "The State" and Tom Blodgett of Wichita on "Moral Forces in Business." After appointment of committees adjournment was taken until two o'clock in the afternoon.

At the second session of the convention the Hon. Charles M. Sawyer, bank commissioner for Kansas, gave a very interesting talk to the bankers, being down on the program for "A Call for a Statement." Addresses also were delivered by the Hon. Henry J. Waters, president of the Kansas State Agricultural College, on "Kansas' Greatest Bank"; the Hon. W. J. Bailey, former governor of Kansas, on "Manufactured Unrest"; and A. C. Jobes, president of the First National of Kansas City, Mo., who told of advances on warehouse receipts and bills of lading.

Immediately following this session the members of the American Bankers Association in attendance at the convention met to nominate a vice-president for Kansas and a member of the nominating committee for the A. B. A.

Wednesday morning Byron W. Moser of St. Louis, president of the American Institute of Banking, spoke on the coming generation of bankers. C. M. Harger of Abilene, president of the Citizens League of Kansas, spoke on "The Sentiment Trust"; W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central Lines, told of the railways and the banks as public servants and H. L. Nicolet, financial editor of the Kansas City Star, spoke on "Changing Ideas About Currency."

Wednesday afternoon F. P. Hettinger of the Hutchinson bar discussed some of the legal problems in banking and R. H. Faxon of Wichita, secretary-treasurer of the Kansas Development Association, spoke on "Advertising and Developing Kansas." After the election and installation of officers adjournment was taken.

A reception was tendered by the ladies of Hutchinson to the visiting ladies at the Country Club Tuesday afternoon. Automobiles were in waiting to convey the party to this delightful meeting place. Tuesday evening the visiting delegates were the guests of the Associated Bankers of Hutchinson in a grand musical entertainment in Convention Hall given by the fine professional musical talent which has made Hutchinson famous. For the further pleasure of the guests provision was made for a ball.

Officers of the Kansas association during 1912 and 1913 were: President, M. H. Malott, president Citizens Bank, Abilene; vice-president, W. J. Bailey, vice-president Exchange National, Atchison; secretary, W. W. Bowman, Topeka; treasurer, A. D. Jellison, president Wilson State Bank, Wilson.

President's Address

President Malott, in opening his annual address, called attention to the fact that, notwithstanding the fact that we have just passed through a bitterly fought presidential campaign, the prosperity of the country has not been affected detrimentally; in fact, entirely the opposite situation may be said to exist. The speaker lauded the tendency exhibited of late toward a distinct upward movement in public standards of conduct.

"While there may be a slight halting in business until the different schedules of the tariff are settled," said Mr. Malott, "it is a good time to take stock and avoid overexpansion." He believes, however, that the new president will not approve any legislation which will seriously involve the business interests of the country.

The speaker commented upon the encouraging interest exhibited by President Wilson and congress in such an amendment of our banking system as shall make business interests safe. "No plan appeals to me more strongly," said he, "than that of the issuance of currency based on 50 per cent of the value of clearing house loan certificates. With the loans passed upon by the clearing house committee, with the system of clearing house examinations, whereby no bank can be a member which does not habitually carry enough liquid assets and cash to settle its daily balances in gold or its equivalent, with every bank in the association a joint endorser of the paper, we would have a currency system that would meet every requirement, and that would sustain public confidence. This method would eliminate the central bank or the centralization of capital, and would be needed only under the unusual conditions which periodically come under our present system." Mr. Malott said we must readjust our inelastic currency system so that it will respond to the needs of commerce.

The speaker emphasized the importance of co-operation with the clearing house and advocated the adoption of the numerical system inaugurated by the clearing house section of the A. B. A. He paid a high compliment to the A. I. B. and the work which it is undertaking, believing that its endeavor to equip young men the more efficiently to discharge the duties and obligations incumbent upon them as bankers it is serving a laudable purpose. He also pointed out the importance of improved agriculture, vocational education and good roads and told of the interest manifested in these subjects by the bankers of Kansas.

"The affairs of the Kansas Bankers Association were never more prosperous and the outlook never more promising," he said in closing.

Bank Commissioner Addresses Delegates

Charles M. Sawyer, the new bank commissioner for Kansas, delivered a highly interesting and instructive address, in which he told of some of the opportunities presented to the bankers.

Mr. Sawyer was president of the Kansas bankers fourteen years ago, at which time there were only eighty members. The membership now numbers 1,127.

W. W. BOWMAN
Topeka
Secretary Kansas Bankers Association

Mr. Sawyer advocated the formation of county organizations among the bankers and taking the lead in any movement for the advancement of the state or the people along material or moral lines. He believes these organizations could arouse and stimulate interest in the adoption of improved and more scientific methods of farming and agriculture which would result in large savings to the community and that waste thereby could be eliminated in all lines of business and upon the farms. He said a great saving can be effected in the cost of transportation of farm products from the farm to the railroad by improving the condition of the roads, the necessity for which seems to be becoming apparent to the people of Kansas.

The commissioner strongly advocated the need of improved agriculture, which, he said, is but in its infancy in this country.

Mr. Sawyer spoke of the authority vested in the banking board to refuse a charter for a new bank, when it is believed the community in which it is sought to locate already is adequately supplied with banking facilities. He stated that rejection of an application is not necessarily a reflection upon the character or financial standing of the applicants, but the result of an endeavor to serve the best interests of the public.

He expressed the hope that there will be enacted a currency law based on scientific principles which will enable the bankers to meet the requirements and which will be fair and just to both the bankers and the public.

Moser Talks

Byron W. Moser, president of the A. I. B., told of the advantages offered by the A. I. B. and said that nowadays official positions are going begging because of the lack of men qualified to fill them.

H. L. Nicolet of the Kansas City Star delivered a very interesting talk in which he told of changing ideas in regard to currency. He said that, while the national banking system of the United States is not the best in the world, it is not the worst. Mr. Nicolet believes that a system of co-operation which will strengthen and enlarge the exchange facilities of the country, protect the business man in the use of these facilities, protect the banks from one another and make the whole mechanism of exchange and credits move more smoothly, more efficiently and more economically will greatly increase the value of our national banking system.

Charles M. Harger, president of the Citizens' League of Kansas, at Abilene, talked on "The Sentiment Trust," telling of the tremendous influence sentiment has in shaping out daily affairs. He related the part played by sentiment in the panic of 1907 and what it has done to emphasize the necessity for currency reform. He told the bankers that they should endeavor to create only good, healthful sentiment.

COMMERCIAL NATIONAL, MUSKOGEE, OKLA.

CORRECTIONS

We are glad to correct the following items appearing in our issues of April 26th and May 3d: In the former number the following item appeared: "The Texas banking department has authorized the Hibernia Bank and Trust Company of Hibernia to do a general trust business, with a capital stock of $100,000." B. L. Gill, commissioner of the department of insurance and banking for Texas, writes in to say that this concern has not been granted authority to do business by his department. An application has been made to the secretary of state for a permit to do business as the Hibernia Bank and Trust Company under some kind of a special charter, at Jacksonville, Texas, with a capital stock of $100,000.

In our issue of May 3d, in giving a list of cities in which Illinois group meetings will be held, we credited Galva, the meeting place of Group One with but two banks. Cashier H. A. Smith of L. M. Yocum & Co., writes in to say:

"We have a live town of 3,000 inhabitants with four good strong banks—Galva First National Bank, Galva State Bank, Farmers Co-Operative State Bank, L. M. Yocum & Co., bankers.

The combined deposits of the four banks are $1,600,000 which we think is very good for a town of the size.

A good old-fashioned country dinner at the Country Club will be one of the features of the entertainment of Group One.

ISSUES ATTRACTIVE SOUVENIR PROGRAM

In connection with the Oklahoma Bankers Association convention held in Muskogee May 8th and 9th, the Burroughs Adding Machine Company had printed a very attractive souvenir program outlining the events scheduled for each day. Complimentary copies of the program were mailed in advance to the members of the association.

One of the most interesting novelty events scheduled for the first day's program was the adding machine contest to be held at the Hotel Severs. The contest was for possession of the Burroughs Championship Cup, and several contestants were entered, including the present holder of the cup, Mr. Clark of McAlester, who has won first place and possession of the cup in the last two contests.

In addition to the cup put up by the Burroughs Company, F. T. Miller district manager of the company, offered $50 in cash prizes—$25 to go to the winner, $15 as second prize and $10 as third prize.

The Burroughs Company held a striking exhibit during the convention at the Hotel Severs, and showed all the latest machines for bank work—the new adding-subtracting machines for bank work, the adding-subtracting machine on statement work and ledger posting, the transit machine, visible model machines, etc., and the latest Burroughs feature, the ejector carriage.

The exhibit was in charge of District Manager Miller assisted by members of the Burroughs southwestern district.

The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

MAY 17, 1913 | Entered as Second-Class Matter January 15, 1903, at the Post Office at Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879 | 10 CENTS A COPY

BANKING IN CHICAGO PROFITABLE

Earnings of Chicago banks thus far in 1913 probably have been larger than in any previous corresponding period. While deposits have been somewhat less than they were last year, interest rates have been much higher, averaging probably 5½ per cent on all the local loans made, and there has been a demand for every dollar available.

Thus far there have been very few losses to eat into profits and the indications are that there will be few later on. The banks have preached conservatism steadily and strongly and most of the borrowers have taken heed.

PRESIDENT PHILLIPS TO ATTEND GROUP MEETINGS

President John D. Phillips of the Illinois Bankers Association has announced his intention of attending all of the group meetings to be held in the state this year. President Phillips was in Springfield Tuesday, at which time he stated that he proposed to urge particularly on all members of the groups that energetic efforts be made to secure the membership of all non-member banks in the state and also recommend to the group meetings that they endorse the agricultural and good roads legislation pending at Springfield. President Phillips will receive a hearty welcome at all of the meetings and much good should be accomplished as a result of his enthusiastic campaign in behalf of the measures the state association is supporting.

IOWA "BLUE SKY" LAW APPROVED

Word comes from Des Moines that Governor Clark has approved the Thomas "Blue Sky" law. While the new law does not satisfy the governor in every way, he believes that there is need for such legislation, and if in the next two years it is found that some of the provisions are at fault, an opportunity will be presented to amend and correct the defects. The bill has been attacked on the grounds that it would interfere with legitimate business and that it was unconstitutional.

REPORTS FAVORABLE CROP CONDITIONS

L. D. Skinner, senior assistant cashier of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, has returned from Kansas where he attended the state bankers convention held at Hutchinson. He reports a splendid attendance at the gathering. Mr. Skinner visited several of the important business and financial centers of the Sunflower State and reports crop conditions as most favorable.

JOHN J. MITCHELL RETURNS

John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust and Savings, returned to Chicago from California on Thursday of this week. Mr. Mitchell does not anticipate any serious trouble and said that he believes business throughout the country is on a conservative basis. Crop conditions are good and he believes that better times are in store for the railroads.

H. R. Eldridge of Houston, Texas, and A. E. Edwards of Pasadena, California, each president during the past year of his state bankers association, presided this week over conventions of those organizations which were notable, not only on account of the large number of bankers in attendance, but also because of the interest and enthusiasm manifested in the proceedings.

The Texas and California associations always have been numbered among the progressive organizations of the country. That this reputation is fully justified was the unaminous opinion of those who listened to the reports of things which have been accomplished during the past year.

TO PERMIT CHANGE IN SECURITIES

Secretary McAdoo has announced that he has authorized national banks to withdraw U. S. 2 per cent bonds which have been placed as security for government deposits and substitute Philippine, Porto Rican, Hawaiian or District of Columbia bonds, providing the U. S. 2's so withdrawn shall be used as security for additional circulation by banks which have not as yet taken out the full amount of circulation authorized by law.

BANKERS ENTERTAINED IN JOLIET

A delegation of about a hundred South Side bankers of Chicago, and from down the state, gathered in Joliet last Saturday afternoon at the invitation of President George Woodruff and the other officials of the First National of that city. The Chicago contingent came down in a special car over the Rock Island, being met at Joliet by President Woodruff and his official associates. They were escorted to the First National where they were afforded an opportunity of witnessing the operations of the bank. Special attention was given the workings of the transit department. There also was a discussion of the analysis, advertising and co-operative buying departments. After the bank was closed, special demonstrations were made and the workings of the entire banking system explained, President Woodruff being the chief spokesman and being assisted by Vice-Presidents F. W. Woodruff and A. H. Wagner, Cashier H. O. Williams and Assistant Cashiers A. J. Stoos and H. R. Drew.

After the demonstrations the guests were escorted to the country club in special cars and were treated to an appetizing dinner. The royal manner in which they were entertained brought out many expressions of appreciation on the part of the visitors.

RESIGNS AS HEAD OF PORTLAND BANK

G. K. Wentworth of Chicago has resigned as president of the Lumbermans National of Portland, Ore., one of the largest banks in that city. Mr. Wentworth says that the bank should have a resident executive instead of one living in a distant city. Mr. Wentworth is a member of the Chicago firm of J. and G. K. Wentworth, 206 South La Salle Street.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THERE are many little sidelights to passing a new constitution which never occur to the novitiate. It may be thought quite an easy thing, at Boston for instance, to amend the new constitution as presented by Chairman James.

BEING a committee report that document can be adopted by a bare majority. Amendments to it will require a two-thirds vote. These features should not be forgotten.

READERS of THE CHICAGO BANKER will do well to study the Briarcliff report made by Col. James (he was brevetted "general" by one speaker) for it will be far easier to get in any necessary change by letter to Easton, Pa., than by raising a big wind at the Hub.

CHAIRMAN JAMES has never lost a fair fight and he engages in no other kind. He's a daisy!

THE Boston banks have raised (already) $80,200 toward their entertainment fund so there will be lots of fun besides the talkfest over the new constitution.

AND, ladies, as you love your husbands don't let them go down to Boston alone. Think of that huge entertainment fund.

MAY 20th and 21st the Missouri bankers will assemble in large numbers at Saint Joseph. Col. R. T. Forbes is begging his old Chicago friends to "c'mon over."

FIRST National, Boston, covers the bureau of engraving in its last booklet.

AMERICAN NATIONAL St. Paul, celebrated its 10th anniversary May 5th. It has gone from "opening" to two and a half millions deposits in that time.

THE capital is being doubled to $400,000 with surplus of $130,000 and it is to be a factor in Northwest banking hereafter.

LITTLE wonder live-wire Harry A. Humason feels like using a little more printers' ink.

THERE will be a ball game, Des Moines-Denver, at the Iowa convention. It's a clearing house treat.

OREGON state convention will not meet as intended at Roseburg but at Corvallis. The agricultural college will feed and house the delegates on the American plan. There will be no talk about the high-cost-of-living. Rates will be wholesale.

THE new hotel at Roseburg will not be completed as expected. Corvallis has plenty of rooms. Secretary J. L. Hartman says, like Forbes, "c'mon over."

THIS department has several of the very kindest "invites" to the Iowa convention. The Savery will be headquarters and Secy. P. V. Hall predicts a big attendance. Dates are Des Moines, May 27th and 28th.

THE Guardian Savings and Trust Company of Cleveland has decided to increase its capital from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000, and its surplus from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000.

SHAREHOLDERS will be offered $750,000 in new stock at $200 a share. The balance will be held in the treasury and sold from time to time to new interests. The deposits of the bank are about $24,000,000.

THE new tariff bill may not reduce the price of sugar to the consumer but it has had a very realistic effect on the market for sugar shares.

RAILWAY freight traffic officials are on edge as a result of the United States department of agriculture reports with reference to this year's big crops. They fear their lines have not made provision for sufficient rolling stock. As a result car builders have been advised to hold themselves in readiness for new orders.

NO Western banker ever has the financial blues in a big crop year. Down East they look to Europe for their inspiration; hence the continuous dejected look in the byways of lower N'York.

E. J. BOWMAN of Anaconda with his little pocket camera makes a specialty of still-life pictures. While in New York last week he practiced on the stock market.

IT was just about as quiet on 'change as it was in and around Old Trinity.

W. D. VINCENT of Spokane, after a week at Briarcliff, thinks the mid-year meetings could be abandoned if the pre-convention sessions of the Council sat for one whole day, or as often as necessary during convention week.

PRESIDENT WILSON has made it known that democratic policy is just as much opposed to letting the bankers frame the new currency bill as it is against letting the beneficiaries of the tariff set its provisions by making their own schedules.

HE maintains that the republican party followed that plan but that the democratic congress will pursue the people-first policy of the Baltimore platform.

HE is like Col. James about inviting criticism and suggestions, and like the Colonel he takes them under advisement only.

IT is the democratic idea that if the banks are formed into combinations there will be sufficient competition among the individual members of each combination to guarantee fair treatment to the public.

HIGH protectionists always have contended that if the tariff wall were made high enough to exclude all foreign competition, the protected industries inside the wall would compete so fiercely that consumers would get goods at the lowest possible prices.

THIS theory has been exploded in connection with high protection. Yet the democratic leaders are preparing a banking scheme in which within fifteen separate districts there shall be organized fifteen combinations of banks, each combination virtually excluded from competition with any other combination, and are trying to justify this upon the theory that with all the banks combined in any one district there will still be such banking competition that low interest rates and free credit to all deserving business men will result.

UNDER the shadows of the high tariff wall manufacturers "trusted" their interests and fixed prices. Bankers are not less wise.

JOHN McHUGH on his return to Sioux City told a friend that his Briarcliff visit was the best "banker's trip" he ever took. It was fun, enjoyment and profitable experiences all the way.

GEORGE WOODRUFF rushed home from the Briarcliff meeting to play the host to Commercial, Savings and Bond Departments

one hundred bankers who came to visit Joliet last Saturday.

HIS bank, the First National, collects and clears for 58 Chicago banks not in the clearing house. Great head!

THE papers said he "explained the banking business" and "the transit department to his visitors." What he did was to show his customers how he can do the work for them so quickly and at less cost than any one else can do it.

FINE business!

ONE big Chicago bank carries a daily balance of from seventy-five to ninety thousand with the Woodruff bank.

THE visitors came disguised as the "South Side Bankers Club" of Chicago chiefly, but they came from all over the state as individuals. There was a special car down; a banquet at the Country Club.

CHICAGOANS caught the 8:23 Rock Island for the return trip and they voted George Woodruff and his short-cut clearing and transit methods as strictly up-to-date and O. K.

WARREN W. SMITH of the Citizens Trust, Oliver F. Smith of South Chicago, and Jordan B. Cottle of Hyde Park are the officers of the South Side Bankers Club. The list of those who attended is too long for this department.

THE IRVING NATIONAL reception to visiting bankers in New York on Thursday caught nearly all the Briarcliff crowd. Most of them were staying over for the trust company's banquet and the Irving is just like "home folks" to the westerner when in the big metropolis.

COMRADE GALLIEN, who came in with an absorbed bank, fits in beautifully to his new and gorgeous surroundings.

HE knows everybody, too, and can be courteous and attentive without patronizing, the sin of most easterners when doing for a man from the wild and woolly.

ROLLIN P. GRANT is a past master at "mixing," having sat at the feet for years of that Great High Priest of the Art, L. E. Pierson. It couldn't be done better.

THERE was, in the directors' room for the visitors, every conceivable thing to eat, smoke or drink. One testy visitor didn't like candy, wouldn't drink and couldn't smoke. He said, "Where's the gum?" and lo, it appeared. Can you beat the Irving crowd?

TRIPS up the fifty-five story elevator were "by card only" and the bank had all the cards for that day, so the visitors had a monopoly and the benefit of a phenomenally clear day.

LET us put you next to a comer. He's young Mr. Thorne of the Bankers Trust. If they only give him a chance he'll take the tricks.

There are too many in New York banks who think they're doing it grand if they condescend to glance up from their dictation long enough to nod and waste a sickly smile.

AND that's all one man with a $700,000 balance got from a "first v. p." Said the man, "I'll soon fix that," and he did.

A FRIEND of Jos. T. Talbert's was heard to lament about the failing health of that popular banker. He had been in and "found Joe looking in the dumps."

OF course he didn't know that Mr. Talbert had just been "touched" for two hundred and fifty by a long forgotten (but not forgetting) acquaintance. Such is life.

THE Stillman policy, which is supreme in the National City, is said to be "opposed to much going about by its bank officers, telling other bankers how to run their banks and what to think on public matters."

OTHERWISE they doubtless would be heard oftener, for there are Talberts who can talk and others who think they can. Remember how Joseph got in bad with the dailies last spring.

HE was to address the Detroit Bankers Club and filed copies of his paper for release on the set date. Death of an official of the club stopped the speaking but not the printing presses and out came the address all over when it never had been delivered.

JUST to square it Mr. Talbert is coming to Detroit to talk one of the last days of the month. Press copies will have a string to them this time.

STATE NATIONAL, Little Rock, is issuing a souvenir ash or pin tray showing its new building, the new union station and the splendid state capitol building in silver relief on a gold base. Hundreds were given out at the state convention.

IF you go to a mid-year meeting of the council in a big, seven passenger car and ride alone or stand it about idle all week, don't be worried when you try to insert a personal plank in the new constitution, if all the fellows are looking out the window or otherwise giving you the busy signal. It's natural.

KNOW what a "malingerer" is? It's he (or she) who feigns illness as an excuse for not coming down to work. Chicago banks have found it pays to retain a physician who is dispatched immediately when the malingerer telephones that he "will not be down today."

IT had grown epidemic in one bank and in another there was an average of ten cab bills a week for taking ill young lady employees home. The doctor was the cure.

GEORGE HARNEY'S talk was the hit of the trust companies' dinner.

SELDOM has there been a season in the book trade with so many large and important volumes before the public both in fiction and non-fiction. According to various authorities who make it their business to strike averages and build tables, the public is turning away from novels and light reading in favor of serious works of biography, political economy and science.

THE recent ruling of the secretary of the treasury requires depository banks to pay two per cent interest after June 1, 1913, on government deposits, active as well as inactive. To offset this the secretary will permit the withdrawal of thirty per cent of government or territorial bonds now on deposit and the substitution therefor of acceptable state, county and municipal bonds at seventy-five per cent of their market value, not to exceed par.

HARRIS TRUST & SAVINGS, Chicago, has prepared a table, showing the approximate profit to depositories in taking advantage of the new ruling, based on $100,000 deposit and five per cent money rate, and will send copies on request.

SECRETARY ANDREW SMITH is plugging hard for the Indiana agricultural conference at Indianapolis, June 3d and 4th.

IN the way of speakers Sir Andrew does not name the starters, but describes them as the "master minds in the United States" in their line. Exert your lightning rod at once.

CHAIRMAN ASCHER R. COX worked hard to make the May 14th group meeting at Alton a huge success. D. A. Wycoff also was on the job.

OYES, forgot to say that George Woodruff does co-operative buying for the constituent banks which send their clearing-collections his way.

PRESIDENT WIRT WRIGHT of the National Stock Yards (Ill.) Bank is sending out "Beefsteak and the Banker," a neatly printed booklet giving reasons for the live stock shortage.

MR. WRIGHT believes there is a general interest in the widespread campaign for improved agricultural methods and earnestly solicits "co-operation in promoting live stock raising as an indispensable adjunct to any system proposed for restoring soil fertility and increasing acreage yield."

THE pamphlet deals with facts and figures in an intelligent and forcible way and is world-wide in its scope. It is a good "prompt book" for those who intend to speak or write on the high cost of living, etc.

IF you believe a circular now going the rounds all you have to do is to consent to become an owner of a big Canadian farm and you will get "$3,000 per year added to your income."

THE circular writer does all the rest, so if you are willing it need not be long until you are paying income tax.

THE I. B. A. bulletin is the latest entrant to association list of publications. The entire issue is devoted to "Blue Sky" bills and comment upon their restrictions.

NO counter checks, to which the forger and crook can help himself, are in sight in New York banks. Perhaps it is a clearing-house matter and easily could be put in force in any city where the abuse exists.

AT that trust companies' banquet did you see anyone get the glad hand any oftener than Charles L. Farrell, whose bank over in Newark "earns 24 and pays 16?"

WHISPER has it that the president's pay is based on earnings and that it is something fine. "Charley," as the boys call him affectionately, has a good thing and certainly is pushing it along.

NO one who progresses through the banking district in New York is hailed so often or so personally as Col. J. J. Sullivan of Cleveland, presiding genius over both a trust company and a national bank.

THEY all know him and if he slips up on a name once in a while he has the blarney to conceal or condone it. You simply can't beat him. He invites everyone to the Cleveland convention.

THE approaching anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg brings to mind also the battle of Chickamauga which disputes with Gettysburg the claim of being the most important battle of the Civil War, and about which a wordy contention was waged for so many years. Not until the appearance of "The Truth About Chickamauga," by the late Colonel Archibald Gracie, was the matter finally settled.

PRESIDENT E. J. BOWMAN of the Daly Bank and Trust Co., at Anaconda, stopped off at Cleveland on his way to Briarcliff to have an order for a 1914 Winton Six.

BOWMAN says no car can eat up the mountain grades of Montana like a Winton Six and that's good advice from a man who knows.

JUDGE UHLIR has decreed that husbands must take their own wives when they go to dances. Yes, and there would be fewer auto-fatalities if the "own wife" decision applied to joy rides.

NOW that the annual council banquet has been abolished there is talk of calling off the Council Club banquet also, after Boston.

IT was founded at Atlantic City convention to give ex-members some consolation for not being able to sit at the council dinner. What do you think about it?

DIDN'T look like private bank supervision weather at Springfield this week.

NEITHER was anyone wearing mourning for the gin-fizzle which threatens to end the uplift career of the ambitious young statesman from Cook.

EVERYONE agrees that the careless Chicago hotel episode reveals the real difference which may exist between a mere abstraction and true inwardness.

E. J. CURTIN, Iowa's vigorous member of the A. B. A. committee on agriculture, was in Chicago on Wednesday on his way back from Briarcliff.

"PUT me down for Boston," said he. "Iowa will fill a car—perhaps two—and we expect to have a good time.

"DO you know," said Mr. Curtin, in speaking with a friend, "that man Grant at the Irving made a hit with me? Never met him before.

"WENT in with Henry Carpenter who keeps an account there. Henry's father started it 'way back.

"HENRY went with me over to the bank where I keep an account. I wanted to draw some money. Not a soul looked up or spoke first. Said I'd have to be identified.

"'TELL with 'em,' said Henry; let's go back and get it from Grant,' and that's just what we did."

ON Wednesday President Grant of the Irving National went through Chicago en route to attend the convention of the California Bankers Association, which will convene shortly in San Diego.

THE Mechanics American National of St. Louis, recently purchased 16 new Burroughs adding machines of the latest types for use in their country books and transit departments. This may be taken as indicating a tendency on the part of large city banks to get some of their profit out of savings in operation.

S. W. STRAUS, the big Chicago bond banker told a story at the club the other day, leaving out the banker's name, a name which the reader, if he is a "regular," easily can supply. Said Mr. Straus:

'I RECOLLECT the case of a Chicago bank, noted for its vigorous and aggressive methods of obtaining business. One of the officials of this bank had been attempting for some time to obtain the account of a wealthy business man and had brought him to the stage where he seemed interested. A short time after, this businss man came in, offered excellent collateral and asked for a loan.

'THE bank official was wise in his generation. 'You are welcome to the loan,' said he, 'but I don't want your collateral. Your name on this paper is good enough security for us, and if you brought in every bond and share of stock you owned as collateral, we wouldn't want them, because we don't need them.' He made a customer and friend for life through the simple process of making the loan on character rather than security."

G. N. FRATT of Racine isn't going on a vacation this year. He will get his outing watching the new bank building grow from day to day.

WISCONSIN bankers are taking short lake trips at every opportunity so that they may be on their sea legs when Commodore Bartlett casts the hawser for the convention sail June 21st.

John Clausen on Foreign Trade and Credits

San Francisco banker emphasizes to members of Texas Association the necessity of developing our foreign trade. Believes banking system must be reformed so as to assist in bringing this about

John Clausen, manager of the foreign department of the Crocker National of San Francisco, spoke before the Texas bankers this week on the importance of building up our trade with foreign nations. He called attention to the part being played by foreign banking institutions in financing this trade, pointing out the heavy remuneration being paid them for the performance of this service.

Mr. Clausen said in part:

"The casual observer of foreign trade conditions can not fail to be impressed by the inevitable progress of economic developments in our relations with foreign countries. In view of the greatness and steady growth of our foreign trade, it is, therefore, desirable to determine the countries which buy our goods freely, not alone for the purpose of finding out where our goods are sold, but also to discover the countries enjoying the largest measure of prosperity. Practically every country—with the possible exception of England (with its colonies) and Germany—provides for itself the greater portion of its necessities, and in times of depression is able to get along without importing any very large quantity of food and raw material. When, therefore, a country is buying goods from another land freely, it is evident that its people are enjoying great prosperity. The condition of prosperity in a country is reflected by the magnitude of its imports. However, where large imports into a 'debtor' country reveal its ability to borrow freely, large exports to neighboring countries show the growth of its permanent wealth and power.

"The really wonderful expansion in our exports, both to foreign countries and to our own possessions, impresses upon us the necessity of becoming more familiar with the proper handling and financing of our shipments abroad. The universal clamor of our merchants for banking facilities in foreign countries—more particularly in Central and South America—is well founded, and banks throughout the country should take early heed to establish suitable relations in order adequately to care for the requirements of their clients. Trade is ever the forerunner of finance and it is essential that the American merchant should take the initiative by preparing a systematic and vigorous campaign for the sale of his goods in foreign countries; and if the proper spirit of co-operation is exercised, he need have no fear of any handicap, as capital will spontaneously follow with ample facilities for transportation and banking. These facilities will go hand in hand with trade, and they will grow together.

"What we must therefore first look for, is the development of our foreign trade, and to do that properly we must acquaint ourselves with the customs and languages of foreign countries, and also modify the present home business-winning methods to suit the sentiments and prejudices of our foreign friends. Knowledge of foreign currencies and exchanges is indispensable if an intelligent competition is to be sustained abroad. We must know what we can sell, and under what conditions we can negotiate our goods, as it becomes necessary to meet the competition of all other countries; and to do that successfully we must study and meet the requirements of our buyers or retire from the field of the world's commercial struggle.

"When inquiring as to prosperity of a country, people never fail to glance at its trade returns and to note any increase or decrease in its imports or exports. If a country has discovered new natural resources in its soil, or has found means of making better use of the productive powers already known to it, then it exports; and, accordingly, the whole of its foreign trade increases, which, undoubtedly, is a sign of prosperity.

"Our government encourages and facilitates such studies, as is demonstrated by the establishment, in the year 1903, of the department of commerce and labor, with its organized efforts to develop new markets for our products, either locally or in foreign lands. The bureau of manufacturers has since been created, and in August of last year the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce was organized—to foster, promote and develop the various manufacturing industries in the United States and to create a market for its products at home and abroad. It is apparent that but few merchants and bankers realize the valuable service that can be rendered them by the federal government in developing a foreign trade.

Financing Our Foreign Trade

"The building of the Panama Canal involves the expenditure of over four hundred million dollars, and when completed, will open a great new trade route, which we are prone to believe will immediately place our country in a position to command the greatest share of the Pacific trade. In this, however, we must not be illusionized, as unless we speedily reform our banking system so that we may be in a position adequately to finance the Panama Canal trade, a good part of the capital invested for the construction of the great canal will be wasted, and our competing neighbors in Europe will derive the benefit of our undertaking. We must, therefore, endeavor to get the commerce and finances of our country intimately interwoven and related, and when this is successfully accomplished, we have the most powerful combination in the world, namely,—the control of trade and credit.

"Our banks are now forbidden by law to accept trade or finance bills—which makes our banking system unique and unlike that of any other country—and while I am not prepared to admit that an American organization with the specific object of financing commercial operations with foreign countries is vitally essential for the development of our trade, it seems to me that it is desirable for our banking institutions to inform themselves fully on the subject, and then provide such changes in our present system as will secure and hold the trade firmly in our hands. In other words, I believe the only practical way is to do the financing through a center in our country—say New York—precisely as at present it is done in London and other European points.

"Foreign banks, more particularly those in London, practically now finance our foreign trade, and for that service the banks in this country are paying them a fancy remuneration.

Foreign Department

"It is only within recent years that the foreign department has become a recognized institution in the United States, and the education of the American banker along these lines, the need of specialization and knowledge of foreign banking and exchange methods, can not be too strongly urged. It should be the object of every progressive bank wisely to train young aspirants for such positions. Education in that line is tending to have a broader meaning, and we are realizing more every day that to be a successful foreign exchange banker a person must know something besides mere technical banking.

"The present is often called the 'Age of Specialization,' and it is so in a very large sense, but specialization has its limits, and those limits are the intimate connections to-day between every line of human activity in the civilized world.

"There are a great many bankers who, while perfectly willing to reap the benefits derived through a foreign department, hesitate to install one, claiming that they do not understand the business, and are therefore unable efficiently to control its manager and his varied operations. These are very poor excuses, and unless the particular banker offering such an argument begins to make a special study of foreign credit and exchange conditions as they exist in financial centers, he soon will be obliged to deal in unknown quantities—which condition he can not well control, with his own "Special efforts should therefore be made by banks to develop foreign business, and in seasonable time the establishment of desirable connections abroad likewise should be observed.

"To handle foreign exchange operations properly it is necessary to keep fully posted on the principal rates as they are quoted in the leading financial centers, from which a party is figured, enabling a quick determination of handling any proposed transaction to the best advantage. For instance, an inquiry for exchange on Germany may disclose the fact that the given rate is not competitive, and it may therefore become necessary to operate against —say francs in Paris, or sterling in London— from which will be seen the advantage of receiving the forementioned information as it offers all the possibilities of successfully operating in the international exchange market.

"It will be found in practice that finance bills are generally drawn very freely when exchange is high, and, conversely, an absence of these bills will be noticed whenever exchange is low. Foreign capital will travel to the United States more readily when exchange rates are quoted high in Europe, and will, in turn, be withdrawn from here when exchange rates are low abroad.

"There are two main factors which generally affect foreign exchanges; one is the relative indebtedness of the respective countries. If this country, for example, is in debt to the other, then the price of bills on that country naturally tends to rise in the market, because the merchants compete with one another in their endeavor to buy bills to remit; while in the other country's market the price of bills on this country brings about a fall in price, owing to the lack of demand. The other disturbing factor is the value or price of money in the respective countries, regulated by the rate of discount ruling in each.

"To finance the steady growth of our foreign trade successfully necessitates a very active business in the settlement of balances of trade indebtedness. These balances constantly are varying, not alone in amounts, but also in direction. A certain country may, for instance, at times be in debt to this country, and again, shortly afterwards, the position may be reversed and we will be owing them.

REMODELING WORK BEGUN

Space in the Farwell Trust building, Chicago, is being remodeled in preparation for its occupancy by the LaSalle Street Trust and Savings, which now is located in the Rookery.

HARRIS OFFERING

The Harris Trust and Savings Bank and its eastern associates have just purchased $4,500,000 Midland Valley Railroad Company First Mortgage Thirty-Year 5 per cent gold bonds, due April 1, 1943, and are bringing them out in this market at 92 and interest, at which price they yield over 5½ per cent. The railroad company operates a total of 373 miles of standard gauge road, extending from Wichita, Kan., to Fort Smith and Hope, Ark.

The bonds offered represent less than 38 per cent of the cash invested in the property, there being an equity of $7,500,000 in excess of the bonds.

CHOSEN PRESIDENT LOUISVILLE TRUST

John Stites, vice-president of the Louisville Trust, and one of the best known financiers in the South, has been advanced to the presidency of that institution. He was unanimously recommended by a special committee appointed to select a successor to the late Hector V. Loving. For the present the Louisville Trust will have only one vice-president, John B. Pirtle, who has long served efficiently in that capacity.

TOPEKA BANK TO OPEN

Announcement has been made that the Farmers National of Topeka, Kans., will be ready to open its doors within a few days in the building formerly occupied by the Prudential Bank, at Seventh Street and Kansas Avenue. It will have $100,000 capital and a surplus of $20,000. J. D. Mossman, national bank examiner, has checked over the bank's affairs and authorized it to begin business. J. W. Thurston, for more than forty years connected with the Bank of Topeka, will be president of the new institution; Armine Fraser will be vice-president and H. G. West, cashier. The directorate represents some of the most substantial business men of the Kansas capital. Speed F. Hughes, who for twenty years has been connected with the Bank of Topeka as teller, has been chosen cashier of that institution in Mr. Thurston's place. R. K. Knowles, second assistant cashier of the Bank of Topeka, will take Mr. Hughes' former position.

PRESENT BANKING CONDITIONS SOUND

George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National, said in an interview this week that "our reserves are now in satisfactory condition, and I feel the banks will work through the coming autumn without serious disturbance, provided the present policy of prudence in borrowing, and in lending, is continued. Money may grow a little easier, but will, I think, be fairly close throughout the remainder of the year. It is possible that certain disturbing factors, to the extent that they have contributed to conservatism is business, may prove of general benefit.

"Money has been too easy. By this I mean promotions have been facilitated to an undue extent, resulting in an output of securities on which the banks are not warranted in extending much credit. We are, however, trying to help along this situation, though undeniably it is a time for the banks to be less liberal in their acceptance of security for loans.

"Rates will remain relatively high. Banks must have their day in the general business reckoning, and the present is a season for adjustment of credits on conservative lines."

Albert J. Eidsmoe, formerly cashier of the First National at Crandon, Wis., indicted on a charge of embezzling $36,000, pleaded guilty before Judge Geiger on Tuesday. He was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth.

INDIANA'S BIG AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE

The State Conference on Agriculture and Country Life in Indiana, called for June 3d and 4th in Indianapolis, is to be the "curtain raiser" for a busy year on the part of the Indiana Bankers Association, which is promoting the agricultural meeting. The association has about 1000 members, including both banks and trust companies, and the subject of better farming will during the year in numerous ways be brought before these financial institutions. All of them are giving cordial support to the general movement, to the end of increasing farm output and rural prosperity in every county of the Hoosier land.

SECURITY TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK
Los Angeles, California

Three sectional, or group, meetings are to be held in Indiana by the members of the bankers' association in different districts of the state before the June conference. Group Number Seven meets at New Albany on May 21st and will include the bankers of thirteen counties—Brown, Monroe, Lawrence, Orange, Dubois, Perry, Crawford, English, Harrison, Floyd, Washington, Jackson, Scott and Clark. The chairman of the group is W. W. Cave of the French Lick State, and W. F. Huthsteiner of the Tell City National is secretary. The speakers of this meeting will be Prof. G. I. Christie of Purdue University, Col. J. L. McCulloch, Marion, president, and Andrew Smith, Indianapolis, secretary of the bankers' state organization. At this meeting the state bankers' slogan of "Back to the Farm" will be sounded by all of the speakers, especially as it relates to the June conference.

These speakers will be heard also at the meeting of Group Number Six, which will be held at Columbus May 20th, the meeting to include the bankers of fifteen counties—Shelby, Bartholomew, Henry, Rush, Decatur, Jennings, Jefferson, Wayne, Fayette, Ripley, Switzerland, Ohio, Dearborn, Franklin, and Union.

Later in May Group Number Eight will meet at Evansville and it is expected that the same speakers will be heard who will appear at the other two. Group Number Eight includes the counties of Sullivan, Knox, Gibson, Posey Vanderburg, Warrick, Spencer, Pike, Martin, Davies, Greene and Owen.

During the summer the five groups in central and northern Indiana will hold their meetings and they will hear much of the subject of better farming and how the bankers can help in developing the farm resources of the state.

The Indiana Bankers Association will hold its annual convention in Indianapolis on September 23d and 24th. Hundreds of bankers from all parts of the state attend these meetings. While the program has not been made up, Secretary Smith says a number of eminent speakers will be heard and the work of the bankers with the farmers will be one of the dominating subjects.

In a number of counties banks began early this spring to give their help to the farmers by promoting corn growing contests, which will end with corn shows as soon as the harvest is ripe. These contests are following the plans provided by Purdue University, the State Agricultural School, and a large number of farm boys have their crops in the soil and are cultivating them along the scientific lines suggested by Purdue.

FORT WORTH NATIONAL BANK
Fort Worth, Texas

Some of the banks and trust companies which are promoting these corn contests are The Peoples Loan and Trust, Rushville; First National, Monrovia; the Citizens Bank, Greenfield; the Farmers and Traders, LaFayette; Stone City, Bedford; Farmers Loan and Trust and the Citizens National, Tipton; Citizens National, Martinsville.

In other counties some of the banks are giving their attention to raising public funds with which to employ county farming agents, who are to give help to the farmers in all lines of agriculture and who are to help expand country life in many ways. One of these banks is the Marion National, at Marion.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Paving bonds of St. Paul up to $200,000 were sold to the First National, Northwestern Trust and C. O. Kalman & Co., at par, 6 per cent, payable in one year, on condition by the buyers that if the bonds are renewed they will be allowed to have them at practically the same price and that $25,000 be set aside as a sinking fund to assure interest. The Wells & Dickey Company bid $15 premium for $25,000 playgrounds bonds and $25,000 waterworks bonds, which will be awarded. The alternative bid was $50,000 waterworks bonds. For $150,000 water bonds and $25,000 playgrounds bonds in Minnesota Loan and Trust Co., in conjunction with Leach & Co., of Chicago, bid par for the whole issue, but asked that $1,700 be allowed for attorney fees and blank bonds. This brought the bid to less than par, but about ninety-nine, and was rejected as illegal.

Although the sale of tax certificates is not until June 15th more than $100,000 has been promised former buyers, who are given preference. The certificates drew 4 per cent. Last year's sale was $1,909,300 or 80 per cent of the levy which they anticipate, and this year it will be $2,293,500, due to larger appropriations.

Offers for Minneapolis $577,000 bonds failed to materialize. The issues offered included: $25,000 park bonds, $300,000 high school bonds, $100,000 waterworks bonds, $125,000 hospital bonds, $27,500 workhouse bonds and $5,286.50 special certificates of indebtedness.

Except for the $5,286.50 item, the securities run thirty years, bear 4 per cent interest, and the advertisements that have been running in the financial papers stated that under the law no offer below 95 could be entertained. Option of ten, twenty or thirty-year terms may be offered and the issue readvertised. H. B. Wood, Wells & Dickey Company, said: "My suggestion is that as the legislature limits our interest to 4 per cent and sets 95 as the minimum sale price that city issue some shorter term bonds and sell them at 95. A ten-year bond at 95 would yield 4⅝, while a 30-year bond at 95 yields only about 4.3

"I had occasion to look up the subject recently and find that in 1923 the city has only $95,000 in bonds maturing and in 1924 none at all. Some 10 or 11-year bonds to be sold now at 95 would bring in some bidders I am sure."

North Dakota Banks in Good Condition

The first comparative statement of North Dakota banks and trust companies that has been made since the new examiner took over the duties of his office has just been issued. It shows there has been an increase of loans and discounts of $1,410,422.52 from February 4th to April 4th. During the two months there also has been an increase in the amount due from other banks of $1,642,374.43. The cash on hand has decreased $231,477.33. There has been an increase of $57,000 in capital stock paid and the surplus fund has increased $49,502.56. Deposits subject to check show an increase of $1,731,430.28, while demand certificates of deposit increased $98,995.64, with time certificates of deposit $1,087,597.12 larger. Savings deposits show an increase of $61,983.36.

Praises Business Men

Commenting on J.P. Morgan's reported offer to assist the government in an emergency, E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, said: "It will be found that the business man is at heart as patriotic and fundamentally a great deal more so than supposed. He is worth the faith that is reposed in him. When one considers that 95 per cent of the business of the nation is done on credit it is a pretty good indication that honesty is the policy of the nation.

"Dishonest dealings in business are comparatively few. The honest business man is in the great majority—a much larger majority than obtains in any other nation in the world. The American is the most honest man, I have found on the face of the globe, and the most patriotic."

Trust Companies Subject to Tax

Trust companies are found to be subject to gross earnings tax of 5 per cent under an act of the last legislature of Minnesota, but it will affect in Minneapolis, for instance, only the Minneapolis Trust Company. The law does not apply to the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, it is said, because it does a banking business. The trust company officials have contended it is subject to taxation only under the new moneys and credits law, about $3,000 annual tax. The city assessor figures the company should be assessed like a bank on half the capital stock, plus surplus and undivided profits, or $17,000 a year.

Northwest Notes

Eric A. Thoberg has been elected deputy state bank examiner in North Dakota to succeed Ed Schulenberg. Mr. Thoberg has served from clerk to cashier for seven years in bank work. Mr. Thoberg was to have been deputy state treasurer.

Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National, returned from the East, said that he never had seen such wonderful roads, and that the tariff is having the effect of making some of the manufacturers feel pessimistic, especially in New England.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The crop outlook is causing the bankers of the state considerable anxiety just now as rain is sorely needed (May 15th) in order to insure a good oats crop and a good corn crop as well. The rain all came in one period in late March and early April and since that time the opposite extreme has prevailed with the result that central and southern Illinois has since experienced a general drought. Pastures are short and rain is needed to keep them up to the high standard of the early spring. The general crop outlook for corn, wheat and oats is reasonably good but more general rains will be needed to insure large crops. Business is generally good and there seems to be activity in practically every line of retail business.

Auto Bandits Loot Bank

Four bandits coming in an automobile blew the safe of the Farmers' Savings of North Henderson, near Galesburg, and escaped with about $8,000 in gold and currency. Several hundred dollars in silver were left scattered about the floor of the bank which the robbers ignored because of its bulk and weight.

Park Named for Banker

Springfield bankers and citizens generally are taking great pleasure in the renaming of Mildred Park in that city as Bunn Park, in honor of John W. Bunn, president of the Marine Bank of Springfield. Mr. Bunn is secretary of the park board and is one of the active and public-spirited citizens of the capital city of Illinois. The name was changed in honor of the great services of Mr. Bunn to the city of Springfield and at the request of many citizens.

War on Loan Sharks

Alleging that there are loan companies in Elgin and Aurora realizing thirty and in some instances forty per cent on their loans annually, Attorneys F. W. and R. Waite Joslyn are prepairing an amendment to the law governing such companies.

One of the amendments is to do away with signing of powers of attorney to the loan sharks by their victims giving them power to sign chattel mortgages and sell property without notice anywhere in the county. It provides that all acknowledgments must be made in townships where the property is and where the people reside.

F. W. Joslyn states that he has recently had charge of the disentangling of several working people in Elgin from the clutches of local firms wherein the conditions rival the worst state of affairs in large cities.

Farmers Organize for Good Roads

An Illinois farmers good roads association was formed at Springfield Wednesday in connection with the "good roads round-up." The club will unite with the Illinois Highway Improvement Association and other organizations in order to help "pull Illinois out of the mud." Good roads education and legislation will both be urged. George A. Anthony of Kewanee, was named president; Phil S. Haner of Taylorville, vice-president; John S. Culp of Bethalto, secretary and A. N. Lovejoy of Roscoe, treasurer.

A few years ago such an organization by the farmers of the state never would have been effected and a movement rather to fight good roads probably would have resulted. It is a marked indication that the farmers of the state really desire better roads when some representative farmers and tax-payers of the state meet and organize a plan for better highways in this rich and prosperous commonwealth.

"Springfield Thrift Club"

Sangamon Loan and Trust Company of Springfield has planned a most elaborate campaign for promoting the habits of thrift and economy among the people of that city and a special "Springfield Thrift Club" has been organized to foster this movement. "Prompted by a deep sense of its obligation to the community the Sangamon Loan and Trust Company of Springfield has appropriated a considerable sum of money to be dedicated to the promotion of thrift in this city." Every person is invited to join and the bank has planned some elaborate publicity in order to bring the campaign home to the average citizen. An especial appeal is made to the employers of the city to urge their clerks and other employees to save money. The bank asks of the employers, "Compare the working efficiency of a thriftless organization with that of a force of money savers." Officers of the bank are requesting that employers ask them to present the matter before groups of clerks, and there is every indication that the movement will accomplish great good. It is another broad-minded piece of hard work upon the part of the officers of a bank, and while thre bank naturally will share in the profits of the work, yet the project is one which the banker as a

Illinois Notes

J. H. Zearing, teller in the First National of Champaign, will spend the summer traveling in Europe.

A five-million dollar mortgage given by the Southern Illinois Light and Power Company of Hillsboro to the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago has been filed for record. The instrument covers sixty pages of printed matter and will cover all of the company's property in Madison, Bond, Macoupin, Christian, St. Clair and Montgomery counties.

A total of seven million dollars' worth of the bonds of the Southern Traction System of Illinois have been sold, which will insure an electric road to be built this summer between Belleville and East St. Louis.

National Bank Examiner W. H. White, who resides in Paxton, recently has been considering two positions of personal value in western Illinois, but it is not likely that he will leave the government service now.

The Fifty Thousand Club of Rock Island business men has offered prizes of $100 each in the six districts about the city to secure the maintenance of good roads.

State Auditor Brady has appointed Charles W. Coleman of Chicago as bank examiner to succeed John H. Coyne, also of Chicago, and O. N. Wilson as index clerk to succeed Charles Easterly of Carbondale.

Vermilion county banks probably will close Thursday afternoons this summer. Secretary John W. McKeon of the Vermilion County Bankers Federation reports that practically all of the banks in the county are interested in the movement.

The Elgin City Banking Company of Elgin is another Illinois bank which is doing some excellent missionary work along the lines of thrift. Stating that the schools do not teach the idea of thrift as they should and that parents too often neglect the same part of the child's training it is necessary that the banks take the initiative "to start the children in this valuable habit." Co-operation between parents and the bank is especially desired.

H. S. Capron, cashier of the First National of Champaign, plans to drive East in his car this summer. He will be accompanied by his family. Mrs. Capron is a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College and the Caprons plan to attend the commencement season there.

The fixtures of the State Bank of Woodstock which were used in their old location have been purchased by the city of Woodstock and will be used as a part of the fixtures of the city offices.

William Ridgely, president of the Ridgely National of Springfield, has received word of the death of a cousin, Walter S. Campbell, of Detroit, Mich. The late Mr. Campbell was a former resident of Springfield.

Another new piece of railroad work in Illinois will be the Macoupin County Extension Railway, which has been licensed to incorporate by Secretary of State Woods. The idea of the promoters will be to build a railroad in Macoupin and Madison counties to connect with other lines and to build spurs to coal mines and other industries. The incorporators are Marvin Hughitt of Chicago, William A. Gardner and Richard H. Aiston of Evanston, H. R. McCollough of Lake Forest, and John D. Caldwell of Oak Park. These men also will constitute the first board of directors.

CORRECTION

We have received a letter from State Auditor Brady calling attention to misconstructions often put upon announcements from that office. He informs us that there is a difference between a permit to organize and a permit to commence business. It has been held that the auditor is without power to withhold the issuance of a permit to organize except in the matter of name chosen, while considerable discretionary power is vested in the department in relation to issuing the charter to commence business.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

President Oliver C. Fuller of the Wisconsin Trust Company voiced the almost unanimous opposition of American bankers to the income tax section of the Underwood tariff bill, upon his return from the conference of the executive council of the A. B. A. at Briarcliff, New York, this week.

"The Underwood bill provision, to collect taxes on the income source, is a sad mistake," said Mr. Fuller. "The banker is certain to feel its burden. Whenever he pays a customer interest on a coupon or an employee his salary, 1 per cent will have to be held up until the customer or employee makes affidavit that his income is not more than $4,000 a year. And in other financial transactions it would be the same. Bankers are not opposing the income tax bill but they are opposed to the manner of collection."

Clever Swindle Perpetrated

William Kaumheimer, prominent Milwaukee attorney, was swindled of $2,700 this week by one of the smoothest confidence games that has come to the attention of Milwaukee bankers or police in recent years. The swindler, operating under the name of A. D. Smith, appeared last week before President J. W. P. Lombard of the National Exchange Bank, saying he wished the services of a competent attorney. The attorney to whom he was referred was too busy to take the case and referred Smith in turn to Mr. Kaumheimer. The "case," in brief, was the settlement of an estate valued at $6,000 between Smith and his wife, according to a court decree. Several days later Smith produced a letter signed in the name of a Cleveland bank official, whom Smith represented as his wife's brother, offering to settle for $3,000. The offer was accepted and a second letter came Monday saying that a draft on a New York bank had been sent to the National Exchange Bank here. Mr. Kaumheimer consented to cash the draft, taking out $200 as his fee. Soon after it was learned that the draft was a forgery. "Smith" has disappeared.

Chapter Boys Have Hard Time Finding Quarters

That indulgence in chop suey is incompatible with good banking is the verdict of the Milwaukee branch of the American Institute of Banking, the verdict of course holding as a rule and not in individual cases. The chapter has been looking for suitable downtown headquarters. They were tendered a portion of the new Shanghai building on Second Street, erected by Charlie Toy, Milwaukee's millionaire Chinese restauranteur and importer. Charlie conducts an elaborate chop suey establishment on the second floor. The bank clerks did not relish its proximity to the august confines of their retreat. Nor did they appear to relish the savory Chinese dishes which Charlie offered to furnish at any time via the dumb waiter, as an added inducement. For they rejected the offer. The Milwaukee Press Club is now considering the rooms, again exposing the hopeless proletarian proclivities of newspaper men.

Wisconsin Notes

Alexander Wall, credit clerk of the First National, celebrated his thirty-fourth birthday and the twelfth anniversary of his entering the bank this week.

The Second Ward Savings is doing what it can to make Milwaukee the "bright spot" described in the city's slogan. This is accomplished with thirteen inverted arc lights about the new triangular building at Third, Cedar, and West Water streets. The new type of light has twice the brilliancy of the ordinary arc and was awarded a prize of $5,000 in a recent contest for street lighting designs held in Baltimore. They are the first of the kind installed in Milwaukee although in use in several eastern cities.

Lyman G. Bournique, vice-president of the Wisconsin National, will go to Chicago June 14th to participate in the celebration by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Bournique, Chicago, of the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding.

Albert J. Eidsmoe was sentenced this week to a term of five years in Leavenworth prison after pleading guilty to embezzlement from the First National of Crandon before the Milwaukee branch of the United States court. John E. Hart, Elroy, and George W. Price, Marinette, indicted at the same time, will be tried next week. The amount involved is about $36,000.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis bank clearings during the past week have been large, while the demand for money has been quite fair, rates holding firm at 5½ to 6 per cent on call and time loans. Commercial paper was discounted by brokers at 5½ to 6 per cent.

Investment Bankers Meet in St. Louis

The first session of an important gathering of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America convened yesterday (Friday) morning in the board rooms of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, in St. Louis. This session was the first of a two days' meeting in which the activities of the association were reviewed. A large majority of the membership of the board of governors, who number thirty-two and represent investment banking interests in all parts of the country, were present for the meeting. Reports of the standing committees of the association were considered and a complete report of the legislative proceedings to date was presented by the counsel of the association. The question of "Blue Sky" legislation, in which the association has played a prominent part in a country-wide campaign for sane laws, also came before the board of governors.

Speaking of the association's attitude toward laws of the "Blue Sky" type, George B. Caldwell, president of the association, said in a recent interview: "I believe it is exceedingly fortunate for all well meaning business that the investment bankers possess an organization to meet the recent remarkable growth of "Blue Sky" legislation throughout the country. Not only has the Investment Bankers Association led in a campaign for sane laws of this kind in the United States but its co-operation has been sought for and lent outside our borders in the interest of wise legislation. As an association we have in no wise disproved any law wisely drawn to suppress the sale of wildcat securities and losses yearly borne by honest but ignorant investors. We have been on the defensive only when these laws or proposed laws unnecessarily and unjustly hamper legitimate business. Our membership of 400 is composed of the largest and oldest firms dealing in bonds, so we are largely a bond dealers' organization. In other words, our membership distributes over seventy-five per cent of the secured form of credit. Our greatest difficulty is and always has been to create a distinction between bond dealers and those who do business purely as brokers or stock dealers. "Blue Sky" legislation has clearly shown what real investment bankers are and should be as compared with the so-called "investment banker" who sells cheap stocks referred to as "Blue Sky."

The proposed income tax law and the subject of a uniform municipal bond law entered further into the deliberations of the board of governors in yesterday's meeting. An interesting bone of contention which is before the leaders of the association in their present conference is the question of the time and place of the next convention. A number of cities are bidding for this big annual affair, which will be the second one of its kind, and it is expected that a choice will grow out of the St. Louis board meeting. Headed by William R. Compton, vice-president of the Investment Bankers Association, and assisted by J. Herndon Smith and Harold Kauffman, members of the board of governors, a committee of local St. Louis members have prepared elaborate entertainment for the visiting bankers.

Banks to Pay Interest

The national banks of St. Louis which have qualified as depositories for United States government funds, have informed the secretary of the treasury that they would pay the interest and keep the deposits. Some of the bankers had figured the charging of 2 per cent interest would wipe out completely the profit a bank could earn from the deposit. The deposits will begin to draw interest June 1st.

Bank to Increase Capital

The stockholders of the South Side Bank, at a special meeting last week, voted to increase the capital stock from $200,000 to $500,000. The increased capital is intended to enlarge the bank's capacity so as to take care of the banking of the entire section in which it is located. The plan pursued in the increase was to declare a stock dividend of $200,000, doubling the holdings of each stockholder, and then to sell an additional $100,000 of stock at $200 per share, having a par value of $100. The issue of the stock dividend reduced the surplus of the bank from $300,000 to $100,000 and the sale of the stock increased it again to $200,000. The dividend rate, which has been 12 per cent, in the future will be reduced to 6 per cent. The new shares all were taken by the present stockholders on allotment in proportion to their present holdings.

Bankers whose customers have business at the St. Louis National Yards can realize full value of such business only through an account with this bank.

Wants Cheaper Money

In an address last Thursday at the annual banquet of the Trust Company Section, American Bankers Association, in New York, Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile National, St. Louis, made an earnest appeal for an immediate revision of the monetary laws of the country which, he said, are responsible for the high cost of living. Mr. Wade pointed out that our manufacturers are obliged to borrow money at 6 per cent, while those abroad are able to get an unlimited supply at 3½ per cent. This handicap, Mr. Wade showed, places our manufacturers at a 40 per cent disadvantage to start with. He also pleaded for a cessation of attacks on railroads and urged that they be permitted to increase rates to meet present conditions. He advocated the loaning of money by national banks on farms and real estate to promote the industrial resources of the country, and asked that trust companies, private and state banks, complying with all requirements, be placed on an equal footing with national banks.

Attend Kansas Convention

Among the St. Louis bankers who attended the convention of the Kansas Bankers Association last week were E. C. Stuart of the Third National; I. L. Jones of the Mercantile National; Phil C. Kidd of the National Bank of Commerce; Louis W. Fricke of the Mississippi Valley Trust, and Geo. R. Baker of the National Bank of Commerce.

State Bank Deposits Grow

Deposits in the state banks and trust companies of Missouri increased $12,555,424.97 between November 26, 1912, and March 26, 1913, according to figures compiled by the state bank commissioner. Of this increase St. Louis banks contributed $1,398,813.68. The total deposits in state banks and trust companies of St. Louis on March 26, 1913, were $143,727,645.71, of which amount $76,593,854.96 were individual deposits; $41,734,348.76 were time deposits; $927,572.08 were demand deposits and the remaining $24,471,869.91 constituted the savings deposits. The total amount on deposit in the 1272 state banks and trust companies in Missouri on March 26th was $329,550,583.50. Twelve new state banks and trust companies were organized between November 26th and March 26th. The capital stock of banks increased $667,245; cash and exchange decreased $120,553.38; surplus and undivided

A REMARKABLE INTERVIEW WITH A REMARKABLE MAN

Two remarkable young men came together at the Briarcliff meeting. One is a character reader and a writer of mark; the other was an open book to him. The first was Edward Marshall of the New York Times and the latter was Joseph Chapman, out of the great northwest. Mr. Marshall printed in the Sunday Times (May 11th) a full page story showing how "Bankers find Profit in Making Better Farmers." It is well written, full of information and ought to be in the hand of every banker in America. It is in the form of a modern interview, but this space is too crowded for more than Mr. Marshall's splendid character sketch of Mr. Chapman, which is too good to be lost. Writes Mr. Marshall:

A remarkable banker's remarkable views are here set forth. Joseph Chapman of the Northwestern National Bank, Minneapolis, an ex-president of the Minnesota State Bankers Association and chairman of the committee on agricultural development and education of the Association of State Bankers, made some astonishing things clear to me the other day at Briarcliff Lodge.

That there should be a committee on agricultural development and education in the national body of state bankers' associations is of itself surprising to the layman; that the president of the body should consider agricultural development and education a subject of greater importance to bankers than the study of the stock and bond situation is amazing.

Joseph Chapman sees that finance means far more than money; that money draws its value only from the things it represents; and that, first, last and all the time the greatest value which it represents is urged from the soil by farmers.

He may be regarded as the prophet of a movement which is spreading very rapidly throughout the West, and even getting some attention in New York, slowest and most insular of cities in its fundamentals despite its Great White Way and its enormous population. This movement is an organized effort on the part of financiers to improve the real security on which, in the last analysis, the greater number of their securities is based, by helping the tillers of the soil create efficiently and plentifully the products of the soil.

In other words, it has come to pass that the banker of today is no mere money lender, interest compounder, dealer in securities, or exclusively financial expert. He is, and must be, a producer with those others in the Nation who create. Mr. Chapman is but one of those who see this; but he sees it with alacrity and prophecy of vision most unusual, and what he sees is worthy of the thought of every serious man.

It interests me to note, as I write these paragraphs introductory of my interview with him, that during our long talk he scarcely mentioned money and did not once make use of any of the words "stocks," "bonds," "cash," "discounts," "clearing house" and "Wall Street."

The things which Mr. Marshall "sets forth" are true and all western bankers (and many in the East) know and appreciate it. Little wonder his name has been coupled with official preferment in A. B. A. circles. Many think he would set a new and higher standard upon association ethics and accomplishments. Let every man who concerns himself with the bettering of country life conditions and the broadening of the bankers' views and influences read Mr. Marshall's article. It sure will do him good.

SECRET OF ATTACKS ON CONGRESS

Certain widely circulated papers are loud and persistent in their abuse of congress and and the present administration for not building more battleships. They profess their "fear," not quietly, as one who is afraid, but brazenly, as one who wishes to create a war scare. Battleship builders spend millions in creating war scares to promote wildly profitable business just as other shipbuilders spend millions lobbying for ship subsidies.

The recent exposures in Germany of the extent to which their great manufacturers of armaments and war material have worked to scare up war scares in order to get trade and promote army and navy increase have shocked Europe and the world; and, whatever the errors in the details of the impeachment may prove to be, the conservative newspapers of Germany unite with the radical journals in recognizing the shameful character of the simple and undeniable facts. Nothing shown in the matter is worse than the share of the military party in the government itself in booming the armaments business. But all this should occasion no great surprise. A pamphlet on "Syndicates for War" shows how in England also "The God of War is now a man of business, with vested interests." It will be remembered how in Russia, when after the war with Japan the building of a monstrous new navy was proposed, Admiral Rozhdestvensky said that, although there was no excuse for the extravagant plans, the building was "sure to take place because so many powerful interests would profit by it." The promotion of war scares in France in the interest of the aeroplane business is a matter of knowledge; and the mournful exposures are not all foreign. At home and abroad the mixture and dominance of commercial motives in the awful game appear ever more appallingly; and the burdened peoples pay the bills, not only in portentous taxes, but in incessant and paralyzing unrest and fear. Is not this a time when, without exaggeration, but also without weak and unworthy palliation on press and all makers of public opinion should bring home to the people as never before the waste and wickedness of the mad rivalry in armaments in which the great nations are engaged today? It is hoped that in this service the accompanying papers may be of use.

Press agents and editors who can be "influenced" are public enemies. The public should be slow to swallow war scare stories when the object solely is to induce a larger appropriation. Real threats of war are not so lightly dealt with. Beware of the subsidized, armor-plate press as a public enemy more real than over touted Japan.

GOOD ROADS MEN GATHER AT SPRINGFIELD

The annual convention of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association held in the Leland Hotel, Springfield, Tuesday, was well attended by bankers and representatives of commercial, farming and automobile clubs throughout the state. The officers of the organization made a report of the year's work which has been done in collecting endorsements of the platform of the association adopted at its convention held in Peoria last September, showing that 150 associations in the state have considered and endorsed the legislative program of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association. The pending legislation known as the Tice bill was unanimously endorsed by the convention.

Col. Edward A. Smith, president of the First National of Morrison, and George A. Anthony, president of the Kewanee State Savings Bank and Trust Company, were bankers who served on the nominating committee, while John B. Lee, cashier of the Saline Trust and Savings of Harrisburg, acted as chairman of the auditing committee. All of the officers of the association were re-elected, including Messers. Edens, Bradt, Woodruff, Lee and Sudduth, who are identified with the banking interests of the state, and in addition Harvey G. Riggs, vice-president and cashier of the Mercantile Trust and Savings of Quincy, and J. W. Simonson, president of the Port Byron State Bank of Port Byron, were added to the official roster as vice-president and director respectively.

After the adjournment of the convention the delegates called in a body on Governor Edward F. Dunne. President Edens introduced the delegates to the governor, telling him of the convention's action in endorsing the Tice good roads bill and also their appreciation of the governor's action in recommending good roads legislation in his first message addressed to the members of the legislature. The governor in his response stated that he feels a great interest in the good roads situation and believes that all interests of the state would be benefited by the passage of a bill that would not impose any undue hardships on the land-owning class and particularly if the legislation permitted the employment of short time prisoners of the state in actual road work

THE NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL BANK
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

THE monthly survey of Northwestern conditions published by this bank receives a generous and growing measure of public approval. Its purpose is the review of the current financial, industrial and agricultural situations in the bank's extensive territory, and the material for the summary is drawn from its own direct experience and from that of its many influential connections. Anyone desiring his name upon the mailing list of this trade letter may have it placed thereupon without charge.

under some suitable system. Afterwards the delegates called on their respective members of the legislature and secured pledges for support of the Tice bill. Chairman E. S. Bradt of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association and a vice-president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, together with other members of the delegation, volunteered to remain in Springfield and to continue their efforts in behalf of this legislation.

SECURITY NATIONAL, PASADENA

The Security Nation of Pasadena, California, began its career on May 6th, last, and has already accumulated deposits of $500,000 and assets of $700,000. The institution is averging one hundred new accounts per month. In April the deposits were $500,00, as compared with $200,000 in June of last year.

This bank has one of the largest and best-equipped banking rooms in Pasadena. It is in a fireproof building and is magnificently lighted by large windows running the entire length of the room. The interior woodwork and the furniture are of full mahogany and bronze, and plate glass is extensively and tastefully used.

It was late in November, 1911, when Ernest H. May, president of The First National of Pasadena, sold his interests in that institution and in the Pasadena Savings and Trust Company, and resigned the presidency of both banks.

Not long afterwards Mr. May, with the financial co-operation of some wealthy business men, organized the new National Bank, of which he became president. Mr. May's long and successful banking experience, wide acquaintance, and high reputation have gone far toward giving The Security National the success it has achieved.

The other officers of the bank are: Vice-President, Harrison I. Drummond; cashier, N. E. Macbeth; assistant cashier, Ernest C. May.

CALIFORNIA TIMBER SALE

In closing the estate of the late David Ward of Pontiac, Mich., there will be sold, at a great sacrifice, during next November, the only remaining large group of available redwood timber in California.

This is a rare investment oportunity in valuable timber lands, and by addressing Chas. Willis Ward, P. O. Lock Box 196, Eureka, Cal., or John H. Patterson, Esq., Pontiac, Mich., full particulars, maps and terms of sale can be secured.

The First State of Tamarack, Minn., is to open about July 1st. The capital will be $10,000. John Brenner of Minneapolis will direct the bank. For years he has been superintendent of the Anchor line of grain elevators.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Wichita was chosen as the place of meeting for the 1914 convention of the Kansas Bankers Association which was in session in Hutchinson last week. The election of officers scheduled for the last day of the convention resulted as follows: President, W. J. Bailey, vice-president of the Exchange National of Atchison and former governor of Kansas; vice-president, E. E. Mullaney, president of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Hill City; secretary, W. W. Bowman, Topeka; treasurer, Fred Shiras, cashier of the Peoples National, Ottawa. The following are new group vice-presidents: Group One, J. C. Laming, cashier of the State Bank of Tonganoxie; Group Two, H. M. Phillips, cashier of the Dover State Bank, Dover; Group Three, F. E. Bradley, president of the Peoples Home Savings, Chanute; Group Four, H. S. Buzic, vice-president of the Sylvan State Bank, Sylvan Grove; Group Five, F. W. Denton, cashier of the Citizens State, Haven; Group Six, L. W. Fullerton, cashier of the Citizens State, Medicine Lodge.

During the bankers' convention in Hutchinson another state convention of interest to bankers was being held in the same city. It was the Kansas State League of Building and Loan Associations, representing 38 local associations, having in the aggregate more than ten million dollars of assets. This league is affiliated with the Kansas Bankers Association as a section, but its sessions are separate and its organization distinct. Discussions in the league meeting were limited to technical matters appertaining to building and loan associations. The election of officers of the league resulted as follows: President, O. B. Dodge of Salina; vice-president, C. S. Hartough of Leavenworth; secretary-treasurer, W. H. Eastman of Topeka; chairman of the executive committee, A. J. Applegate of Wichita. Delegates to the United States League, Messrs. Ryan of Emporia; Hartough of Leavenworth and Applegate of Wichita.

Oklahoma Bankers Elect

Agricultural topics took precedence over all other subjects of discussion at the convention of the Oklahoma Bankers Association in Muskogee, which ended with a night session May 9th. More than 600 Oklahoma bankers were in attendance and the meeting was one of the most profitable ever held in the new state. Following is a list of the officers elected for the coming year: President, W. S. Guthrie, vice-president of the Farmers National, Oklahoma City; first vice-president, H. M. Spaulding, president of the Peoples Bank, North Enid; second vice-president, R. P. Brewer, cashier of the First National, McAlester; secretary, W. B. Harrison, Enid; treasurer, S. Jackson, cashier of the Cheyenne State, Cheyenne. The executive committee consists of the heads of the five groups in the state as follows: Group one, T. H. Dwyer, Chickasha, and Bert Hudson, Randlett; Group two, L. D. Anderson, Medford, and F. H. Loosen, Okareche; Group three, G. E. Dowis, Blackwell, and E. K. Hines, Norman; Group four, O. L. Churchill, Vinita, and H. A. McCauley; Group five, A. U. Thomas, McAlester, and P. C. Dings, Ardmore. Resolutions were passed against branch banking in the United States. Andrew J. Frame, of Waukesha, Wis., an authority on monetary questions, was one of the principal speakers. He addressed the bankers on "Facts vs. Fallacies in Banking Reform." Byron W. Moser, president of the American Institute of Banking, of St. Louis, T. J. Hartman of Tulsa, J. F. Darby of Muskogee, C. O. Williams of Tulsa and others were on the programme. Although the selection of the place of meeting in 1914 rests entirely with the executive committee, it seemed to be the sentiment of the convention that Oklahoma City would be honored. Most of the eastern bankers who had been in attendance at the convention of the Kansas Bankers Association at Hutchinson earlier in the week went to Muskogee. One of the important new committees created by the Muskogee convention was a committee of three members on agriculture. Appointments of three men to serve one, two and three years will be announced by President Guthrie soon.

Would Have State Treasurer Control Banking Department

What may develop into an unpleasant political row in Kansas involving the banking interests of the state was the suggestion made recently by Earl Akers, state treasurer, that the banking department should be abolished and its functions absorbed by the treasurer's office. Mr. Akers says the state can be saved $10,000 a year in the management of the banking department by putting it under the state treasurer. He carefully explains that this suggestion in no way reflects upon the present bank commissioner, Charles Sawyer, but is made in the interests of economy and because the state treasurer is the financial officer of the administration and should properly have control of bank supervision. No sooner was this proposition announced than many of the bankers of Kansas were up in arms. Kansas has had some splendid commissioners, notably Mr. Dolley, author of the "Blue Sky" law and the deposit guaranty plan, and Mr. Sawyer the present incumbent. Both men have been popular and the banks have confidence in them. There is little concealment of the fact that politics is behind the Akers suggestion, which in all probability will be vigorously opposed by the banking interests of the state.

Banks Offer Prizes

Ninety-five banks in nearly every county in Oklahoma have offered cash premiums of $10 each in the boys' and girls' corn, kafir corn and cotton contests which the Oklahoma State Fair will conduct next fall. The contests will be under the supervision of the farmers' co-operative demonstration work of the United States department of agriculture. In addition to the corn and cotton contests there will be canning contests for the girls, and a boys' pig contest. The banks have taken a keen interest in this work and a fund has been raised among them to publish a book giving details and rules governing the various contests and urging as many boys and girls to take part in them as possible. This book also gives the names of all the banks that have subscribed to the enterprise.

Would Increase Interest in Dairying

President George F. Sawyer, of the Nebraska Bankers Association, in an address before group four of that association at McCook last week, made the formal offer to advance enough money to any farmer of character and responsibility in the state to build a silo on his farm. Mr. Sawyer is anxious to develop the dairy interests of Nebraska and he is going about over the state meeting with bankers, business men and farmers with a view to increasing interest in the dairy industry. Mr. Sawyer also has told all the other bankers of Nebraska that if they would loan money to build silos and found that they could not conveniently carry these loans that he would take the notes off their hands. This liberal attitude is considered among the bankers of Nebraska as the most practical move yet made for bringing the bankers and farmers together in a common interest and it is said to be Mr. Sawyer's ambition to see a silo on every farm in his state.

Central West Notes

Henry W. Richardson, former president of the defunct American Union Trust Company of Kansas City, was arrested last week in Louisville, Ky., by postoffice inspectors, charged with the misuse of the mails. The charge grows out of the organization of the American Union Trust Company in 1910 which later absorbed the All Night and Day Bank of Kansas City. The failure of this consolidated institution caused a great deal of trouble to several of its officers.

Paul E. Havens, president of the Leavenworth National and one of the oldest and wealthiest citizens of Leavenworth, died last week at Atlantic City. He was 74 years old and had been associated with many of the foremost industries of Kansas since pioneer days. He organized the Leavenworth National forty years ago and was president of it until he died. One of his daughters is the wife of Congressman Dan Anthony of Kansas.

Six bankers of the "bankers colony" of the federal prison at Leavenworth have presented petitions for parole. These petitioners are M. P. Emerich and Paul Gall of Indianapolis; Jesse Serihowski and Jacob W. Hill of Pittsburgh, Pa., W. J. Hogue of San Antonio, Tex., and Charles L. Hyde of Pierre, S. D.

A movement has been started to reorganize the old State Bank of Logan, Kansas, with a capital of $30,000.

J. S. Corley, a banker of Wichita, Kan., and who has been identified at various times with banks in Dallas, Tex., Oklahoma City, Trenton, Mo., and Waco, Tex., has been elected general manager of the Southern States Cotton Corporation of Dallas, a ten-million-dollar concern.

Because of delay in the completion of its new building, the opening of the new Citizens State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas has been postponed until May 20th.

Victor R. Lange, bookkeeper for the German-American National of St. Joseph, Mo., has been arrested by federal authorities on the charge of misappropriating $4,800 of the bank's funds. Lange is 40 years old and has been with the bank for eight years.

The Commerce Club of St. Joseph, Mo., spent practically all of the current week on an elaborate trade-getting excursion in northern Missouri and southwestern Iowa. The special train carrying the club members was the most perfectly appointed ever devoted to that purpose in the West. This was the first of several trade excursions planned by the club for the present year. Among the travelers were John Broaddus, of the German-American National; S. C. Cook, of the first National; R. T. Forbes, of the First National; G. A. Nelson, of the Barnes National and Milton Tootle, Jr., of the Tootle-Lemon National.

Another development in the failure of the Hazleton bank came to light when indictments were returned against Adam Kiefer, president, and William Smith, cashier, in the courts of Black Hawk county. They are charged with accepting deposits in the Kiefer Savings at Hazleton while knowing the institution to be insolvent. Both were held to the grand jury under bonds of $1,000.

The meeting of Group Nine at Corydon May 7th was one of the best ever held by the bankers in that section of the state. The program at 1:30 P. M. was opened by a male quartette. G. W. Steele, president of the First National then gave the address of welcome. A. D. Simmons, president of Simmons & Co. of Osceola, responded. There was more music and then the Hon. James H. Jamison of Osceola spoke on "The Trusts." Secretary Percy W. Hall of the I. B. A. was next on the program. Mr. Hall gave one of his characteristic speeches and closed with a fervent invitation that every one there attend the state convention. At 4:30 there was on automobile ride over the city. At 6:45 the banquet was held at the Lacy Hotel and at 8:30 H. M. Harwood gave his illustrated lecture on "What Iowa Has to Advertise" at the Auditorium. This lecture has made a hit wherever heard and has been especially popular at bank meetings. The attendance at the session was good and the Corydon bankers were hospitable hosts.

Group Five met at Council Bluffs the day following the session of Group Nine. The business meeting was held at the public library at 10 in the morning, followed by lunch at the Grand Hotel. Hon. Thomas Maloney, mayor of Council Bluffs, gave the address of welcome and Philo D. Clark of Red Oak gave the response. Rev. Alfred G. A. Buxton of Council Bluffs was toastmaster at the after-luncheon program. The program was as follows: "Liabilities," L. T. Genung, attorney, Glenwood; "Capital," Rev. J. T. Jones, pastor First Congregational Church, Council Bluffs; "Losses," E. R. Gurney, vice-president First National, Fremont, Neb.; "Overdrafts," A. F. Galloway, cashier Clarinda Trust and Savings; "Assets," D. E. Brainard, assistant cashier First National, Woodbine. This program was well given and was thoroughly enjoyed by the bankers present. The attendance was large and the meeting voted most successful. Although not on the program, Dan Norman, assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago, gave a most interesting address upon increasing population and shortage of food supplies.

Group Two met at Emmetsburg May 14th. Description next week.

county had this amount coming to it was made by tax ferrets some years ago. They claimed that the concern had in its possession some $15,000,000 in debenture bonds. These bonds were issued on first mortgage notes on Iowa real estate, sold to parties outside of Iowa and the mortgages were held by C. A. Dudley, J. G. Rounds and G. B. Hippee, trustees under the Iowa laws. The tax ferrets contended that the bonds were subject to taxation in Iowa, but Judge Brennan agreed with the company that the mortgages were being held merely as security for the bonds and that the trustees were in no manner agents for the bondholders. They were not held for investment purposes and hence were not taxable under the Iowa laws. The case went to the supreme court once upon a point involved, but was returned some months ago for decision as to the merits of the case.

Council Bluffs Bank Wins Case

Commercial National at Council Bluffs won an interesting tax case last week when Judge Arthur ordered the refund of some $9,085 in taxes which that institution had paid into the county treasury. Later the law was declared unconstitutional but the county maintained that taxes once paid in could not again be secured. The attorney-general took a hand in the case and fought the bank, but Judge Arthur issued an order ordering the taxes refunded for the years 1907-1910 inclusive. It is probable the case will be appealed.

Secretary Percy W. Hall of the I. B. A. issued a special warning last week against a chap named Jim Dostal, alias Jim Jilek, who cleaned up $1,000 in Cedar Rapids, working mainly among the Bohemians. One check for $350 signed by a Cedar Rapids concern was stopped before the fellow got out of that city. Later he was arrested at Chicago.

Bogus Check Artists Captured

Mrs. Susan Langford, who, with her husband was caught at Oklahoma City while trying to pass a bogus check for $2,200 on the Iowa National of Des Moines, was taken to St. Paul while her husband was taken to Cooperstown, N. Y., and sent up for five years. It appears, however, that Mrs. Langford confessed that her real name is Edith M. Mitchell. She assured the judge at St. Paul that she married her husband in Chicago supposing him to be an honest man. Later she found that she was being used by him to further his own criminal acts. Her penitence was so sincere that when the court had sentenced her to the Stillwater prison, the judge ordered her released on probation on the promise that she would remain within the jurisdiction of the court and lead an honest life. Langford and his wife traveled all over the East, leaving behind them a trail of bogus checks drawn on the Iowa National of Des Moines. Their apprehension was one of the best things accomplished by Secretary Hall of the I. B. A.

mportant Des Moines Changes

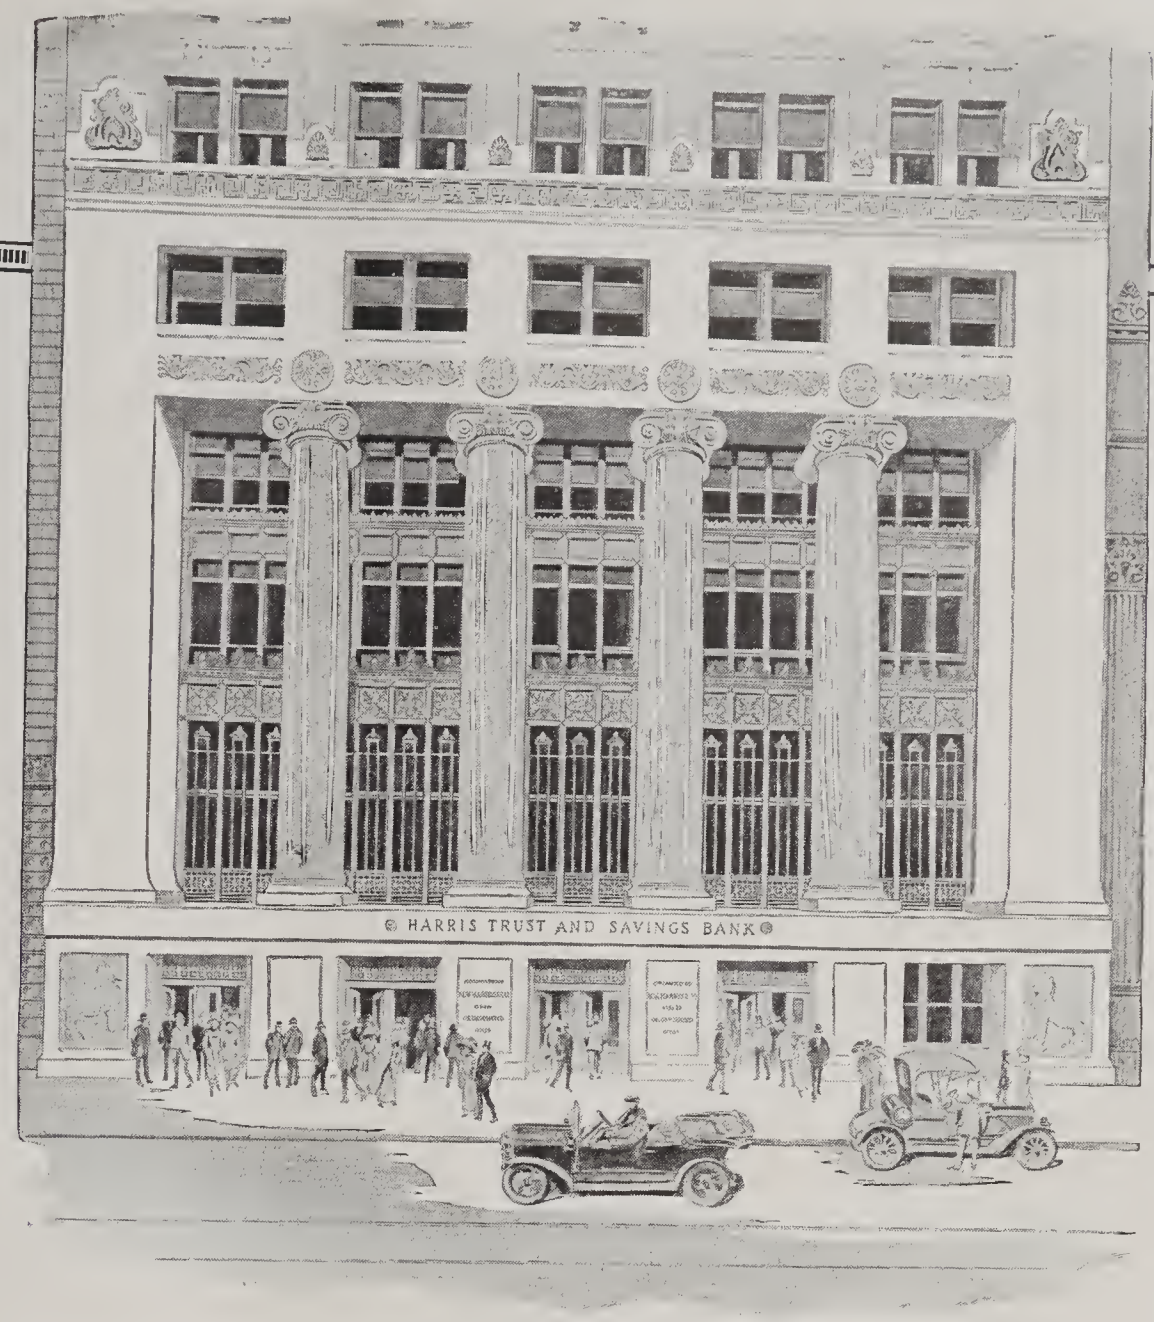
The latter has retired as director and D. E. Moon of the Moon Printing and Engraving ompany has taken his place on the board. . J. J. E. Platt has been advanced from cashier to president of the Security of Clark. He has been with the institution since it was first organized. J. A. McGillivray, formerly of Garden City, succeeds him as cashier.



MANY bankers, from time to time, have need of a special or secondary reserve fund. This reserve fund they carry in bonds or as an inactive account at interest with a metropolitan bank. We make a specialty of handling such inactive reserve accounts for banks and bankers, and of supplying carefully selected bonds for investment, circulation, emergency currency, government deposits or postal savings fund purposes. To banks intending to establish a secondary reserve fund unexcelled facilities are offered.

We have prepared an exceptionally informative leaflet on government bond data in concise enough form to be practical to every banker, — just the thing to have close at hand for ready reference. We shall be pleased to send these leaflets free upon request.

An important development in Spokane's campaign to build up factories has been realized in the securing of a large, conveniently located building in which to house a number of new industrial concerns.

The industrial committee of the chamber of commerce will use this building to minimize overhead expenses of between six and twelve manufacturing plants intending to locate in Spokane.

Great interest in the industrial campaign is manifested by all classes of citizens and this movement is helping to unite the business men. To date $41,000 of the $70,000 necessary has been raised by the chamber of commerce for the industrial campaign and for other work projected, such as the June Pow-wow, National Apple Show and agricultural betterment in the Spokane country.

All real estate, mining claims, personal property and the smelter of the Idaho Smelting and Refining Company, situated at Sandpoint, Ida., have been purchased by the Union Trust and Saving Bank of Spokane, the consideration named being $250,000. A bond of $500,000 was given to the bank to secure the sale. After the deal had been concluded, J. C. Cunningham, vice-president and manager of the bank, announced that his company either would operate the smelter or sell it to some person or corporation who would. The Idaho Smelting and Refining Company was organized in 1904 by Henry M. Williams and Charles Moore of Spokane, who interested Great Falls (Mont.), Duluth (Minn.) and Canadian capitalists in the project. Since 1906 the plant has been controlled by J. Herbert Anderson and by the Greenough family and other Montana capitalists.

Reports received by the Spokane Chamber of Commerce indicate a growing tendency to diversify farming in many parts of the Spokane country. Increased attention to the raising of chickens, cattle and hogs is reported by Secretary Gordon C. Corbaley of the chamber. It is estimated that for several years 100 carloads of eggs were imported annually into Spokane from the East. These shipments continued until 1912, when the importation of eggs dropped to 65 carloads, due to the large increase in the number engaged in the industry in the Spokane country. "Similar advance has been made in dairying," states Mr. Corbaley. "Many farmers who formerly kept but one cow now have from ten to forty, and are selling the milk and cream. The steadily increasing demand for dairy products and the quick returns realized by the farmer for this class of products have convinced many of our progressive farmers that they can increase their profits materially by keeping cows. One Spokane firm reports the sale of more cream separators in the last 60 days than in the preceding two years. A new silo company organized in Spokane anticipates supplying thousands of silos to near-by farmers during the next few years. The large increase in corn acreage the last two or three years seems to justify the expectation of the men who have invested their money in this concern."

Steel work on the $2,000,000 Davenport Hotel began last week, and the big columns already are up two stories. In another month the work will be advanced so that the steel shell will give a good idea of the magnitude of the 13-story structure. Contracts aggregating $185,000 for the heating and ornamental iron and bronze work have been sublet by the Brayton Engineering Company, the first to the Pacific Fire Extinguisher Company of San Francisco, and the other to the Flour City Ornamental Iron Company of Minneapolis. The ventilation system will be one of the features of the hotel. Part of the system includes a plant for washing the air circulated throughout the hotel. Fresh air will be pumped through a spray of water before being distributed to the rooms, and there is to be an arrangement whereby it can be cooled in summer and warmed to any desired degree in winter.

Fifty officials, directors and employees of the Fidelity National Bank, with their wives, attended the annual banquet of the bank at Davenport's Hall of the Doges, May 6th, in honor of the 31st anniversary of the founding of the bank. Thomas H. Brewer, president of the bank, was toastmaster, and toasts and informal pleasantries constituted the entertainment. As originally planned, the banquet was in the nature of a family dinner party, which is becoming one of the annual functions of the bank. An attractive souvenir program and menu card was presented to each one present. This gave the present officers of the bank and a short history of the bank's career. The outside cover carried a half-tone engraving of the interior of the bank's present quarters at Wall Street and Riverside Avenue. Music was furnished by the Fidelity Quartet and F. J. Presley. Remarks, reminiscent and prophetic, were made by Mr. Brewer, George S. Brooke, C. E. Cooper, A. W. Lindsay, J. J. Rouse, Orris Dorman and Lamont Barnes.

To promote closer commercial relations between all parts of the Inland Empire a congress of commercial and industrial interests will be held in Spokane during the Pow-wow June 16th to 21st. Among the subjects to be discussed are the expected change in business conditions following opening the Panama canal, Palouse irrigation project, Quincy Valley irrigation project, logged-off land question, farm marketing, community development and county agricultural agents. The Inland Empire Development League probably will be organized at the conference, which is being arranged by H. C. Sampson, manager of last year's National Apple Show.

Officers were installed by the Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, and W. E. Tallenaar was named as delegate to attend the annual meeting of the Washington State Bankers Association, at a regular meeting of the chapter, May 7th. Thomas B. Kilgore, manager of the Spokane Title Company, read a paper on "Land Titles and the Purpose and History of Abstracts." The meeting was attended by 20 delegates, representing most of the banks of the city, and at its close was adjourned to meet the first week in September.

EDMONTON NEWS

More than 20,000 prospective homeseekers from various parts of the United States and Europe came into the three prairie provinces during March. It is estimated by immigration officers that fully 6,000 located in central Alberta and the back country, most of them going on farms.

George M. Hall, industrial commissioner for Edmonton, has written a letter to Secretary of State Bryan in an effort to have an American consulate established in this city. The Norwegian government recently appointed Harold Thaulow of Christian to a similar post in Edmonton.

Charles S. Hotchkiss, head of the statistical branch of the department of agriculture of Alberta, reports that farm work is well advanced throughout the province. There will be an increase in acreage over 1912, when 2,392,752 acres were under cultivation. The crop of 1912 amounted to 64,465,058 bushels of all grains, while the value of livestock at the close of the year was $98,697,845.

Bank clearings in Edmonton for April amounted to $17,820,898, as compared with $16,335,539 a year ago; building permits calling for a total expenditure of $2,080,300 were issued; the customs house returns were $153,706, as against $143,159; and the stamp sales amounted to $15,645, as against $11,780 in April, 1912.

Merchants of Edmonton announce they will co-operate with the banks in an effort to make it difficult for check raisers and forgers. They have adopted the protectograph method of stamping each check within a dollar of the amount for which it is issued. Most of the hotels in the city will not cash checks.

Zimmerman, president Orange County Savings and Trust, Santa Ana, talked on the group system,

This morning (Saturday) Lydell Baker, pro-prietor and editor of the "Pacific Banker," was down for a talk on "The Lost Function of American Banking," after which reports will be heard from special committees, followed by the election of a president, vice-president, treasurer and four members of the executive council.

A question box was placed on the secretary's desk in which members were invited to deposit inquiries to be brought before the convention for discussion.

A meeting of California A. B. A. members was called for the purpose of nominating a member of the executive council to serve for three years as successor to H. S. Fletcher of Watsonville, whose term of office will expire next October; to nominate an A. B. A. vice-president for California, succeeding C. W. Bush of Woodland, whose term expires next October, and appointment of a member of the A. B. A. nominating committee.

Headquarters of the convention were at the U. S. Grant hotel, the business sessions being held in the ball-room.

Quite an elaborate program in the way of entertainment had been provided for the visitors. California conventions for years have been no-table for the character and extent of festivities in connection with these gatherings.

Wednesday evening a reception and smoker for the delegates was held at the Cuyamaca Club; Thursday afternoon there was an auto-mobile ride about the city and exposition grounds, and then to Point Loma; returning from there the party was entertained at the International Philosophical headquarters, where a short play was staged in the open-air Greek theater.

Thursday evening the bankers saw Raymond Hitchcock at the Spreckles Theater in "The Red Widow." Friday afternoon they took an automobile ride to Mount Helix, returning via the San Diego River valley road and in the evening there was a ball at the U. S. Grant hotel.

This afternoon (Saturday) a boat ride is planned on San Diego bay and to the Marine Gardens, or baseball game.

In addition to the above there were provided automobiles for use at any time by the ladies attending the convention; those desiring were enabled to take a boat ride on the bay any afternoon; the privileges of the Cuyamaca and Coronado Clubs and Point Loma Golf Club were extended to all delegates, who also were permitted to visit Ramona's Home at Old Town, or the Ostrich Farm at Mission Cliff Park.

The bankers of Imperial county arranged to provide an automobile ride from San Diego to and about Imperial county for all delegates who wished to make the trip at the close of the convention. The trip from San Diego to El Centro is about 120 miles, most of the way over an excellent road, through a mountainous country, and takes from six to eight hours.

The plan is to leave San Diego to-day (May 17th) arriving at El Centro to-night, Sunday being devoted to a ride around the valley.

Officers of the California Association during the past year were as follows: President, A. E. Edwards, president First National, Pasadena; vice-president, L. P. Behrens, vice-president First National of San Maeto county, Redwood City; treasurer George N. O'Brien, treasurer American National, San Francisco; secretary, Frederick H. Colburn, San Francisco.

Meetings of the executive council were held Wednesday evening and immediately after final adjournment of the convention.

Address of the President

President Edwards told of the work which has been accomplished during the past year by the various standing and special committees of the state association. The legislative committee, under the leadership of its chairman, Mr. Drum, practically rewrote the entire bank act, co-operating with the superintendent of banks. Many bills were introduced in the legislature relating to the subject of banking. A bill was introduced at the first session to increase the taxes of all corporations in the state whose assessments were based on the recent constitutional amendment known as No. 1. The legislative committee of the bankers' association protested against this increase, and as a result of the argument of Chairman Drum the committee on revenue and taxation of the legislature recommended that the tax rate, so far as the banks are concerned, remain the same. The proposed changes in the banking law have been passed by both branches of the legislature and await only the signature of the governor before becoming operative.

The amount of commercial paper purchased by California banks is increasing every year. It is believed that this is due to disappointing experiences by some of the banks in buying bonds for a secondary reserve which show a continued tendency to decrease in value; and secondly, because banks are becoming more and more convinced that their duty to the community is to keep their assets in liquid securities rather than in a long investment and slow moving though generally safe long-time bonds.

President Edwards told the convention he has found that many of the California state banks contemplate nationalizing, and that they are anxiously awaiting the time when the national bank act shall be amended so as to allow departmental business.

The speaker told of the prevalent high cost of living, which he attributed to the alarming increase in consumption without a proportionate increase in production. Then, evidences of waste are apparent everywhere. President Edwards believes that the banks can accomplish much good by encouraging thrift and economy through encouraging investment in safe securities and by giving valuable advice to deserving people.

In closing the speaker emphasized the necessity for currency legislation, commented on the report submitted by the famous Pujo committee, told, of the interest being manifested by bankers associations all over the country in the subject of improved agricultural conditions, expressing the belief that the California bankers would do well to emulate these organizations, and reviewing briefly the progress and development of the past year and the ever-growing tendency toward higher standards of conduct.

Benefits of the Group System

W. A. Zimmerman, president of the Orange County Savings and Trust Company at Santa Ana, brought home to the California bankers very forcibly some of the benefits to be derived through group organization of banks. There is more money to be made through co-operation than through antagonistic competition, said the speaker, and bankers through co-operation can effect much salutary reforms and bring about the accomplishment of things which will result beneficially to their interests. Through organized effort suggestions can be made to members of the legislature when that body is engaged in the task of enacting laws relating to the profession of banking. People who have not had any practical banking experience hardly can be expected to know just how a proposed law will work out in actual practice; so, unless the bankers voice their opposition to any measure or measures calculated to operate detrimentally to their interests, the legislature hardly can be expected to know that there is any dissatisfaction with its efforts. Mr. Zimmerman pointed out that through group organization and co-operation better laws can be secured. He believes that organized effort will prove to be a potential aid in teaching people the value of thrift and saving; also that by having proper grouping of banks the funds of one locality where money is not in so great and immediate demand could be shifted to one where it is, and later the compliment returned. Another important thing local associations can do is to furnish protection from the over-borrowing customer, the bad debt artist and the promoter.

"The Lost Function of American Banking."

Lydell Baker, editor of the Pacific Banker, Portland, Ore., talked to the California bankers on "The Lost Function of American Banking," which he believes to be the absence from American banking of the real, historical and necessary note-issuing power of banks. Mr. Baker explained that by this he meant that the seven hundred fifty millions of bank notes in circulation in a real, historical and necessary sense are not the notes of the banks at all, but are loans made by the government to the banks and through the banks to the people. He then went on and told of the origin of bank notes and explained the growth and development of their issuance. In concluding he expressed the belief that we should obtain a bank note more responsive to the needs of the people and that a marked feature of our system should be rediscounting by banks.

TEXAS CONVENTION

The Texas bankers held their twenty-ninth annual convention on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week in Galveston. The meeting was called to order by President H. R. Eldridge, vice-president of the First National of Houston. Address of welcome on behalf of the city was made by Mayor Lewis Fisher and on behalf of the Galveston banks by Fred W. Catterall, cashier of the First National of Galveston. The response was made by Benj. F. Berkeley of the Alpine State at Alpine, after which President Eldridge delivered his annual address to the members. Secretary J. W. Hoopes and Treasurer Rufus Coy then presented their reports to the convention, as did Detective W. A. Boyd of Waco. Following three-minute reports by the district chairman and of standing committees adjournment was taken for luncheon.

At the afternoon session there were addresses by T. J. Freeman, vice-president T. & P. and I. & G. N. Ry. Cos., New Orleans, and B. L. Harris of the South Texas Commercial National of Houston on "Credit Currency."

Wednesday morning there were talks by A. M. McFaddin, president Texas Cattle Raisers Association, Victoria, and John Clausen of the Crocker National, San Francisco, the latter speaking on foreign trade and credit.

At the afternoon session on Wednesday, Virgil M. Harris, trust officer of the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis, was down for "Let's Choose Executors and Talk of Wills." The Hon. W. F. Ramsey, an attorney of Austin, talked on the necessity for a uniform negotiable instrument act.

Thursday morning Charles B. Metcalf of San Angelo discussed "Our Bankers from a Farmer's Viewpoint." G. H. Dunscomb of the First National of Chicago told of some of the relations existing between a bank and its correspondents.

Officers of the Texas Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, H. R. Eldridge, district vice-president of the National City, New York; vict-president A. W. Wilkerson, cashier City National, Bryan; secretary, J. W. Hoopes, vice-president Austin National; treasurer, Rufus Coy, vice-president Western National, Fort Wroth; assistant secretary, Ernest L. Brown, assistant cashier, Alamo National, San Antonio.

Beverley D. Harris Makes Address

Beverley D. Harris, first vice-president and cashier of the South Texas Commercial National of Houston, in referring to a central government bank this week before the Texas bankers at Galveston, said: "The central government bank is the result of the experience and wisdom of older civilizations than ours. It is an institution that has stood the test of time, fulfilling the functions for which it was created scientifically and in a manner immeasurably superior to any other system or agency, and it is my conviction that had such an institution been founded in the early days of this republic and conducted along the lines of the great banks of Europe, it would be to-day the greatest financial institution in the world, and this country would have escaped the enormous losses, depressions and setbacks incidental to our periodic panics, for which Europe has had no counterpart in the last fifty years, and which has made of this country an international nuisance." Mr. Harris believes that our existing laws can be amended in such a way as to answer all requirements, at least until something better is advanced than anything now in sight, and offered a comprehensive plan with that idea in view. Some of the things contemplated by the plan are as follows: Formation of clearing house banks in every reserve city into independent currency associations; formation of any number of national banks outside of the clearing house cities, and having in the aggregate the required capitalization at present provided for by the Aldrich-Vreeland law, into independent currency associations; advocates amendment of the laws so as to permit any national bank, a member of a currency association, to issue additional circulation over and above its bond-secured circulation, to an additional amount equal to the amount of its capital and surplus, subject to certain conditions which he named; advocates the chartering by the national government of a new kind of bank, with a capital of not less than $1,000,000, without deposit privileges, but authorized to accept paper, buy and sell foreign and domestic bills of exchange, and where their capital is sufficiently large to warrant it, to permit them to establish foreign branches necessary to their business, under suitable regulations; advocates the sale of U. S. bonds available for circulation to an amount sufficient to retire all of the uncovered goernment notes, leaving in circulation only $150,000,000 against a gold reserve of a like amount, making of them practically gold certificates.

COMMONWEALTH NATIONAL BANK
Dallas, Texas

Urges Necessity of Negotiable Instruments Law

W. F. Ramsay, an attorney of Austin, in speaking before the Texas bankers at Galveston, told of the urgent necessity of a negotiable instruments law. With the increased prosperity of the state and the growth in trade, business and the banking resources it is of prime importance that the laws in respect to commercial paper should be practical, sane, certain and uniform. If the commerce of the country is to be handled on the best terms it must be through the medium of instruments clothed with the character of negotiability, for no bank or banker is willing to lend money on instruments which are not negotiable and which do not vest in him an indefeasible title. Mr. Ramsay said there is too much doubt and confusion in regard to the law relating to these instruments.

Railroad President Addresses Conventeion

Thomas J. Freeman, president of the International and Great Northern Railway Company, New Orleans, La., talked on "The Farmer, the Cotton Crop and the Banker," telling of the important influence which cotton exercises on the commercial development of the South. Mr. Freeman believes that there is an under production of cotton and that there will be for years to come. He believes that unless its production can be made profitable to the farmer the demand for cotton will continue to exceed the production. As conditions exist at the present time the cotton crop is marketed and moved practically between September 1st and December 31st, which results in congestion in railway equipment, a congestion at the ports for foreign export and much general inconvenience. It probably is fair to assume that the greater portion of these unnatural expenses are borne by the producer—the farmer.

Mr. Freeman believes that this condition should be remedied by the bankers who furnish the money with which to move the crop, and that some arrangement should be effected where by the farmer can get advances from the banks on his crop and not be compelled to market it in so short a time. He believes that this can be accomplished by the organization of warehouses for the storing of cotton, privately owned, but public warehouses. The necessity of devising some means which will enable the producer to get the benefit of the best market and get the best price for his cotton is of supreme importance in the opinion of Mr. Freeman.

Interesting Talk on Wills

Virgil M. Harris, LL. D., trust officer of the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis, furnished a rare treat to the delegates. His subject was "Let's Choose Executors and Talk of Wills." Mr. Harris has spent much time in investigating the subject of wills and is the author of a volume entitled "Ancient, Curious and Famous Wills," which is widely read. Briefly stated, some of the points brought out in his able address are as follows: He told of the interest manifested by the public in last wills and testaments because through them the testator lays bare his heart and conscience. Mr. Harris told of the intricacies connected with

GEORGIA CONVENTION

Georgia Bankers Association held its twenty-second annual convention in the city of Macon on Friday of this week and is in session to-day (Saturday). The first session was called to order Friday morning at ten o'clock by President Benjamin W. Hunt, vice-president Middle Georgia Bank, Eatonton. Address of welcome on behalf of the city was delivered by Mayor John T. Moore and on behalf of the Macon Clearing House Association by J. J. Cobb, vice-president of the Commercial National and president of the clearing house association. Response was made by W. W. Banks, vice-president of the Bank of Tifton, after which President Hunt delivered his annual address, followed by the report of Frank S. Jones, chairman of the executive council and cashier of the First National of Bainbridge. Reports then were heard from Secretary Haynes McFadden of Atlanta, Treasurer E. C. Smith, cashier of the Griffin Banking Company, Griffin, and General Counsel Orville A. Park. There also was a discussion of the new bank law for Georgia. Fred W. Ellsworth of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York talked on the banker and his customer. After the appointment of committees on auditing and resolutions adjourment was taken.

Immediately after the adjournment of the first session of the convention proper, the nominating committee was selected, one member from each group, which committee is to report upon adjournment to-day (May 17th).

Members of the American Bankers Association met for the purpose of electing a member of the executive council of the A. B. A., a vice-president for Georgia and a delegate to the Boston convention, whose duty it will be to serve on the nominating committee.

Friday afternoon William A. Law, vice-president of the First National of Philadelphia, delivered an address. William J. Burns, of the Burns National Dectective Agency, who was billed to make a talk to the bankers, was unable to be present as he was in Europe. Burgess Smith of the United States treasury department read a paper on the currency washing machine.

This morning (May 17th) Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the state college of agriculture and mechanic arts at Athens, will talk to the bankers, and John K. Ottley, vice-president of the Clearing House section of the American Bankers Association and of the Fourth National of Atlanta, will discuss the universal numerical system and uniform clearing house reports. There will be a demonstration of the finger print system by P. A. Flak, the finger print expert of New York. Vice-President Joseph A. McCord of the Third National of Atlanta will report as chairman of the legislative committee. After committee reports, transaction of new business and election of officers for the ensuing year, the convention will adjourn. Group dinners were held Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

President's Address

President Benjamin W. Hunt, reviewed briefly the growth of banking in Georgia during the past twenty years. In 1893 there were one hundred and eight banks in the state, with a combined capital and surplus of $15,539,515. In 1911 the state treasurer reported that there were 112 national institutions with capital of $13,194,500 and surplus and profits of $10,084,510 and 636 state banks with capital of $24,740,581 and surplus and profits of $13,316,554, making a total of $61,336,145.

E. W. STETSON
President Citizens National Bank, Macon, Georgia

President Hunt told of the unselfish efforts of the legislative committee in its endeavor to have enacted a revised banking law, and stated that the association has been unanimous for years in the desire for better banking laws. It is the belief that the present statutes supplemented by the creation of a banking board separated from the pernicious influence of politics, and self-supporting, will become the seed from which will grow and develop all necessary legislation to promote Georgia's banking and financial interests. He also pointed out the advisability of the reformation of the national banking system.

Secretary's Report

Secretary Haynes McFadden of Atlanta reported a membership of 610, an increase of 129 for the year, equivalent to 27 per cent. There are 316 A. B. A. members who belong to the state association and 65 A. B. A. members who are not affiliated with the state organization. In the Whitman, Walker and Benton systems there are 252 banks, of which 152 are members of the association. A strong plea was made to those present to emphasize the value of the state association to all the non-member banks in the state. Fifteen banks have gone out of business since the last convention was held through consolidations, liquidations and failures. Secretary McFadden deprecated the lack of a comprehensive, adequate banking law for the state and complimented State Treasurer Speer for the work which he has done with the worn-out tools at his command.

The attendance at the five group meetings in April was larger than the entire membership of the association. Each group passed a resolution favoring greater activity in fostering agricultural development. A recommendation was made by the secretary that the American Institute of Banking be made a section of the Georgia Bankers Association, a custom observed in a number of other states, and unexceptionally with excellent results to both organizations.

Talk by F. W. Ellsworth

F. W. Ellsworth, publicity manager of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, spoke on courteous treatment of customers by bank officials and employees. Twenty-five years ago so much attention was not paid to this matters as there is to-day. Nevertheless, there are examples to-day where but scant consideration and courtesy are given to customers. Mr. Ellsworth spoke of the services which the banker renders to the community and said that there should prevail at all times a feeling of reciprocal cordiality between the banker and his customer. Diplomacy and cheerfulness are invaluable to a banker, said the speaker. He told the delegates that a banker should take steps to acquaint the community with all the things which his bank can do and that the time when it was regarded as unethical to advertise has long since passed.

ne preparation of a will and of the difficulties ssociated with its interpretation, pointing out ome of the pitfalls avoided by one who is exerienced in performing work of that charcter. He cited cases where the intention of ne testator had been defeated because of indefiniteness in the will and touched upon the eluctance of a great many men of wealth to scharge the important obligation of having eir last wills and testaments drawn up. Many," said Mr. Harris, "forget that distrition at the end of life's journey is quite as nportant as accumulation, and they dislike e idea of inevitable surrender and ignore it, reluctantly face the ordeal."

A large number of curious wills made by rsons were cited by the speaker. In one case e legatee named the Devil. Mr. Harris said at it has been suggested by one writer that rhaps the testator desired to make a good impression on his satanic majesty with a view of nciliating him; another suggests that even e name of the devil in a will is better than ne.

Mr. Harris pointed out to the bankers the cessity of the testator being sound and vigors, mentally and physically. "Laymen ould never attempt wills. In law, as in ner professions, ability and experience are ential to accurate work. When you seek a wyer to write your will see that he has these alifications. A lawyer should not be called on to write a will hastily or cheaply; if it is written the results of haste and cheapness ually follow. Your will is probably the st important document you will ever be led upon to execute; it should be framed efully and prudently and with foresight; it cts the work of a lifetime and upon its le- ity depend the future welfare and happiness the persons and objects most dear to the ator. Unlike contracts and similar instruits, it cannot be changed after the tesor's death; what is written will not be open explanation; therefore prudence demands t the testator plan wisely and frame his testentary provisions, not only in anticipation contingencies which may arise before his th, but those which may occur thereafter," Mr. Harris.

eorge H. Dunscomb, assistant cashier of First National of Chicago, gave an address title of which was "Some Relations Been a Bank and Its Correspondents."

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

A LOT of warm-hearted admirers of Iowa's favorite son, J. A. S. Pollard of Fort Madison, want him to go on the A. B. A. council to succeed E. L. Johnson. What Mr. Pollard thinks about it hasn't been stated.

WE suggest that they can make it a certainty by holding the election immediately after one of his always brilliant speeches. The election will take place at the Des Moines convention.

WILLIAM G. EDENS and Arthur Reynolds were the top-liners at the Nora Springs (Ia.) group meeting. Edens talked on co-operation in good-roads building and Reynolds "opened" the discussion.

THE visiting out-of-state bankers gathered at Mason City for over-night, on the eve of the group meeting, and all were the guests of citizen C. H. McMider at a theater party. About twenty in all.

AFTER the meeting some of them had liked it so well that they spent a second night in Mason City.

THE Farmers and Merchants Bank has opened at Richland Center, Wis., with H. Pratt as president and our old friend Marcus C. Berg as cashier. Capital $50,000. "We want your business" is the slogan.

W. STRAUS calls attention to the fact that "Chicago has only six first-class downtown hotels against more than eighty in New York, where the population is scarcely more than double that of Chicago. The need of greater hotel accommodations in this city is a strong one and has been clearly shown by the fact that all the better hotels in Chicago are filled almost to capacity the year round and often are unable to provide sufficient accommodations."

E. MacKINNON, president of the Mechanics Savings, Des Moines, was in Chicago this week. He never failed to defer a cordial invitation to the Des Moines convention, when talking to bankers.

JOS. R. NOEL has shifted his gear again to third speed ahead (never uses the reverse) and has added $100,000 to capital of the North West State. Shareholders get in at par to fifty per cent of present holdings which is pretty swift" for them.

SECRETARY W. C. MACFADDEN of N. D. has issued a bulletin on the "Income Tax," a very engrossing subject to bankers, particularly section two of the bill.

J. A. S. POLLARD was a Chicago visitor this week. Here is a young man who doesn't come half often enough.

FIRST NATIONAL, Boston, does one thing just right. The press copies of its new Poland letter bear a release date and are printed on one side only of thin (easily pasted) paper. Copies direct to readers are of the usual kind. Clever little stunt.

S. D., Care CHICAGO BANKER

"CAVEAT EMPTOR" (Let the Buyer Beware) is not a defense of the "Blue Sky" promotor that the "Blue Sky" lawmakers are after, although it describes their point of view.

IT is a little booklet sent free to bankers by Charles R. Stevenson of Mishawaka, Ind.

SEND for a copy and you will be both entertained and informed.

IF you are going to get out any printed matter on wills (trust company dope) write to W. J. Kommers of the Old National, Spokane, for "Life and Property." It is a good thing to show how clearly this difficult subject can be presented.

IT'S splendidly printed, too, and is preceded by a catchy letter. The book then is sent upon request which saves waste circulation.

A CHICAGO concern with a weakness for subscribing to senatorial campaign expense funds has a department for "Expert Assistance in Cases before Commissions." See the point?

CHAIRMAN OWEN of the senate committee was explaining to a lot of western bankers just over from Briarcliff that "the reason we didn't call on the A. B. A. was because that organization is controlled by Wall Street bankers."

THE shout of laughter which greeted this statement (he said) was all the answer he required. He was too genuine to deceive.

THE A. B. A. isn't controlled at all, as everybody outside of congress knows. It's too all-western for that. If there is a sound, independent association anywhere, it's the A. B. A.

THE National Bank of Western Pennsylvannia has become the Western National Bank of Pittsburgh, the change dating with the renewal of the charter. No other change made.

HOLDERS of some of the newer industrial securities throughout the United States have been asking the banks, the trust companies, the newspapers, and Stock Exchange houses how the New York Stock Exchange came to list the shares of concerns that were apparently so insufficiently financed.

FIFTY millions of capital have been paid up by "good will." The good will often turns out to be a poor asset.

IN England a vendor (called a promoter in America) cannot even list his shares for six months after the other shares have been listed. This protects the public in a measure against the "Blue Sky" good-will shares.

NO two states of this country have the same laws governing the issuance of securities, but the fact that thirty-six states have either enacted or have been considering the enactment of the so-called "Blue Sky" laws, shows, in the judgment of bankers, that the public has become genuinely aroused to the need of some restrictive legislation.

K. N. & K., New York, point out that not in thirty years has the country been so well situated as now for an important lowering of the tariff.

GEORGE WOODRUFF and W. G. Edens will contribute two principal members to the Indiana bankers' agricultural conference at Indianapolis on June 3d.

SECRETARY KEYSER is offering $50 reward for the capture of A. H. Good whom he describes as "5′ 5″, weighs 200 and rather heavy build." He would surely be "heavy build" at that height and weight.

W. F. FITZSIMMONS, formerly with the Irving National, has engaged with the Broadway Trust as assistant secretary.

THERE was a "vaudeville cabaret" at one of the Galveston theaters last week "in honor of the Texas Bankers Association." H. R. Eldridge sang "Johnny, Get Your Gun."

JOE HIRSCH, the inimitable, "gave an illustrated lecture on Jerusalem." Maurice McAshan and Geo. McGhee of Waco did a "double" and R. C. Roberdau was the "Tin Soldier."

IT was planned, in case of fire, that P. L. Downs and Oscar Wells should each make a speech, and thus empty the halls quickly.

A HUGE "water wagon" was rigged up as a sight seeing car and was the hit of the week.

SECRETARY J. W. HOOPES of Texas has asked the state association to increase the dues the necessary amount, and recommended the employment of a paid secretary on full time basis.

HOOPES expects, so they say, to be the next treasurer of the A. B. A.

GOVERNOR EBERHART of Minnesota will be on the New York convention program at the Ottawa convention. He is a very forcible speaker, with advanced ideas on agriculture, education and banking.

CHAIRMAN T. J. DAVIS of the big council made quite a hit as orator of the day at the St. Joseph convention. Other secretaries will bear this in mind.

ALL public documents of the government are sold either at 5 cents or a multiple of that sum. It is always convenient to purchase a money order, while there is a risk in sending cash remittances. To meet these drawbacks in purchasing government publications, it has been decided to furnish coupons, in sets of 20, for $1 a set, which are good until used. Buyers of public documents will find the use of these coupons the most convenient and the safest way of remitting the amount of their purchases. Address all orders for coupons to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office.

GROUP EIGHT, Indiana, will hold a "Back to the Farm" meeting at Evansville on next Tuesday, the 27th. Both the business meeting and the entertainment will be on board the steamer J. S. Hopkins. The run will be to Dam No. 48, the largest inland improvement in the United States.

"PACK YOUR TRUNK" is a beautiful multiple blotter sent out by Secretary J. E. Platt of South Dakota to remind bankers of the Waterloo convention on June 25-6.

THE Chicago Daily News says "bills regulating private banking are, of course, once more before the Illinois legislature. The opposition is weaker than ever before, but there is still opposition. Enlightened bankers of Chicago and other cities earnestly favor regulation, and the arguments against it have long since ceased to impress or interest the fair-minded public."

A TELEGRAM from Springfield says: "Senator Waage, upon whose motion the subject of state regulation of private banks has been referred to a subcommittee of the senate committee on banks and banking, asserts that his action was intended to help along the cause of state regulation, not to combat it."

GEORGE N. WRIGHT, state (Illinois) agent for the New Amsterdam Casualty Company, has a strong talking point in the absorption of a big Baltimore company by his own concern. He has been doing a fine business down state and is edging in in Chicago. He has a fine proposition for the banker-agent.

DURING the past thirty years the officers and directors of the Harris Trust have selected and purchased over one billion, five hundred million dollars of bonds, which have been sold to a constantly growing list of clients.

IN buying bonds of this institution the investor secures the benefit of the experience gained through the selection of this large amount of securities. The bank limits its purchases of bonds to those which are suitable for its own investment, and sells only such bonds to its clients.

HARRIS TRUST has just issued for free circulation a book on "Public Utility Bonds," which ought to be in the hand of every investor or adviser of investors for its rare value. Bankers can have a copy on request.

"WHEN Bryan Came to Butte," alias L. P. Hillyer, has been made president of the Georgia Bankers Association, a deserved honor, which he will justify as few men could do it.

FOR twenty years he had been secretary and many times had "put away the crown." One will look forward to his work in the "big chair," the position to which he has helped so many men.

AT the concluding banquet at which Mr. Hillyer presided he was presented with a huge silver pitcher, in recognition of his

ILLINOIS REALIZATION COMPANY

AMERICAN TRUST BUILDING

INVESTMENTS AND GENERAL FINANCING

CHICAGO May 24th, 1913.

Mr. Banker,
Everywhere.
Dear Sir:-

After an extensive and successful experience in the handling of the assets of involved institutions in bankruptcy or otherwise in the hands of the courts, or in process of reorganization, we have evolved an absolutely new and valuable service for Bankers to which we now invite your earnest attention.

Your first desire as a creditor of a financially crippled institution is to determine its fair cash value, not relying for this information on the biased representations of the interested parties or of a self created creditors committee, but rather on the investigation of disinterested experts.

We will undertake quickly and confidentially to examine the assets of any estate, fixing thereon fair liquidating values, and we will guarantee that in the event of a sale, at least the figure thus quoted will be realized. This estimate and guarantee constitute our service.

This knowledge of the certain liquidating value of the estate provides a fair and intelligent basis for all negotiations for settlement. It is also protection against a combination of bidders which may have been formed to buy in the property much below its real value.

If the assets are of a slow moving non-bankable character, you would probably be unwilling to protect your claim by bidding them in.

Our frequent appearance in many of the courts in this country as bidders, and our known purpose on such occasions, have obtained for us a desirable standing and have put us in a position where we can and do obtain prompt and reliable information from receivers, trustees and officers of court generally.

We invite you to confer with us in reference to any estate in which you are interested.

Our banking and other references will satisfy you.

Very truly yours,
President.

vices as secretary "from the very beginning of the association."

W. STETSON of the Citizens Bank, Macon, will succeed Mr. Hillyer on the council at Boston.

RTHUR REYNOLDS, in telling a friend about the Nora Springs, Group Three, eting, said: "Edens and I spoke. He set place on fire with his oratory, and it was duty to put it out."

HIS is quite a neat compliment to William "Goodroads" Edens, and from one not rlavish in the flinging of bouquets. They le a pretty clever team, no doubt.

OU are to ask Edens (telephone will do) 'what is a 'hoolaboom' ?"

O. RICE, formerly of the credit department in the Continental and Commercial ional, but recently doing commercial work, gone to St. Paul in a special capacity.

E will for a time be under direction of Louis W. Hill and later take up work in First National. He has a fine record in cago.

IE new Hill trust company—"The Northwestern Trust Co. of St. Paul"—has pulled one history-making stunt already. It's e a story.

OUIS W. HILL, chairman of the board, had a finger in it. Assisted by a local l company the Northwestern Trust purchased $200,000 of St. Paul short-time paving ls.

IEY were offered to the public—not over $1,000 to one buyer—through a popular department store with regular department store advertising. The first $30,000 were gone by 10.30 A. M. on day of sale, with lots of buyers still in line.

THE store sold them at $100.75 and the interest is 6 per cent. The store agrees to buy them back at par and is backed up in this by Mr. Hill and the Northwestern Trust Company.

SPEAKING of it Mr. Hill said: "This idea of having a department store handle securities was developed by Northwestern Trust Company and C. O. Kalman & Company in a desire to distribute the securities of Saint Paul among the class of people who hitherto have not known, or did not realize, that they could invest small amounts in choice securities.

"WE have been much gratified at the results obtained, which have been far in excess of our anticipations, and it is our intention to foster and encourage savings among this class of investors by offering them from time to time choice securities, with a ready market, that will enable them to realize quickly, should they need their money.

"THIS experiment demonstrates that the small investor will buy good securities at a reasonable rate, and will place his confidence in reputable institutions, even to paying his money before the bonds are ready for delivery."

THE Saint Paul papers gave the scheme great publicity which helped greatly. The dailies in any city would do as much. Perhaps Mr. Hill has discovered a new field for home securities. CASHIER.

T. J. Davis on Epochs of American Banking

Chairman of the executive council of the American Bankers Association describes to Missouri bankers at St. Joseph the growth and development of banking in the United States. Believes we are on threshold of another epoch

The first epoch in American banking (and I interpret that term as meaning the first period in which there was some uniformity in banking methods) is generally conceded to be the epoch of banking in the colonies, and concerning this I shall speak but briefly.

With the balance of trade against them, as was to be expected in a totally new country, and without the specie on which to rest a basis of note issue, what more natural than that they should turn to the next thing of imperishable value amongst them, viz: land? Accordingly, the historians tell us that the first effort to lift themselves out of the condition of barter and beads as media of exchange was the establishment of a land bank, the capital of which was contributed by the shareholders turning over deeds to certain real estate. Some writers declare that the shareholders contrived to get the lands taken in at an exorbitant valuation, and the wary public soon began to look askance at the notes of the bank and they soon became depreciated. Operation of the land bank soon was forbidden and it suspended activities for a number of years, but was revived by its chief promoter and had a brief existence under somewhat changed conditions. There is apparently no science more elusive or confusing than the establishment of a banking system. The difficulty is that so many theories may be plausibly stated and at a glance the error in the plan is difficult to see. Here are some three or four millions of people located in scattered communities along an extensive stretch of the Atlantic seaboard, constantly trying to raise their standards of living by importing such luxuries and comforts of the times from abroad as they could afford, and shipping all the raw products they could spare to pay for the imports. The maintenance of a bank issuing notes on a specie basis was, of course, impracticable, and why would it not appear plausible even today out here in Missouri, where farm lands have well established value, to look upon them as a basis of credit? All of us have been schooled enough in finance to know, as a result of such experience, that it will not work, and that the notes would be impracticable to redeem, and would not be acceptable beyond the immediate vicinity where the land and its value is known; but about the time of the establishment of the first land bank in America two clever political economists in England were memorializing the English people to establish them, and a parliamentary committee of the time reported it favorably. To cover the question of redemption, the notes were to be inconvertible and be a legal tender. Our forefathers stand in need of no apology, for any one who will take the trouble to delve into the few interesting public documents of that time that are still preserved will be struck with the ability of the men of that day to express themselves in the choicest and clearest diction. I mention this because so many commentators on the banking history of that period touch upon the disasters of a depreciated note issue as though it were the result of ignorance of the business men and the bankers of those days. On the contrary, they undoubtedly tried to adopt a crude situation to the most practicable method possible in a new community.

It would be useless and tedious to recite in detail the sundry other banks of issue established on different plans by the provinces themselves, but they became quite numerous, until finally in 1740 parliament forbade the note issues of the colonies.

As a boy I always understood that the Boston tea party was the cause of the Revolutionary War, but a careful perusal of the history of the times I believe will convince readers that the English interference with the banking operations of the colonies had more to do with stirring up indignation against the mother country than any other one cause, and was potent, unquestionably, in promoting the final outbreak.

We shall now pass briefly over the period of the Revolution. There are those who say that if the government at the outbreak of the Revolution had had a strong central bank, somewhat of the type of the Bank of England, it might have assisted the finances of the country to such an extent as to have saved in a measure the wholesale depreciation of the continental currency and the issues of the colonies which the government endeavored to assume, amounting, all told, to some four hundred million dollars; but in the excitement of the hour no one appears to have thought of such a plan until the war was well under way, and it is little to be wondered at, when it is remembered that the open rebellion of those prominent men against the mother country was no slight act. It involved serious personal consequences, placing their heads in jeopardy.

The depreciation of that currency reached 1,000 to 1, the lowest level of any currency ever issued, excepting the Confederate currency, which finally depreciated to where it had no value at all.

The next epoch I shall pass over without comment, viz: the period of the first and second banks of the United States. The history of these two United States chartered banks was resurrected and published so widely during the debates on the Aldrich bill that practically everybody knows their general story. However men may differ, doubtless all will admit that they produced some practical benefits for the people.

1st. They inculcated the doctrine of punctuality in taking care of paper at maturity.

2d. They exercised a salutary influence in repressing in a degree the tendency to overissue by state banks, by promptly presenting the notes for payment.

Some historians assert that it was the branches which made the bank unpopular and contributed to its undoing. The branch managers were not generally as broad gauge as the parent officers and often used the influence of the bank in a pernicious way against political opponents. Hamilton was not in favor of the branches, and results proved his view correct.

The debates leading up to the defeat of the application to renew the charter of the second United States bank were so heated as to inculcate much prejudice on the part of the opponents to linking the government with the operations of privately owned banks; in fact the matter became a national issue, and the opposing party having triumphed through President Jackson, it was easy for him to pave the way for an enactment of the law under which the government would conduct its operations through agencies of its own establishment, hence the establishment of what is known as the "Independent Treasury System." This system has its advantages, also its disadvantages, and in view of the fact that the tendency of the government has steadily been latterly towards the larger use of banks instead of the subtreasuries, it is interesting to note the opposite views of the benefits and disadvantages of the subtreasury system.

Among the reasons submitted in favor of the independent treasury system, I quote from a letter of one in favor of them, as follows:

"1st. Subtreasuries are the safest custodians of the public funds the government has ever had, for proof of which see history of the improper use of government funds prior to the establishment of the independent treasury in 1846.

"2d. They are an ever ready means by which any emergency can be relieved by telegraphic transfers, thereby enabling banks, business houses, or even individuals, to use their surplus funds deposited in any subtreasury city as quickly as the wires can carry the messages. Notable examples: San Francisco earthquake and fire, and the recent flood disasters in the Ohio valley. However, these telegraphic transfers are available at any time the banks may desire to use them.

money, by which banks receive in exchange therefor new currency. To banks in subtreasury cities this is especially beneficial, as the exchange is made without cost or delay.

"4th. Subtreasury funds constitute an inexhaustible supply of ready change at all times, of all kinds and denominations for use in shops, banks and business houses. Also a ready supply of coin and paper money to be shipped to the various country banks as they need it.

"5th. Plenty of cash on hand at all times in the various subtreasuries for deposit in banks to relieve any stringency or panic that may arise.

"6th. The authority granted to assistant treasurers, United States, to issue gold certificates payable to order in denominations of $10,000 is a convenience in paying clearing house obligations, thus avoiding the use of daily cash payments. Congress should authorize these certificates to be issued in denominations of $5,000. These certificates are issued payable to order like an ordinary certificate of deposit and may be transferred from one bank to another by endorsement. They are a safe and convenient form of carrying reserve.

"7th. The payment of checks at the subtreasuries is a quick and inexpensive means by which banks secure currency, for daily use, of the particular kinds and denominations they most need. Under the present order No. 5 active depository banks located in subtreasury cities are deprived of the means of converting their checks into actual cash, and I would suggest that the word 'SHALL,' in treasury order No. 5 be changed to 'May,' so that government checks could be made liquid assets at any time or any place that the banks paying such checks may prefer. As it now exists they cannot be used to secure cash from the subtreasury or for exchange on other cities."

As against these services to the public, which are valuable, one who considers that such work could be undertaken by the banks says that we have seen in a period of active business when the government receipts were heavy the accumulation of actual money become so high in the vaults as to require some relief to the country, and at times the government was prompted to go out and buy in its own securities. When this was no longer practicable, the money withdrawn by the government from the channels of trade has been deposited in banks to ease up a situation that was somewhat strained.

Through the activities of the American Bankers Association, the first step towards the larger use of banks was to allow internal revenue receipts to be paid in the form of certified checks instead of actual currency; through its continued activities also, the same rule became applicable to customs receipts about two or three years since.

The last order, however, which was promulgated by the treasury department was on its own initiative in the closing days of the last administration, and is known as the special treasury order No. 5, effective February 1, 1913. Under the obligations of this order the checks drawn by the United States disbursing officers are made available at par in the hands of any satisfactorily identified owner when presented at any active United States depository bank, and the latter assumes a direct relationship to Washington in accounting to the treasury department, treating the account as it would a banking or individual customer, debiting each day's transactions in the usual way. The former method, of course, was to present these disbursing checks at the subtreasury on which they were drawn.

The banks are also empowered by the last order to receive for the credit of the United States government the deposits of its collecting officers, with the exception of postmasters residing in subtreasury cities.

The purpose in general of the whole order being, it is understood, that the active national depository banks shall handle the fiscal affairs of the United States government in the matter of its receipts and disbursements the same as other business handled in the country.

This last change, of course, is an important one, and reduces the operations of the subtreasuries practically to such functions only, so far as the banks are concerned, as shipping a supply of minor coin, and of issuing gold certificates payable to order in denominations of ten thousand dollars to banks depositing gold, and also to render the very important services of enabling transfers in large sums to be made by wire from one city to another, and the redemption of currency and coin.

The functions of the subtreasury are curtailed so much now that if the bill which is foreshadowed in press dispatches should become a law it would look as if it meant the abandonment of the subtreasuries.

I shall not go into the history of the enactment of the national banking law, as this is more or less familiar to all of you, but the fact remains that we have passed through an epoch of almost fifty years with very little change from its original provisions, in all essential features, practically none. The comment is often heard that it is obsolete; that it has not kept pace with the times, and yet under its provisions nearly one and three-quarter billions of banking capital has assembled and individual depositors to the extent of nearly six billions of dollars are yielding it their patronage, showing the esteem in which it is held, notwithstanding its restricted provisions.

Unquestionably the charter is too rigid and has not adapted the institutions operating under it to the developing needs of the community. The states have met the needs of the people in their saving tendencies and fiduciary relations by enacting savings bank and trust company laws and thereby covering a scope which amendments to the national banking act at some past perod probably would have forestalled. While the principal purpose of the national bank act was to furnish a market for government bonds, it served to eliminate the old state bank issues of varying value and finally to make a bank note issue worth par in gold.

It is regrettable to read the epochs of American banking and note the periods of recurring panics, lamentable because they have been avoidable. The national banking operations fixed the value of bank note currency, but it has not been issued with any view to the needs of the community at the time of issue.

From the very nature of things, specie cannot be multiplied, as were the loaves and fishes, to meet a seasonal demand at a crop moving period and then be contracted again to its original volume and amount. Representative money, currency therefore, is the agency employed in all civilized countries having highly developed banking functions. But how much of this to issue and how much can safely be issued are the perplexing problems. No fixed rate has been found that will fit all cases and conditions.

The question also where to place this important right of issue is difficult to answer. The element of confidence, of course, plays a highly important part.

Broadly speaking, a paper currency is a dangerous thing; carefully guarded, it is a blessing in the protecton and care of trade. It should come out when it is needed and disappear when it is not required. Upon it, when it does appear, is moulded a superstructure of credit and the substructure should be removed when the superstructure has automatically melted.

Theoretically, it would seem as if each banking unit should be endowed with an inherent power to take care of itself, and not have to rely upon the strength or favor of its reserve connection. That ability would imply the right, under extraordinary circumstances, to put out an additional issue of notes—but that system opens wide the door to opportunity for inflation and to abuse of the privilege.

The American Bankers Association, in its struggles to provide some method for an elastic issue, lent some favor to the unit idea, and elaborated a careful system of protecting it by a contributory fund, assessing each bank a certain ratio estimated to protect the notes. Gradually thereafter the sentiment of the association underwent a change and veered from the unit system around to exactly the opposite, that of having it issued by one central authority, under the provisions of the Aldrich bill, There is now foreshadowed in the press a bill that is apparently an intermediate link between the two. In the panic of 1907 certain regional banking communities and clearing house cities were enabled to join together and issue pay-roll checks and scrip which were accepted in the communities with reasonable satisfaction to meet the exigencies of the situation. In the bill suggested regional banks are outlined: the stock to be owned by the banks in the community.

It is indicated that each will have ability to issue currency, and therein will be its most beneficial function, as it will undoubtedly have a strong gold reserve and its managers will know when such extra issues are needed in a community and when it is prudent to retire it. While the press indicates that it will do a general banking business, it is to be hoped that it will deal only with banks. In defending its charter rights, it is to be hoped also that the lawmakers will keep steadily in view that its great mission in the banking field is to provide an elastic medium acceptable everywhere at par, as the national bank notes now are, and redeemable in gold on demand.

With such institutions in operation, it would seem illogical to let national banks go ahead issuing currency, as that function would be appropriated by the regional bank. In its operations it is to be hoped that provision will be made that it shall not come into active competition with the banks of its own or any other community, or endeavor to draw into its vaults reserve deposits that would tend to disturb the channels of trade. It can impound a lot of scattered gold in a region and use it as a basis of note issue. It can meet the needs of its own region or other regions if called upon. It can move a crop or put out a fire. It can replace the present uncertainty, for now there is nowhere to go, with certainty. It can make banking easier and replace a nervous watchfulness with profound sleep. In view of the great mission it will serve in its limited function, its shareholders who are bankers ought not to expect it to yield large profits. What would a banker give to have the feeling, as he lies down to sleep, that come what exigency there may to-morrow, he can make provision to meet it through the regional bank? All the signs portend that we are on the threshold of another epoch in American banking.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

The Northwest district bankers of Ward, Mountrail, Renville, Burke, Williams, Divide, McKenzie, McLean and McHenry counties, North Dakota, met at Minot recently. The banquet was served by the Daughters of Isabella and was followed by a concert and vaudeville-smoker in charge of R. E. Barron, H. H. Kemper and Grant S. Youmans. Better farming was one of the special subjects for discussion. President Ed S. Healey of Glenburn presided.

State in Prosperous Condition

Cities may borrow eventually from the state of Minnesota, instead of worrying about 10-year, 20-year and 30-year bond terms and their effect on the sale of the securities. The statement by the auditor, Samuel G. Iverson, as indicating the probable wealth of the state, is a revelation to many financial men. In the decade the auditor believes the income from state school trust funds will reach $5,000,000 a year. After 1920 the increase will be rapid. The income is now $2,000,000.

"It is really hard to believe how rich the state is," said Mr. Iverson. Last year the state iron mine royalties amounted to $500,000 and this year that amount will be doubled. The state has contracts with various ore property lessors which run for thirty-six years. The average amounts to be mined for this period is 7,000,000 tons annually, or 252,000,000 during the leasehold. The royalties on this will amount to $63,000,000 at 25 cents a ton. In addition there are more than a hundred undeveloped properties and the ore in sight on them is estimated at 250,000,000 tons. What the undeveloped and unexplored state lands will ultimately bring to the state no man knows, but the conservative estimate of $200,000,000 within a forty-year period has been made by Mr. Iverson and other experts on the resources of the state.

Store to Sell Bonds

The Golden Rule store in St. Paul has bought $100,000 bonds for local improvements and will offer them for sale like other merchandise. The store bought the bonds from the First National, the Northwestern Trust Company and C. O. Kalman & Co. The president of the company that operates the store said the customers will get the bonds for what they cost. Mayor H. P. Keller is pleased with the idea as offering the people an opportunity to obtain a good security and because he believes it will help build the city up.

Bank President to Be Tried

The Minnesota supreme court has decided that President John Sharp of the State Bank of Commerce, Winnebago, Minn., must stand trial for withholding information from the state bank superintendent. H. W. Parker, the cashier, is serving five years for embezzlement. Sharp inherited $150,000, moved in from his farm and began banking. He cited as his defense that he paid little attention to details. Commenting on this, the court said:

"The construction contended for by defendant as applied to reports made by executive officers of banks would almost wholly destroy the effectiveness of the law. This bank was the custodian of the funds of its depositors. Its principal business was to invest and safeguard their funds. This defendant was chief executive officer of the bank. It was his business to know whether the reports he made were true or false, and he cannot be heard to say that he possessed no knowledge of the truth or falsity of the reports which he made pursuant to a call of the superintendent of banks."

The court also upholds the 1909 law establishing a department of banks and making it a felony to withhold information required or to misstate facts.

St. Paul Deposits Increase

Figures are quoted from the collection obtained by the publicity committee of the St. Paul Association of Commerce to show that western business men, farmers and financial institutions have abandoned the idea they must do their banking in New York, and have transferred their business to St. Paul. "In less than thirteen years," reads the Pioneer Press, "the deposits in St. Paul banks have increased from a trifle over $23,000,000 to nearly $58,000,000. Experts say St. Paul already is the greatest financial center of any city of its size in the United States."

Tariff Legislation Not Affecting Minneapolis

"Minneapolis is almost immune from business depression due to work on the tariff," said A. A. Crane, vice-president of the First National of Minneapolis. "There is scarcely any agitation in the business world so far as Minneapolis is concerned, that can be traced to tariff legislation," he said. "We are too close to the soil to be affected by it even if there were. Great manufacturing centers are somewhat affected by a depression due to proposed changes in the tariff, but no trouble is discernible here.

"This is an agricultural district. The only thing that seriously affects our interests is a crop failure. So long as crops remain good, or there is no widespread or general failure in all lines of farm produce, Minneapolis will con-

Charles Horton, 78 years old, president of the First National of Winona, Minn., and founder of the Empire Lumber Company, is dead.

R. S. Davis has been chosen president of the First National of Stillwater, Minn., to succeed the late Roscoe H. Bronson. James D. Bronson, brother of the latter, is made vice-president.

The old national bank building at Fergus Falls, Minn., wrecked in 1883, has been sold for $15,000. The building was one of the best in the city and always center of business life. The bank occupies a new building.

The bankers of Rosebud county, S. D., have settled on May 30th as the date for the meeting of the association at Winner.

In the writing contest financed by the First National of Minneapolis, the Minneapolis samples from the sixth, seventh and eighth grade public schools were first out of thirteen cities. Seven of the twenty that entered failed to make good. An association of penmanship supervisors of national scope is expected to result. Dubuque, Iowa, was second and Brockton, Mass., third. Other competing cities were New Haven, Oberlin, Atlantic City, Sioux City, Fort Worth, Hartford, Boone, Lafayette, Long Beach, Lincoln. The judges reported on the bank contest: "Minneapolis deserves special mention, and to us, who are more or less familiar with writing, it seems incredible that such results could be obtained in penmanship in the grades. The supervisors and his co-workers are deserving great credit for what they have accomplished."

BANKERS ON TOUR

Aberdeen, S. D., May 20th.—Several bankers are aboard the second annual tour train of the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association over the Milwaukee and Northern Pacific roads to Miles City, Mont., and return. They are visiting bankers at the seventy stops that are to be made. The train is a duplicate of the famous Olympian coast train, with the addition of compartment and dining car to take care of the big crowd. Dan Healey, veteran dining-car conductor on the Pioneer Limited out of Chicago, is cuisine manager to take care of the bankers and other business men. The bankers representing five Minneapolis institutions are taking active part in all the pranks: First National, George Orde, vice-president; Security National, Stanley Bezoier, assistant cashier; Northwestern National, R. E. MacGregor, assistant cashier; Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, J. R. Byers; Scandinavian-American National, E. L. Mattson, cashier.

WILL ASK GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF BANK SYSTEM.

Provisions of the banking and currency bill which Senator Owen will submit to the banking and currency committee of the senate were made public this week. A feature of the bill is absolute control of the proposed new banking system by the government of the United States.

The bill provides:

First.—The mobilization of all bank reserves in reserve banks incorporated for the purpose.

Second.—The issuance of emergency currency in the form of United States notes, redeemable in gold upon demand at any of the reserve banks or at the treasury of the United States, such notes to constitute a first lien on the assets of the reserve banks and further to be secured by prime commercial paper set apart in the vaults of the banks for this purpose as special security.

Third.—The system to be under the control of the United States through a board of seven governors, three of whom shall be the secretary of the treasury, the comptroller of the currency, and the secretary of agriculture, and the others to be experts in commerce, transportation, and manufacturing, to be selected by the president.

The capital of the reserve banks will be furnished by the existing banks, for which the new banks will act as banks of discount.

Combined Capital $160,000,000.

Senator Owen estimates the combined capitalization will amount to $160,000,000. The reserve banks will be government depositories and the senator estimates they will hold government deposits amounting to over $200,000,000. In addition to this they will hold the reserve of all the other national banks, which, Senator Owen calculates, will amount to nearly $700,000,000.

Thus it is planned the banks will have cash resources at once of not less than $1,100,000,000, most of it available for the rediscount of commercial paper, and in addition will have the power to issue emergency currency in times of extreme stringency. The Owen plan contemplates the division of the country into districts, in each of which the banks will be formed into an association and in each of which shall be established a reserve bank. The districts will be formed around an existing commercial and financial center, in each of which one of the reserve banks will be located.

These centers are Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Atlanta, New Orleans, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Minneapolis, St. Paul, San Francisco, and Portland.

By C. C. Burford

General rains are badly needed in central Illinois although northern Illinois has had frequent rains during the past fortnight. Oats are not doing well through the central Illinois counties and a light crop is anticipated unless there is an abundance of rain in the near future. The rains seemed to have favored the counties immediately south and west of Chicago more than those in the strictly "downstate" portions. Corn is practically all planted but it, too, in many localities needs far more rain than it is receiving. Country banks have been generally busier throughout May than in April and there is activity in most lines of trade. Grain has been moving to market more freely in the past two weeks and this movement will tend in many cases to ease the demand for money.

Suspected Bank Robbers Caught

Two suspects who are believed to have had a prominent part in the blowing of the bank at North Henderson recently have been arrested and they have been positively identified as having camped for several days in the neighborhood of the bank. The cashier has identified a sack which has been found as having been in use in his bank and also has identified some of the coin wrappers found. The men are being held in the Warren county jail at Monmouth. Photographs have been taken of the suspects and sent to Chicago in order to learn something if possible of their police records.

Central of Peoria Ready to Build

The new building of the Central National of Peoria, previously described in THE CHICAGO BANKER, soon will be begun and the bank is now in temporary quarters at 105 South Adams Street. The moving into temporary quarters had been gradually done for about a week but the "final dash" for the temporary home was made Saturday evening, May 17th, when "fifteen young men casually walked out of the Central National Bank and started leisurely down Adams Street, each carrying an innocent looking suitcase." According to the Peoria reporter, whose language we have just quoted, "no one in the crowds rushing home to supper suspected that close to a million dollars in securities and cash were being transported." The bank will be in its temporary quarters for about ten months when the magnificent new ten-story bank and office building which will be erected this summer will be ready for occupancy. The new structure will rank with the best bank buildings in the entire Central West.

Peoples Bank of Bloomington

The Peoples Bank, the interior of whose beautiful bank building was pictured in full page length in last week's issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER, is making a specialty of the accounts of banks in the smaller towns around that city, with the result that this bank is one of the largest clearing houses in the state outside of Chicago. The bank is using a very large supply of printers' ink and some excellent publicity matter is being written by the bank chiefly upon savings and thrift.

The building, which was erected by the E. Jackson Casse Company of Chicago, is one of the show-places in Bloomington, a city noted for the elegance and modern equipment of its business buildings. Few cities in the Central West have a more modern business center than Bloomington. F. D. Marquis is the president, Adlai E. Stevenson and L. H. Weldon are the vice-presidents, and W. L. Moore is the cashier.

LaFayette Funk Avenue is the name given to a street in the state fair grounds at Springfield, thereby honoring a former president of the state board of agriculture, a director of the State National and vice-president of the State Trust and Savings, both of Bloomington, and a prominent farmer and stock-raiser.

Andrew Russel, the well-known Jacksonville banker, prominent in republican state politics and a former state treasurer of Illinois, has been named a director of the Illinois State Historical Society. Mr. Russel has filled many public offices and they seem to continue to come to him. A few weeks ago he was named Noble Grand of Illini Lodge, I. O. O. F. of Jacksonville, being elected from the floor to that office. With one of the largest lodges in the state and with a new temple soon to be used, the position requires large executive ability.

The city funds of Peoria now are being carried with the First National of that city, which bank is the official depository of the city.

Edward F. Trefz, an officer of the chamber of commerce of the United States, was one of the speakers to address the Bloomington Commercial Club banquet. Mr. Trefz, who is well-known to many bankers, spoke upon the subject "Unorganized Power." Illinois cities, while always keen and alert for business, are just beginning to realize the immense wealth

THE large and steadily increasing number of banks purchasing securities of us is evidence of the growing appreciation of first mortgage real estate bonds on the part of the most conservative and experienced investors. ¶ We own and offer First Mortgage Bonds secured by the highest class of improved, income-producing, centrally-located Chicago property, maturing serially in two to ten years, netting 5½ to 6 per cent. ¶ These bonds are legal investments for national banks.

NEW BUILDING FOR FIRST OF CHARLESTON

Work has been begun upon the new building which is being erected for the First National of Charleston, Ill. It will occupy the site which the bank has used for many years and will be two stories in height with the banking room upon the first floor and offices upon the second. Professional men will be invited to use these offices and the Charleston Home and Loan Association will have quarters in the building as the First National is the depository for that organization.

The bank was established in 1865 and is the oldest bank in Coles county. Its charter number is 763. The capital is $100,000 and the surplus is $125,000 while the deposits (April 4th) stood at $450,000, the largest amount ever held by a Charleston bank at that season of the year.

Fred G. Hudson, a member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, is the cashier and a member of the board of directors and of the building committee. Before going into the banking business Mr. Hudson had a wide experience in the lumber business and he is therefore an able judge of building values. Will J. Kenny, with the bank for twenty-three years, is the president; James A. Connolly is the vice-president, and F. R. Blackford, assistant cashier. Since the building committee was named the bank has lost by death George R. Chambers, formerly vice-president and the largest individual stockholder in the institution. Frank K. Dunn, chief justice of the Illinois supreme court, is one of the directors.

The banking room will be furnished in the latest approved style, the equipment to be furnished by the E. Jackson Casse Company of Chicago, who are the general contractors for the building. The counters and fixtures will be of imported Italian marble and quarter-sawed white oak. The lighting effect will be by hidden indirect lights and the lobby of the bank will be abundantly furnished with check counters and public seats. The floor of the lobby, laid with compressed cement and quartz tile, will be most beautiful. The bank will provide a semi-private conference room, a private conference room, directors' room, ladies' rest room, telephone booth and the most complete safety deposit department which money can secure. No needed expense has been spared in the plans for the exterior and the interior of the structure, and there are few banks in cities of the seven thousand population class which will have so modern a building as the First of Charleston is erecting.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

Discussion of the much mooted bank deposit guaranty bill was reopened at Madison late last week at a special hearing following the introduction of a substitute amendment to the original bill incorporating certain features of the Texas law. The only material change embodied is in reducing the percentage to be set aside by the banks for the guaranty fund to one-tenth of one per cent. This would mean the setting aside of $185,000 annually. When the fund reaches $2,000,000 there are to be no further additions unless failures should make replenishment necessary. President E. A. Dow of the W. B. A. appeared with other state bankers at the hearing, defending the position of the association by reviewing the efforts of the bankers to form a mutual insurance company among themselves, which will be one of the chief subjects to come before the June meeting. Charges of unnecessary delay on the part of the bankers, by Senator Husting, who introduced the bill, were indignantly denied. Those bankers attending the hearing included F. J. Carr, Hudson; James K. Ilsley, Milwaukee; H. A. Maxwell, Princeton; Paul McKee, Oconomowoc; F. E. Woodward, Watertown; B. Heinrichs, Racine, and George D. Bartlett, secretary of the W. B. A.

Oppose Tax Law Amendment

On Friday Milwaukee bankers and others appeared before the joint legislative committee on finance to oppose the state tax commission's bill amending the tax laws and providing that tax receipts on bank stocks shall not be an offset against income taxes on other classes of personal property. Prof. T. S. Adams of the commission argued that under the present law owners of bank stock are given an advantage over owners of mercantile or other personal property in the matter of taxation.

No Bids for Bonds

Because of the tightness of the bond market the city has been unable to secure a single bid on the $300,000 sewer issue and $175,000 Buffalo Street bridge issue, tieing up the city's activities to a considerable extent.

Wisconsin Notes

Only 1 per cent of the money in the Milwaukee postal savings bank has been invested in postal savings bank bonds, although June 2d has been set as the last day for the exchange of the present issue. Three hundred thousand dollars is on deposit, of which $30,000 is invested in bonds.

Group Three of the W. B. A. will hold its meeting in Fond du Lac on May 27th. Group Seven meets at La Crosse May 28th and Group Six at Grand Rapids May 29th.

Frederick D. Underwood, president of the Erie railroad, while in Milwaukee on business this week advocated a permanent tariff commission composed of economic experts appointed for life as the only solution to tariff disputes. This, he said, would mean absolute divorce of the tariff problem from politics.

President L. J. Petit of the Wisconsin National, with his son, Clement, is fishing in Canada.

Oliver Clyde Fuller of the Wisconsin Trust Company will officiate at the formal opening of the summer season of the Country Club, of which he is president, before departing for Europe with his family. The buffet luncheon with which he and Mrs. Fuller will observe the opening of the season is scheduled for May 30th.

Apprehended and convicted of successfully passing sixteen forged checks within three months after his release from Waupun state penitentiary on a burglary sentence, Arthur Langenbecker, arrested last week by the Milwaukee police, will return to the penal institution for two more years. The checks were all for small amounts and were cashed by saloon and store keepers of Milwaukee.

The Lincoln County Bank of Merrill moved to its new quarters this week.

The Peoples Savings and Trust Company of Green Bay was incorporated this week with capital of $10,000. The Peoples State Bank of Whitehall has been incorporated with capital of $15,000. The Monroe County Bank of Sparta has increased its capital from $50,000 to $100,000. The Citizens Bank of Glidden has been organized with $10,000 capital.

IRVING NATIONAL'S NEW QUARTERS

The new quarters of the Irving National Bank in New York are attracting almost as many visitors as the towering Woolworth Building, in which the new banking rooms are located. The Irving's new home occupies practically all of the two floors immediately above the street level. These have been thrown into one spacious banking room with a mezzanine.

This great room is treated architecturally in a modified form of the Gothic style, thus harmonizing with the Woolworth Building, which is a Gothic adaptation. Cass Gilbert, the architect of the building, also designed the banking quarters.

A broad marble stairway continuing the central corridor of the building leads directly to the new banking rooms and constitutes their main entrance. It is formed of two flights of stairs, on either side being a massive balustrade of Skyros Alpha marble. A large clock dial in wrought bronze is over the entrance doorway to the bank at the head of these stairs. A smaller stairway directly adjacent to the Broadway entrance provides a second entrance to the bank.

The columns in the main banking room and the wall linings are composed of Caen stone. The counter bases are fashioned from Tavernelle marble, native marble beng used for the floors. A rather free use of wrought bronze fittings is an interesting detail in this room. The bronze counter screens have been continued to the full height of the ceilings and enclosing the mezzanine. The visitor will also note rather more color than New Yorkers have come to expect in their banking interiors. The Caen stone is a warm buff tint, and the ceiling in ornamental plaster panels also shows much color in the way of blues, grays and golds; these tints, however, being quite subdued. At the intersection of each ceiling panel there is a drop containing an electric light.

As the light filters in through the tinted skylight from the light-well there is nothing to indicate that overhead towers 700 feet of steel and masonry. Nor does one consider as he leans against the Caen columns, crowned with a wreath of delicate Gothic tracery, that within each column is a massive steel beam, bearing a weight of the pyramids.

After reminding you of these modern wonders, the Irving officials turn aside to point out what might be called an anomaly in modern banking. That is the fact that the arrange-

The volume of business transacted at the financial institutions during the past week has been quite large; rates held firm at 5½ to 6 per cent on call and time loans. New York exchange was in fair offering and good demand, and the premium rate between banks was advanced slightly. Commercial paper was discounted at 5½ to 6 per cent, the greater portion of the loans being made at the latter figure.

Declares Dividend

The regular semiannual dividends of $2.50 a share were declared on Tuesday by the board of directors of the Mortgage Trust Company and the Mortgage Guaranty Company at meetings held at the office of the companies. The capital stock of each company is $500,000 and the dividend is payable May 28th.

Investment Bankers' Meeting

The third quarterly meeting of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America was held on Friday and Saturday of last week in St. Louis. Twenty-five of the thirty-two governing officers of the association were in attendance representing nearly every part of the country. The reports of the legislative committee and the counsel of the association were given chief consideration at this gathering. After a lengthy discussion of the status of "Blue Sky" legislation, in which it developed that seventeen states already have enacted statutes to regulate the purchase and sale of securities, the board of governors passed the following resolution in the interest of legitimate investment banking:

"Resolved: That the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America having fully considered the so-called "Blue Sky" laws which have been passed and are now under consideration in various states, commend such laws as will protect the investment public from fraud and urge upon its members the fullest co-operation with state officials having charge of the enforcement of such laws.

"That they feel, however, that some of said laws are contrary to the right of free contract and demand the filing of such reports and statements as will make legitimate investment dealings impossible; so much so that they feel that parts, at least, of such laws are impossible of enforcement.

"The board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association recommend:—First: That all members act together in the matter of compliance with state requirements. Second: That where laws are clearly unconstitutional or impossible of enforcement, joint action be taken to test or amend such in order that the public be helpfully protected and legitimate business be placed upon a satisfactory basis."

The attitude of the association toward the present proposed income tax also was considered along with the briefs recently filed by the counsel of the Investment Bankers Association with the committee on finance of the United States senate. This brief was filed by the association on behalf of the investor for the purpose of urging such amendments to the pending income tax bill "as may seem necessary to carry out what the association believes to be the intent of its framers, and to make the proposed law workable and just in its operation." Chicago was selected as the meeting place of the next convention of the association. This gathering will convene early this fall. The date has not yet been determined. Cleveland's invitation for the next meeting of the board of governors was accepted. This meeting probably will take place in August. A committee of five was elected to report to the next convention of the association on the matter of nomination of officers for the next fiscal year. This committee consists of J. Herndon Smith, St. Louis, chairman; Charles A. Otis, Cleveland; Stedman Buttrick, Boston; Henry L. Duer, Baltimore, and Charles W. McNear, Chicago. St. Louis, where the board members were entertained in their gathering last week, is represented on the governing list of the Investment Bankers Association by William R. Compton, J. Herndon Smith, and Harold Kauffman, who offered an unusually attractive social program to the visiting bankers.

Wants to See Trust Books

George E. W. Luehrmann has applied to the circuit court for a writ of mandamus to compel the American Trust and the Title Guaranty Trust to allow him to have the books of the companies examined. He owned stock in the Lincoln Trust and Title Company, the assets of which were taken over by the Title Guaranty Company, he states. He declined a proposition to take stock in the Title Guaranty for his stock in the Lincoln Trust and brought suit for the alleged value of his stock.

LARGER PAID CIRCULATION IN THE MIDDLE WEST THAN ANY THREE OF ITS COMPETITORS COMBINED

THE NEW A. B. A. CONSTITUTION

The full report of the committee on constitution at the Briarcliff meeting of the council has been read and digested by those who take a useful interest in A. B. A. matters. It probably will take rank as the ablest document ever produced before the council. Months of the hardest work had been done upon it by the very ablest men in the association. It isn't revolutionary but it promises to be effective. The one thing which may produce a fight upon it is the cutting off of the sections from direct representation upon the council. This was done to cut off the over representation of any state. The last big change was for a similar purpose. Every reader can remember how the big reserve center banks offered employment to members of council and thus at one time New York and Chicago had seventeen members (have 14 now), and all of the ablest, most active type. Then the constitution was amended so that when a member of council took employment in another state, he ceased to be a member. The present proposed change is not more radical. The state's representation on the governing body will depend entirely upon its A. B. A. membership. It cannot augment its representation through the sections as is done now. On the nominating committee each state will have but one vote, and thus accounts are balanced up nicely. Expenses will be cut enormously, both at the annual conventions and at the mid-year meeting of the council. A system of office management will be possible, which will be more effective and at less cost.

It is promised that copies of the full document will be sent to members as soon as possible, and not less than sixty days before the Boston convention. Members will not lose sight of the fact that a bare majority can adopt, but that it will require a two-thirds vote to change it. Say most of what you have to say by letter to Chairman R. E. James at Easton, Pa., or to any member of the committee. Probably the new constitution will be staged for the first day at Boston and continued as an order of business until disposed of by adoption or rejection. The making of important changes in convention will be a difficult and hazardous undertaking. The present representation of certain states through other than elective members of council is shown by the Briarcliff roll. New York is entitled to five regular members but had three members-at-large. Eight in all. Illinois had four regular and two members-at-large. Missouri had three regular and three members-at-large present. There were sixteen "extra" members all told and they give "extra" representation to the favored states, according to the committee's view, and preclude the council from being a strictly representative body. It is the idea of the committee that it shall be such and that the executive offices at 5 Nassau Street shall be a united force. The convention will decide.

PRIVATE BANK SUPERVISION IN OHIO

Several strong supervision bills were killed or sidetracked in the Ohio legislature by a lobby favoring the present system of uncontrolled private banking. The governor made a strenuous fight but the lawyer-legislators and banker-legislators made some sort of a secret combine and the true supervision bills were sidetracked for a bill which on the surface only is for supervision. Attention is directed to the bill which finally became a law. It certainly could not be called drastic legislation, even by a hardened private banker. The act is entitled "An Act to Provide for the Examination, Regulation, Supervision and Dissolution of Certain Banking Concerns." Observe that no mention is made of "private banking" in the title nor is there in the body of the new law itself. The law does not appear to apply to persons, partnerships, etc., doing a banking business, unless they happen to use certain words in naming their business. They can use them on checks, etc., it would seem.

Here is the prohibitive clause, which does not seem to prohibit anything but the use of certain names. It reads:

Section 1. That no corporation not organized under the laws of this state, or of the United States, or person, partnership or association, shall use the word "bank," "banker" or "banking" or "trust" or "trust company," or words of similar meaning in any foreign language, as a designation or name under which business may be conducted in this state unless such corporation, person, partnership or association shall submit to inspection, examination and regulation, as provided in this act. The superintendent of banks shall execute all laws in relation to corporations organized under the laws of this state or of the United States, persons, partnerships and associations using the word "bank," "banker" or "banking," or "trust" or "trust company," or words of similar meaning in any foreign language as a designation or name under which business is conducted in this state.

Under it "Graham & Sons," Chicago; "F. G. Farrell & Co.," Jacksonville, could go right along, unless they used some of the words in quotation marks in section 1. Busey's Bank could become "Busey's Financial Emporium." Note "no corporation not organized," with its double negative, which may be either a joker or bad English, as the future may develop. Every section in the bill which prescribes the making of reports, examinations by the bank examiner, penalties, etc., the keeping of capital, publishing of the names of partners, all depend in their application upon whether or not the private bank is a—"Person, partnership or association using the word 'bank,' 'banker' or 'banking' or 'trust' or 'trust company' or words of similar meaning in any foreign language as a designation or name under which business may be conducted in this state, now transacting or hereafter desiring to transact a banking business in this state."

The sentence here quoted is appended to every restriction in every paragraph of the new law and doubtless will nullify the act toward all who wish to avoid publicity and supervision. This assumption is almost conclusive when one reads the opening clause in any section, at random, as section 4, which begins thus:

Section 4. Upon becoming satisfied that a corporation not organized under the laws of this state, or of the United States, or person, partnership or association, using the word "bank," "banker," or "banking" or "trust" or "trust company," or words of similar meaning in any foreign language, as a designation or name under which business is conducted in this state, has refused to pay its depositors in accordance with the terms, etc.

The superintendent of banks shall not take possession of the property and business of any such corporation, person, partnership or association which was doing business in this state prior to the time of the passage of this act for the failure to comply with the provisions of this act, as to transactions made prior to the passage of this act or renewals or settlements and adjustments of such, etc.

Other sections repeal the exemption clause and one specifically states that the whole act does not apply, etc., to concerns "not coming within the purview of this act." To "come within" he must use the words quoted as above in the various sections of the law. If the framers had intended real supervision they would have made it apply to persons "doing a banking business or exercising any of the functions of a bank of deposit." As it is, dry goods firms can have "savings departments" and individuals can keep on doing as they please.

To those who wish to come under its provisions the new Ohio supervision is as mild as a June zephyr and quite as "harmless." The superintendent of banks "may" do a few things, but they are not radical. In short, it is a supervision bill with the supervision left out.

OPPORTUNITY IN A GOOD CAUSE

Festus J. Wade, finished orator, is a practical-minded man as well. His was the "big" address at the trust companies' dinner. In opening his talk, Mr. Wade said: "I have come a thousand miles from the interior of this country to make an urgent appeal for help, for aid, for assistance. I appeal to those from the Far West, the Middle West, the North and the South for help; I appeal to the New York bankers present, and also those ambitious to be New York bankers. I appeal to you regardless of your political affiliation, social or financial condition, or religious belief, for help."

THE NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL BANK
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

THE monthly survey of Northwestern conditions published by this bank receives a generous and growing measure of public approval. Its purpose is the review of the current financial, industrial and agricultural situations in the bank's extensive territory, and the material for the summary is drawn from its own direct experience and from that of its many influential connections. Anyone desiring his name upon the mailing list of this trade letter may have it placed thereupon without charge.

The oration made a splendid hit, and now Mr. Wade has had it printed for circulation. With it goes an earnest personal letter asking the banker to urge upon his congressman and his senator the need for immediate currency legislation—"at this session if possible." He urges the banker also to write to the interstate commerce commission upon the necessity for allowing the 5 per cent horizontal raise in rates. He gives the strongest and soundest of reasons, both in the letter and in the printed address, for his conclusions. If you are not on President Wade's mailing list write him a note. You may be assured he will value your inquiry and appreciate your aid.

A NEW AND VALUABLE SERVICE FOR BANKERS

In another column will be found a copy of a letter sent to bankers by the Illinois Realization Company of Chicago. The proposition advanced is so obviously advantageous to bankers that it is sure to receive most favorable attention, for instances such as referred to are bound to occur in even the best regulated banks from time to time. The growth and complexity of business in this country call for the services of an expert at every turn, and beyond question many banking losses could have been averted had services such as are offered by the Illinois Realization Company been secured. The Illinois Realization Company has already obtained an enviable reputation among bankers for similar services performed in the past, and also in reorganization and liquidation in many very large estates, and the service now offered fills a long felt want. Its value to bankers is so apparent that it is a surprise that it has not been attempted before, but, like so many other useful agencies that in course of time become customs, somebody must make the start.

NATIONAL RESERVE BANK

National Reserve Bank of Kansas City, Mo., opened for business March 1, 1910, and since that date has enjoyed a steady, consistent growth. It is capitalized at $1,200,000, has a surplus fund amounting to $165,000 and undivided profits in excess of $105,000; deposits at the time of the last call were $7,295,951. The officers are John T. M. Johnston, president; C. B. McCluskey, Amos Gipson, F. H. Burrow, Jno. C. Knorpp, W. E. Halsell and F. G. Robinson, vice-presidents; J. L. Johnston, cashier, and C. A. Burkhardt, assistant cashier.

L. P. HILLYER PRESIDENT OF GEORGIA BANKERS

At the convention of the Georgia Bankers Association held in Macon Friday and Saturday of last week, L. P. Hillyer, vice-president of the American National of that city, for twenty years secretary of the association and for the past two years the first vice-president, was elected to the presidency, succeeding Benjamin W. Hunt of Eatonton. E. W. Stetson, president of the Citizens Bank of Macon, was elected as Georgia's representative on the executive council of the American Bankers Association, succeeding Mr. Hillyer. The convention next year will meet in Augusta.

Mr. Hillyer acted as toastmaster at the annual banquet of the bankers held in the Hotel Dempsey, at which there were nearly four hundred persons in attendance. At the close of the banquet Mills B. Lane of Savannah, first president of the association, arose and presented Mr. Hillyer with a handsome silver pitcher, more than two feet high, as a token from the association. With the pitcher was presented a framed engraved set of resolutions passed by the bankers at their last annual meeting at Atlantic Beach, Fla., May 24, 1912.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Jacob M. Ford, a veteran banker of northwest Missouri, died at his home in St. Joseph May 17th after a long illness. Mr. Ford was one of the wealthiest men in this wealthy city and had lived in St. Joseph twenty-three years, coming from Forest City, Mo., in 1889. Mr. Ford began his career as a blacksmith, but soon after moving to St. Joseph he became associated with John S. Brittain in the wholesale grocery business. He was one of the incorporators of the Saxton National Bank in St. Joseph, and in 1896, when the Saxton National was merged with the Schuster-Hax National, he was chosen president of the consolidated institution, which became the First National Bank of St. Joseph. Since that time he was continuously a member of the directorate of this institution, retiring as president in 1907. Mr. Ford was identified with many of the largest business and industrial enterprises of St. Joseph and northwest Missouri and had a wide acquaintance among bankers and business men.

Hunt Robbers With Motorcycles

The Kansas Short Grass Motor Cycle Club, which is to be the successor to the old Anti-Horse Thief Association, is now well organized and has reported to Governor Hodges and Bank Commissioner Sawyer for duty. This patrol will be unique in many respects and Kansas will be the first of the states to have such an institution covering every county in the state. The members will receive no pay except participation in rewards, and 1,750 have been enrolled to date. No man will be eligible for duty who has a known record for reckless riding or one who has violated the etiquette of motor cycling. The principal business of the organization will be to hunt down criminals of all kinds, and especially bank robbers. Phony bank robbers will attempt to escape in motor cars and the force of a given county will be called upon for action without warning. Governor Hodges and Commissioner Sawyer agree that this organization may be made into a powerful machine in the interests of law and order.

Value of Tornado Insurance

One of the lessons of the recent tornado in Nebraska, which devastated a part of the residential section of Omaha, is the value of tornado insurance as mortgage security. That storm found scores of splendid buildings without tornado insurance and the losses on this account will be very heavy. Following the example of some of the other states, the Nebraska state banking department has notified the Nebraska building, savings and loan associations to require tornado as well as fire policies on loans on improved property.

Protest Against Treasury Order

Omaha bankers have joined in a protest against the recent order of the federal treasury department which will charge United States depositories 2 per cent interest on funds held. President H. W. Yates of the Nebraska National believes that some of the Omaha depositories will send their deposits back to the treasury as unprofitable accounts. Mr. Yates says there is no money in keeping government money when 2 per cent must be paid for it.

K. C. Bank to Nationalize

Notice has been served that the Stock Yards Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, Sixteenth and Genesee streets, will nationalize under the name of the Stock Yards National Bank, with an increase of capital from $100,000 to $200,000. The change will become effective July 1st. This is an old-established bank which, until January last, had a capital of only $25,000. At that time control was secured by Charles E. Waite, formerly vice-president of the Drovers National of Kansas City, and his associates, among whom were A. H. Waite, president of the Joplin (Mo.) National; W. S. McLucas, vice-president of the First National of St. Joseph, Mo., and Ross M. Clark and C. B. Goodell, formerly connected with the Drovers National. Many of the largest bankers of Kansas City are interested in this bank as stockholders.

Bankers Go to Panama

It was a merry party of Texas bankers and their families that sailed away for a trip to Panama at the conclusion of the twenty-ninth annual convention of the Texas Bankers Association at Galveston. In charge of the excursion was Hoskins Foster, cashier of the City National of Galveston, and in the party were: Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Austin and son of Bryan; J. C. Keith of Dawson; B. L. Sanders of Hubbard; J. W. Cochran and son, Livingston; J. L. Jones and C. Border, Rule; T. C. Morgan, Jr., and W. D. Sessum, Longview; R. J. Gaston, Mineola; C. W. Pflugger, Pfluggerville; Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Barnes, Lampassas; J. D. Patterson, Tyler; Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Key, Lampassas; R. F. Riley, Teague; J. C. Paul, Slayton; Mrs. H. B. Fall and Mrs. J. P. Carter, Houston; P. A. Presnall and W. Adams, Alice; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Cunningham and P. H. Millard, Beaumont; L. L. Luth, Galveston; J. A. Thompson, Corsicana; Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Carter, Houston; R. S. Nixon and E. A. Lilly, Pearsall.

Central West Notes

A deal has been closed whereby the Maryville (Mo.) National, one of the oldest financial institutions in northwest Missouri, and the Gillam, Bellows & Pierce Loan Company of that place will reorganize into the Farmers Trust Company. The capital stock of the bank is at present $100,000, but this will be increased to $200,000. George T. Wilsey will be president of the consolidation and S. H. Kemp, cashier.

At a recent dinner of the St. Joseph, Mo., Credit Men's Association one of the principal addresses was made by W. L. Buechle, vice-president of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City.

Herbert E. Wright, son of H. P. Wright, president of the H. P. Wright Investment Company of Kansas City, was drowned while riding in a canoe on Lake Mendota, Wis., a few days ago. Young Wright was a junior in the Wisconsin University, and was 21 years old.

Edward Carroll, one of the oldest and best-known men in Kansas, has been elected president of the Leavenworth National Bank.

The City Center Bank of Kansas City, which has been open for business only three weeks, is proud of the fact that it has $111,765 in deposits.

One of the largest mortgages ever recorded in Kansas was placed on file at Saline last week. The mortgage was given by the Union Pacific Railroad to the Equitable Trust Company of New York and authorizes the company to issue bonds not to exceed $200,000,000. The mortgage covers practically all of the Union Pacific system.

Bank Commissioner Sawyer of Kansas has issued a combined statement of the condition of the 908 state and 211 national banks in Kansas, which shows deposits aggregating $201,704,697, with better than 30 per cent in reserve. It is the strongest showing for this particular season of the year ever made by the banks of Kansas.

The pioneer banking firm of Baxter & Co. of Ida Grove, Mo., has dissolved, J. R. Baxter taking over the interests of J. W. Reed, who will retire from business and live in California.

R. O. Wunderlich, formerly paying teller of the State National of Oklahoma City, Okla., has been appointed manager of the Oklahoma City Clearing House Association, to succeed Fred G. Dennis. The latter has purchased the State National of Capitol Hill. He was formerly secretary of the Oklahoma state banking board.

A shortage has been found in the books of the Farmers Bank of Smithville, Mo., which, it is believed, will reach $50,000. It is said that an officer of the bank has admitted to an examiner that he made some bad loans and then forged signatures to notes to cover up the losses.

Farmers and Drovers State of Whitney, Dawes county, Neb., has been granted a charter and will begin business with $15,000 capital.

The Texas department of banking has authorized the following reserve agents for state banks: For the Guaranty State of Lindale, the Commonwealth National of Dallas; for the First State of Lingleville, the First National of Forth Worth; for the Security Trust and Savings of El Paso, the Liberty National of New York, Fort Dearborn National of Chicago, Boatman's Bank of St. Louis, Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City and Austin National of Austin.

Among the visiting bankers in Kansas City's financial district last week were: D. H. Smith, vice-president of the Third National of Sedalia, Mo.; J. B. Shelby, president of the Bank of Bates City, Mo.; Fred T. Perkins, president of the Oswego (Kan.) State; J. B. Case, vice-president of the Abilene (Kan.) National; S. L. Stuckey, cashier of the Lathrop (Mo.) Bank; Colin S. Campbell, cashier of the City State, Oklahoma City, Okla.; J. F. Holton, cashier of the Citizens State, Edna, Kan.; C. F. J. E. Davis of Harlem has purchased the controlling interest of W. H. Johnson in the State Savings at Logan and has been made president of the institution. Mr. Johnson has been connected with the bank for twenty-five years and has been president seven years. He retires because of ill health. C. L. Isbel remains as cashier and L. C. Stuart as assistant.

Des Moines, May.—Secretary P. W. Hall has issued the official program for the annual convention of the I. B. A., which meets in Des Moines May 27th and 28th. The names of the speakers already have appeared in these columns. Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock President Shade will call the convention to order. Mayor Hanna will welcome the bankers and Charles D. Ellis of Charles City will respond. Then will come the president's annual address and reports of the officers and committees. Governor Clarke will then speak and President Pearson of Ames College will give an address on "What is Being Done for Agriculture in Iowa." At 1:30 in the afternoon Hon. W. I. Nolan of Minnesota will speak. At 2:30 the convention will adjourn and everybody will see Denver and Des Moines play ball at the expense of the Des Moines Clearing House Associaton.

In the evening there will be a special stag affair at the Auditorium. Wednesday morning J. A. S. Pollard of Fort Madison will talk on "Progress and the Banker." J. M. Parsons, attorney for the I. B. A., will talk on "The New Trust Company Law." The election of officers will be held and adjournment will be taken. At 1:30 P. M. the bankers go to Ames, where W. C. Brown of the New York Central will speak. A box lunch will be served on the campus at Ames College in the evening.

In the meantime the visiting ladies are going to be well entertained. Tuesday afternoon the women folks will be taken for an automobile ride over the city. At 6 o'clock they will be guests at dinner at the Golf and Country Club, followed by a musicale.

Plans for the entertainment of visitors are elaborate and as Secretary Hall so charmingly puts it, "you won't be sorry you came."

The expected contest for new president of the Iowa Bankers Association has ended in smoke. W. A. Hopkins, president of the State of Lamoni, has withdrawn in favor of D. L. Heinsheimer of the Glenwood National. This leaves a clear field for the well-known southern Iowa banker. The only contest left will be for treasurer.

Group Meetings

Three group meetings were held last week, winding up the season. Group Four met at McGregor, Tuesday, May 13th. Group Two met at Emmetsburg the following day and Group Three met at Nora Springs Thursday. The delegation of bankers from Des Moines, Chicago, Waterloo, Davenport, Cedar Rapids and other metropolitan centers which essayed to attend all three meetings would have found it difficult had they not chartered a special car to take them from McGregor over to Emmetsburg.

The festivities at McGregor opened with a smoker Monday night. Tuesday morning Major T. J. Sullivan gave the address of welcome and Chairman F. A. Schuetz responded. There were papers by A. L. Peterson of Postville; Wm. F. Reinecke of Strawberry Point; C. A. Larson of New Hampton. In the afternoon those on the program included F. A. O'Connor of New Hampton; Wilson W. Lampert of Chicago; F. M. Orr, Monona; George J. Homan, Dubuque; P. W. Hall, Des Moines; E. J. Curtin, Decorah. A most enjoyable boat ride preceded the banquet, which was served at the Hotel Zimmerman at 7:30, compliments of the McGregor banks.

Group Two started things with an automobile ride. This was followed by a launch ride on Lake Medium at noon; lunch was served at the Waverly Hotel. Charles H. Duhigg gave the address of welcome and Chairman E. W. Townsend responded. Representative J. W. Jacobs of Calhoun spoke on "$300 Farm Land." Senator Joe Allen of Pocahontas spoke on "Taxation." The business meeting wound up the program.

Group Three met at Nora Springs the following day. The two principal speeches were by William G. Edens of the Central Trust of Chicago, who discussed good roads, and by Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National, who spoke on "Currency Reform." The banquet in the evening was thoroughly enjoyed.

Bankers Give Views

Arthur Reynolds, who returned recently from the East, has given out several interviews of special interest to bankers. Mr. Reynolds spoke of the income tax bill, which he said discriminates against the banks as it was originally drawn. But he believes it will be rectified before the senate completes its work. The measure as it is now makes every bank a tax collector without paying it for the extra trouble, he says. On the currency question Mr. Reynolds is optimistic. He states that the ideal system is one that would use the least possible cash and extend the greatest amount of legitimate credit.

Homer A. Miller, president of the Iowa National, Des Moines, also has returned from the East with the optimistic assurance that times are better there and conditions much improved. The effect of political agitation and tariff changes has been such as to prevent the floating of larger loans that had been mapped out earlier in the year, but he says that this

Want Bankers' Opinion on Currency Legislation

Many Iowa bankers are getting letters from the representatives at Washington anent the proposed legislation on currency questions. The bankers are being asked to state their views for the guidance of the lawmakers, who are looking for some expert information to guide them through the mazes of financial reform. Congressman Towner has been quoted as saying that he doubts whether congress is ready to tackle the regional bank question. He says guaranty of bank deposits will pass the house but suffer an untimely death in the senate.

Iowa Notes

The members of the auditing committee of the I B. A. have been checking up Secretary P. W. Hall. The committee is composed of M. A. Cox of the Lyon County National, Rock Rapids; J S. Wilson of the First National, Hull; John Kirby, First National, Estherville.

The First National at Manchester has taken over the Thorpe Building, Main and Franklin, and will make extensive improvements in the structure, converting it into a first-class bank home. Fine new fixtures will be a feature of the rejuvenated structure. It is probable that the stockholders will form a loan and trust company which will be operated in connection with the bank.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Splendid business conditions, bumper crop outlook, increased attention to diversified farming and plenty of money on hand were features of the reports made by eastern Washington county vice-presidents at the second annual meeting of Group Two of the Washington Bankers Association in Spokane May 14th. Visiting and local bankers to the number of 107 attended the one-day session in the assembly room of the Old National Bank. When the various county vice-presidents were asked to report there followed a series of brief talks containing evidence that the Spokane country is on an exceedingly sound business basis. J. B. Crain of Pasco, reporting for Franklin county, said the wheat acreage is about the same as last year, and that recent rains have improved it greatly. Mr. Crain said the Northern Pacific is completing a $1,000,000 job at Pasco, and the bank clearings of the town have been $121,000 monthly. Hugh Waddell, representing Stevens county, said 63 sawmills, worth $350,000, will cut 90,000,000 feet this season, valued at $10 to $15 per thousand. The dairy industry is flourishing, alfalfa growing is on the increase, the fruit crop will be large, and farm loans are easy and in demand.

For Pend Oreille county C. F. Craig of Newport reported the lumber industry in fine shape, the cement plant is running night and day and conditions generally are splendid in all lines. Winter wheat in Adams county was never better, reported F. H. Haupt of Ritzville, who said the banks have large deposits and have cut interest rate on deposits from 6 to 5 per cent. J. W. Brislawn of Davenport, Lincoln county, created enthusiasm when he said his county had employed an agricultural expert. He reported county bank deposits $378,000 more than a year ago and said the crop prospects were excellent, with increased attention to diversified farming and dairying. The report of G. C. Jewett of Palouse, Whit man county, showed that this great wheat district also is turning attention to live stock and dairying, pursuits that have been urged by bankers for years. He said a bumper wheat crop is expected.

W. R. Baker of Colville, president of the group, presided over the convention. Officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, F. J. Wilmer, cashier, Whitman County National, Rosalia; vice-president, E. L. Farnsworth, vice-president State Bank of Wilbur; secretary-treasurer, O. M. Green, assistant to the president Exchange National, Spokane. These constitute the executive committee, together with E. W. Anderson, cashier Security State, Newport, and E. V. Klein, assistant cashier Traders National, Spokane.

The vice-presidents by counties are as follows: Adams, W. A. Pearce, cashier First National, Washtucna; Ferry, J. L. Walsh, cashier Ferry Couny State, Republic; Franklin, T. J. Cooper, cashier First National of Pasco; Lincoln, Ward Jesseph, cashier Bank of Edwall; Pend Oreille, H. A. Roff, cashier Calispell Valley Bank, Usk; Spokane, B. W. Hughes, cashier First National, Medical Lake; Stevens, George W. Seal, secretary of the Colville Loan and Trust Company; Whitman, M. A. Sherman, president of the Bank of Endicott.

A resolution, introduced by Thomas H. Brewer of the Fidelity National, Spokane, to the effect that Group Two adopt a minimum charge of 15 cents to cover the registry fee on all drafts presented for collection, as was voted by Group One at Ephrata last week, was voted down. Resolutions embracing the following features were passed without discussion when presented by F. J. Wilmer of Rosalia, chairman of the resolutions committee: Memorializing congress to enact legislation governing the issue of currency and urging the delegations from Washington, Idaho and Montana to work for its enactment; declaring against overdrafts; declaring high interest rates on deposits to be contrary to sound banking; urging good roads extension as the best means of promoting agricultural development; urging bankers to assist constructive legislation and to discourage hasty legislation; approving the continuance in office of J. L. Mohundro, state bank examiner, and H. J. Luce, national bank examiner, and thanking the Spokane Clearing House Association for the entertainment offered.

A number of short addresses were delivered during the day, and in the evening the bankers attended a banquet at Davenport's.

To R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president and manager of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, belongs credit for securing an amendment to the income tax bill exempting interest paid on deposits in calculating incomes of corporations. In reply to a letter written by Mr. Rutter to Senator Miles Poindexter, the senator says he took Mr. Rutter's suggestion up with members of the house and those responsible for promoting the bill have agreed to make the change so as clearly to allow the deduction of such interest from the bank's income.

W. J. Ambrose, Spokane manager of the Bank of Montreal, is advertising in an effort to recover a plugged nickel. The coin has no intrinsic value, but is valued as a souvenir by Mr. Ambrose. It bears date of 1868.

F. D. Brundage of New York, assistant manager of Knauth, Nachod & Kühne, was in Spokane on business this week.

MISSOURI CONVENTION

Twenty-third annual convention of the big Missouri Bankers Association was held Tuesday and Wednesday in St. Joseph, headquarters being at the Hotel Robidouix. Address of welcome on behalf of the city was delivered by the Hon. C. D. Morris, president of the Commerce Club and on behalf of the clearing house association by President L. C. Burnes. The response was made by E. B. Clare-Avery, assistant cashier of the Merchants Laclede National of St. Louis. President R. R. Calkins then delivered his annual address, which was followed by reports from Secretary W. F. Keyser and Treasurer R. S. Hawes and appointment of two additional members of the committee on resolutions. The Hon. John H. Atwood of Kansas City talked on "Obligations." Reports then were heard from group chairmen. During the recess between the morning and afternoon sessions, each group held a meeting for the purpose of naming a place for the next group meeting and selecting a member of the nominating committee.

In the afternoon the group secretaries reported, followed by reports of the various committees of the association. Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis, vice-president of the Northwestern National and chairman of the committee on agriculture and financial development and education of the American Bankers Association, told why the bankers are interested in agriculture and then there was a legal discussion led by Wm. McC. Martin of St Louis, assistant truant officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company. Following the adjournment members of the American Bankers Association present at the convention met in the Lyceum Theater to nominate a vice-president of the A. B. A. for Missouri, and elect a delegate as member of the nominating committee of the next A. B. A. convention. At 5:30 P. M. there was held a meeting of the committee on nominations to nominate a president, vice-president and treasurer of the association for the ensuing year.

Wednesday morning F. C. Ball, president St. Louis Chapter, A. I. B., reported in behalf of the Missouri chapters of the American Institute of Banking. J. A. S. Pollard of Fort Madison, Ia., talked on progress and the banker and Dr. Jay William Hudson, professor of philosophy at the University of Missouri, spoke of "American Ideals." The Hon. John T. Mitchell of Jefferson City, bank commissioner for Missouri, was down on the program for a talk entitled "Relative Banking Conditions."

In the afternoon T. J. Davis of Cincinnati, vice-president of the First National and chairman of the executive council of the A. B. A., spoke on "Epochs in American Banking," being followed by committee reports and the election and installation of officers. At six o'clock there was a meeting of the council of administration, composed of the association officers and group chairmen elected for the ensuing year, and the retiring president.

By courtesy of the wives of St. Joseph bankers a tea for the visiting ladies was given at the St. Joseph Country Club. Tuesday evening at nine o'clock the bankers were given a ball, smoker and vaudeville entertainment at Prof. Prinz's Academy, and Wednesday afternoon a professional baseball game between St. Joseph and Denver furnished the entertainment.

Officers of the Missouri Bankers Asociation during the past year were as follows: President, R. R. Calkins; vice-president, J. B. Jennings; secretary, W. F. Keyser; treasurer, R. S. Hawes.

President's Address

President R. R. Calkins in his annual address delivered before the Missouri bankers at their convention held in St. Joseph this week told of the effective work which has been accomplished since the last convention and spoke feelingly of the efforts of all connected with the organization to advance its interests. Mr. Calkins said in part:

"The affairs of our association are in excellent shape. We now have 1,431 members, which is an increase of 59 during the past year. Only eleven banks in the entire state are nonmembers. It is difficult to understand how any Missouri banker can refrain from becoming a member in good standing of our association. The benefits derived are many and are of great value, and I sincerely believe that the payment of the annual dues is the very best investment that we can make for our banks.

"Your officers have endeavored to perform their duties in a manner that will best reflect to the success and credit of the association. The members of your committees have served you faithfully and efficiently and are entitled to a large measure of credit for the success of the work. I have had an opportunity to observe closely the work of the different committees, and am glad to testify to its value. The committeemen always have responded cheerfully and quickly to all requests; have given liberally of their time and energy and always have worked with only the best interests of the association at heart. I commend to your careful attention their printed reports.

"A new, and I may say, one of the most important of our committees is that appointed by the Council of Administration one year ago: the committee on agricultural and good roads development. Through the efficient work of the chairman and his two associates on that committee, our association has taken an important place with other associations that have become interested in this subject. This is a matter in which we, as bankers, can well afford to be interested, and to devote a portion of our time. The prosperity of that section of the United States in which we live and have our principal business is dominated, to a very large extent, by the success or failure of our agriculturists. In years when the yields are large our business is favorable; when small, our business is correspondingly affected. It is my opinion that the large crops of the past few years are a result, not only of favorable conditions, but of better farming methods; however, that there is opportunity for a great improvement cannot be doubted by anyone who has given the subject any thought. Can we not then, in our own interests, and in the interests of the community in which we live, well afford to assist in this phase of the association work?

"Another feature of our work, in which we should all take a deep interest, is the work done through our secretary's office, in the writing of burglary and fidelity insurance. In spite of the active and at times, we think, unfair competition, which the association has met, it is very gratifying to note from the secretary's report that this branch of the work shows an increase over the past year. Credit for this should be given to our very efficient secretary and his two faithful assistants; to the officers of the Equitable Surety Company of St. Louis, who have assisted us materially, and to our many friends in all parts of the state, who have stood by the association so loyally. In view of the many advantages that we have derived from this feature of our work, such as the reduction of rates, which we all know was accomplished solely through the efforts of this and other associations; the creation of a reward fund, which has enabled us to aid materially in the suppression of burglary and other crimes against bankers in this state, it is difficult to understand how any banker can allow himself to be misled by the 'fair-weather' arguments that are made to induce him to place this business elsewhere than through the secretary as state agent. A commission saved for one or two years, a small account obtained, or other arguments of like nature, should not be sufficient to persuade us to fail to support the association in this work, and to throw the burden upon the members who do remain loyal. It will be a sorry day for us if it ever should be possible to tempt a sufficient number of our bankers to adopt a penny-wise and pound-foolish policy, so as to make this feature of our work unprofitable, as in years to come we would pay for our folly many times over.

"A number of bank burglaries have been perpetrated during the past year and others have been attempted. It seems as if we will never be entirely free from visits from that dangerous class of criminals known as the 'Yeggmen.' The secretary's report, which, by the way, should be read and reread by every one of our members, contains complete information on this subject, and I will not attempt to repeat it now. Suffice it to say, that our reward system, though of course not a perfect cure, seems to be working admirably for the prevention of this crime, and for the apprehension and punishment of offenders.

"A number of our members have reported frauds committed, usually in a small way, through the means of forgery, misrepresentations, etc., and the secretary's report also will show that the association has been active in the pursuit and apprehension of this class of criminals.

"The protection that each one of us receives through this work is worth many times our annual dues, and many times the small temporary advantage we might obtain by patronizing some of our competitors. Therefore, let me urge you, brother member, to protect your own interests by placing your bank burglary and fidelity insurance throug the association.

"Eleven of the groups have held meetings during the past year. The meetings were successful, a thorough interest being taken in the subjects under discussion, and as a rule they were well attended. It is at the group meetings that our members become interested in and acquainted with the work of the association, and it is these meetings that supply very largely the interest and enthusiasm that always has been so apparent in our work. It behooves all of us that have the welfare of the association at heart, to take an interest in the work of our respective groups.

"The bankers and mercantile interests of our state are hampered, as they are in other parts of the country, by being compelled to operate under a very unsatisfactory system of banking and currency laws. Our present system, adopted at a time when the government was under a very heavy strain and required a market for its bonds, never has served, and never will serve the business community in a proper manner. Congress is now in session, and it seems to me advisable that we should adopt resolutions urging the serious consideration at this session of better banking and currency laws; laws that will provide flexibility in the use of bank reserves, a more elastic currency and a market for the re-discount of commercial paper. I hope that we will find time during our meetings to discuss this subject and, if possible, take some action upon it.

"As the time draws near for the close of my official connection with the association, I desire to take this opportunity to thank my many friends, who always have been so willing to co-operate with and assist me; the members of the different committees, who have served the association so faithfully; the group officers, who have been so loyal at all times; my brother officers, with whom I have been associated so pleasantly, and especially do I wish to express my gratitude to one who has done so much to assist and to advise; one who is as thoroughly conscientious in the performance of his duty as anyone with whom I have ever been associated, and who always has the welfare of the association at heart. I refer to our very efficient secretary, W. F. Keyser, who is largely responsible for the success of our work and for the prominent position we enjoy among other associations."

Report of Agricultural Committee

The report of the committee on agricultural and good roads development was extremely interesting and comprehensive in its scope. The committee was composed of the following gentlemen: W. C. Gordon, chairman; S. E. Trimble and W. S. Wells. At the outset it was decided to work for the accomplishment of the following things:

1. The establishment of farm advisers in as many counties as possible.
2. The placing of a good agricultural paper, dealing with Missouri needs and conditions, in the homes of the farmers.
3. The publication of bulletins on practical agricultural topics.
4. The issuance of a seed-corn testing poster, with the object in view of getting the farmers to make better selection of their seed through the medium of a test before final planting.
5. Co-operation with the state board of agriculture in the holding of institutes and with the railroads in the running of special demonstration trains.
6. The encouragement of boys to attend the short course in agriculture at Columbia.
7. Assistance in securing the passage of laws affecting favorably agriculture and vocational education and other matters related to the betterment of agricultural conditions in the state.
8. The spreading of the gospel of good roads.

There are a dozen counties in the state which either have advisers already at work or have completed all preliminary arrangements and are endeavoring to find suitable men. Over forty counties have taken definite steps looking toward the establishment of advisers, and reports from all over the state indicate that many others are conducting a campaign of education and are trying to crystallize sentiment favorable to the project, with a view of establishing such a man within the next year or two.

An arrangement was made with the publisher of the "Missouri Farmer" whereby the banks were allowed to place the paper among their farmer customers at a subscription price of 25 cents for the year. This offer was taken advantage of by 113 banks in the state, who either procured lists of subscribers to the paper or sent it to their friends and customers at their own expense. In this way nearly 20,000 copies of the paper were placed in the homes of the farmers.

At a meeting held in Sedalia the value of publicity in a campaign for better agriculture was thoroughly discussed and among other things it was decided to issue bulletins on permanent and practical topics connected with farming, which idea was carried out. Six bulletins have been issued thus far and sent to the banks for delivery to the local papers.

There was brought to the notice of the farmers the question of the careful selection of seed corn and a poster issued giving warning as to the probable condition of such seed and useful instructions regarding proper testing. This was sent to every member of the association, with the request that it be displayed prominently. One bank on several successive Saturdays conducted actual seed-corn testing demonstrations, which aroused great interest among the farmers.

Under the auspices of the state board of agriculture a great many farmers' institutes were held in various parts of the state during the winter months. In the southern part of the state two special demonstration trains were run by the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway Company, and the Kansas City, Clinton and Springfield Railway Company. In co-operation with the officials of these roads the committee sent out letters to all the banks in towns along the two lines, urging them to advertise the trains and the institutes held in connection with the displays.

It was pointed out that heretofore Missouri has been lax in its provision for the needs of rural school and general agricultural education. The recent legislature, however, did much to remedy this serious defect, and many laws were passed affecting education that are distinctively progressive and beneficial. Provision has been made for state aid for high schools on condition that they establish a course in agriculture lasting one year.

Address of John T. Mitchell

John T. Mitchell, banking commissioner for Missouri, congratulated those in attendance on the general banking situation in the state. Since the present administration took hold on February 1st of this year there have been organized nineteen banks and trust companies with a capitalization of $759,500. There has been added to the available resources of banking institutions by way of increase in capital and permanent surplus, since that date, the sum of $423,280. Deposits increased the sum of $12,555,424 between the dates of November 26, 1912, and March 26, 1913. Mr. Mitchell spoke of the interdependence of the city and the country banker upon each other and of the important influence it has on the welfare of the banks. He urged adherance to the highest ideals in banking.

Secretary's Report

Secretary W. F. Keyser of Sedalia reported membership in the association as 1,425, an increase of 53 over the figures of last year. The reports of the secretary, committees on taxation, rewards, legislation, agricultural and good roads development and bills of lading had been printed and sent out in advance of the convention to the members of the association. This plan was adopted in order that the members might be acquainted with what the reports would contain and be prepared to act intelligently upon any matters pertaining thereto and coming before the convention and in order to conserve the time of the convention by having the reports submitted in printed form instead of having them presented orally. At the time the report of the secretary went to press there were but eighteen non-members in the state.

Mississippi Convention

Mississippi bankers gathered at West Point on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week for their twenty-fifth annual convention which was called to order by President Dr. O. B. Quin, cashier of the First National of McComb. The Hon. R. C. Beckett, Jr., delivered the address of welcome, response being made by W. P. Ketchmar of Greenville. Then followed the annual address of the president, appointment of committees and report of the executive committee. McLane Tilton, Jr., secretary of the Alabama Bankers Association, talked on state bank supervision, why it should be secured and how. An address also was delivered by R. C. King of Greenwood.

Wednesday the Hon. W. E. Andrews, auditor of the treasury, Washington, D. C., talked to the bankers, and the Hon. W. L. Young of the state banking department of Louisiana talked on state bank supervision, after which reports were heard from the secretary, treasurer and the legislative committee. After an address by C. A. Cobb of the Agricultural College of Mississippi, adjournment was taken until the afternoon, which was devoted to reports of the vice-president and committees and election of officers.

Tuesday a special train was provided to convey the bankers to the A. & M. College, where an inspection of the building and grounds was made, followed by a dress parade by the cadet battalion. A supper was given and entertainment provided by the student body. Wednesday there was a reception to the visiting bankers and their guests at the Hotel Holt and a banquet at eleven o'clock.

Officers of the Mississippi Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, Dr. O. B. Quin, cashier of the First National of McComb; vice-president, J. F. Flournoy, cashier First National, Canton; secretary and treasurer, Richard Griffith, cashier City Savings and Trust, Vicksburg.

President's Address

President Quin after reviewing events of the past year, both nationally and locally, and touching on the legislative program of the new administration at Washington, expressed the belief that the bankers' association, in order to be of paramount benefit to the state, should establish a department of agriculture, stating that an endeavor should be made to increase the agricultural yield. The present inefficient banking law of the state was condemned and President Quin expects to see state bank supervision before long. He said that from his knowledge of several bank failures which had resulted in loss to depositors and stockholders, he is convinced that a good banking law, with efficient examinations, would have saved several of these institutions. The speaker believes that since supervision is sure to come it is best for the bankers to lead in the establishment of it and that supervision will result in more good than harm to the honest banker and his institution.

ments for serving the customers of the bank have been patterned as closely as possible after those of the small country bank, where the cashier knows each customer in person and where almost all transactions are handled through a single window.

All the public parts of the bank have been grouped compactly around a hollow square: each of these departments, loans, tellers, discounts, securities, collections, accounting, bill-of-lading, foreign exchange, certifications, etc., is therefore immediately convenient to the customer as he enters the bank, as the single window in the smallest country bank. The final humanizing touch which has greatly impressed the many visitors to the Irving's new home is the unique plan of combining the paying and receiving tellers' departments.

The new department, which is close to the main entrance of the bank, is manned by a force of sixteen tellers, each of whom has his own group of customers. The customers are grouped alphabetically. Those whose names begin with the letters A and B, for instance, going to the window which bears these letters. Depositors of the Irving will, accordingly, always deal with the same teller, whom they will come to know personally, thereby, it is hoped, re-establishing the free and friendly relationship of the old-time bank officer with his depositor.

On the mezzanine floor are grouped the filing rooms, a special room for money counting, the auditing and credit departments of the bank, as well as the department for handling clearing house and out-of-town business.

The officers' desks are located at the Broadway and Park Place corner of the main banking room. Overlooking Broadway are two beautifully proportioned rooms paneled in old English oak, the ceiling being in ornamental plaster. One of these will be used as the president's private office and the other for conference purposes.

HEINSHEIMER HEADS IOWA BANKERS

Des Moines, May 28th.—D. L. Heinsheimer, veteran Glenwood banker, was elected president of the Iowa Bankers Association without opposition, at the annual convention which closed here to-day. Frank Epperson, vice-president of the Manning & Epperson State at Eddyville, was chosen vice-president. Harry Moore of Weldon was chosen treasurer. The contest for treasurer was exciting and the final vote was 177 for Moore and 172 for John Carmody of Perry.

The bankers voted to meet next year at Clinton. There was no opposition to this location.

John McHugh of Sioux City was chosen member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association, succeeding C. H. McNider of Mason City. Mr. McNider was made member of the nominating committee and John A. Dunlap of Keokuk was named vice-president from Iowa.

The resolutions adopted savored strongly of agricultural development. In brief they are as follows:

For state and national bank calls the same dates.

For election of officers as first order of business on last day of convention.

For national banking laws providing immunity from stringencies.

That congress pay for expense of transporting silver coin to banks.

For penny post and equalization of postal rates.

For formation of new agricultural committee to consist of one member from each group.

For funds to send rural teachers to Ames to take short course.

For employment of agricultural experts in each county.

Extending sympathy of convention to families of departed members of the association.

The convention was a tremendous success. The attendance reached nearly 2,000, setting a new record. The forenoon Tuesday was given over to program. In the afternoon the bankers saw Denver defeat Des Moines at baseball. In the evening Prof. Tommy Ryan's athletes staged a boxing and wrestling carnival. Wednesday forenoon was given over to speeches. That afternoon the convention adjourned and went to Ames to see Ames College. President W. C. Brown of the New York Central was unable to be present as was anticipated. George Woodruff of Joliet, Ill., talked to the bankers on financial problems confronting the American people, particularly with reference to adoption of European systems of farm financing.

GOOD ROADS BILL TO BE VOTED ON THURSDAY

The good roads bill as amended in committee and now known as the committee bill, pending before the Illinois legislature, has been made a special order of business for next Thursday and will go to third reading. This means that the bill will be voted on at that time.

Bankers throughout the state should urge their farmer-customers to support this measure. Illinois ought to adopt a system of state aid. Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and other neighboring states where soil conditions resemble our own are making progress in road improvement, while Illinois is standing still. Now is the time to get busy and urge the members of the legislature to pass this meritorious bill.

CHARLES SHADE, President
ROCK RAPIDS

P. W. HALL, Secretary
DES MOINES

CHARLES SHADE, president of the First National of Rock Rapids, presided at the big Iowa convention held in Des Moines this week. The last acts of his term as president of the Iowa bankers were performed with the same marked ability which characterized the rest of his administration.

Secretary Hall was on the job all the time and the smoothness with which everything was carried out can be attributed to his untiring efforts and skill. The high standing of the Iowa Bankers Association among the state organizations is due in a large measure to Mr. Hall's work.

GIVES BANQUET TO OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

Charles B. Munday, vice-president of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, gave a banquet and reception to the officials and employees of the bank on Monday of this week, at which each one gave suggestions on co-operation in the work of the bank. Mr. Munday told of a proposed profit-sharing system.

TENNESSEE CONVERSION

Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane has approved the application to convert the Union Bank of Knoxville, Tenn., into the Union National Bank of Knoxville with a capital of $200,000.

NORTH SIDE BANK TO HAVE NEW BUILDING

Sheridan Trust and Savings (Chicago) contemplates the erection of a new building on the triangle at the corner of Lawrence and Evanston avenues to cost in the neighborhood of $100,000.

CANADIAN BANK ACT PASSED

The Canadian bank act has been passed by parliament, all the drastic amendments being omitted. There will be no more banking legislation for ten years, as the act covers the next decade.

ILLINOIS CONVENTION

The 1913 convention of the Illinois Bankers Association will be held in Chicago September 25th and 26th.

Harris Trust and Savings of this city is distributing to investors a pamphlet containing a description and record of current earnings of a number of the public service corporations with which it has been identified.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

WE need bank supervision in Illinois all right, but we need legislative supervision a mighty sight worse.

J. W. LYDER of the Northern National, Duluth, is making hotel reservations for his friends who wish to attend the Minnesota convenion, July 10th-11th.

THE late issue of the S. W. Straus & Co. Investors Magazine contains an article by George B. Caldwell, president of the Investment Bankers Association, on "Blue Sky" legislation. This is perhaps the most complete review of the situation yet made and is the first authoritative statement of the attitude of the Investment Bankers Association and its president toward this legislation.

THE big trust companies' dinner picture shows up the diners in fine style. A. O. Wilson is largest and best of all. In good light also are Charles L. Farrell, Ledyard Cogswell, Arthur Reynolds, Wm. Livingstone, F. O. Watts and Festus J. Wade.

GEO. WOODRUFF still is climbing on the ladder of fame. The Wisconsin legislature had him before a committee and decided to submit three farm-finance bills to him for his criticism or approval.

THE fellow with the real, new goods is he who gets the candy nowadays. Warmed-over stuff goes in the soup.

MR. WOODRUFF was quizzed a whole day by the Wisconsin governor and by the legislative committee. Wisconsin has a real state legislature. Now, down at Springfield—but what's the use?

F. T. RANSOM is making fine headway with the Union Stock Yards National at Wichita, and now at three years of age it is "some bank."

RANSOM is showing his Illinois training; also demonstrating that Wichita territory really was ripe for a bank making a specialty of live-stock business.

HE is president of the Union, and vice-president of the Wichita Cattle Loan Co., an affiliated concern.

MR. Ransom's idea makes it possible for the small farmer without capital to enter the cattle-breeding business. He holds that it is only thus that the present shortage of the beef supply can be remedied and Wichita and its cattle country adequately developed.

VEILED threats of "trouble" are contained in the May issue of the Trust Companies Magazine, if the trust company section is to be shorn of too many of its claimed prerogatives by the new constitution at Boston.

MORE funds instead of less, more authority and power, are thought to be more nearly right than some of the proposals of the James committee.

EVEN divorce proceedings are hinted at if a stronger degree of "separate maintenance" is not granted. We are glad to note that Trust Companies doesn't actually favor a split. The time to make changes is now, not at Boston.

LET the trust company powers that be tell the committee what they think they are entitled to. Neither the committee nor the convention is likely to yield to threats, nor are they wisely used at any time.

CHIEFLY the section is disgruntled by the cutting off of its three representatives on the council. But neither the national banks nor the state banks as such have any allowance of extra members. Sections might be multiplied until by combination they could control the association.

AS to more autonomy in its office management at 5 Nassau Street, that is a matter of system and economy. Let a showing be made if there are any doubters.

E. D. HULBERT and George M. Reynolds went down to New York to tell McAdoo all about the Western sentiment on currency legislation, and, perhaps, to settle the comptrollership?

QUITE a little story might be written. Of course Mr. Reynolds doesn't want the reserve system of accounts murdered just to rub it in on New York, as congress seems at times inclined to do.

AT all events they are two of the ablest, safest counselors in the country and President Wilson knows it.

LUCIUS TETER, president of the Chicago Savings, has joined the city beautiful procession conducted by the Commerce Association. His bank window ledges have large self-watering flower boxes fully equipped with ever-bloomers.

STATE and Madison is the world's busiest corner and countless thousands will get a touch of beauty as they pass, if they but glance upward.

SO far as we know the Northern Trust is the only other Chicago bank to beautify its windows in such a way. We hope the custom will spread.

"THE SOUTHEASTERN BANKER" is a new-comer of very pretentious appearance, faultless in paper, printing and make-up. It is published at Atlanta and a rival in some sense to the "Southern Banker," published in the same city.

IT will be an addition to the geographically designated banking papers, which are Western, Northwestern, Southwestern, Southern, and now the Southeastern. And they all look lively and prosperous.

IN the course of the year we pay out many of what are meant to be deserved comments upon the personnel of the banking world, in this department. We have multiplied evidences that it is a much read feature of this paper.

WE learn nearly every day, too, that the attention is appreciated. Without giving the name of the internationally known banker who wrote it, a short letter will be given for its literary merit alone. It is a gem:

"I HAVE not been indifferent to the many catchy and complimentary personals appearing in the truly newsy columns of THE CHICAGO BANKER, and I want to assure you that I appreciate the vein of warm friendship which impels such notices from week to week."

CAN you beat it?

IN two books just published by Charles Scribner's Sons the humor of the lowland Scot is crystallized. They are "The Book of Edinburgh Anecdote," by Francis Watt, and "The Book of Glasgow Anecdote," by D. Macleod Malloch, and each is illustrated with a number of full-color plates. Here is a story from "The Book of Glasgow Anecdotes," that doubtless came from the private collection of H. S. Fletcher of Watsonville, Cal.

ONE may relate the story of the West Highlander who had dwelt long in Glasgow, but was finally summoned from it to the bedside of his dying father. When he arrived the old man was fast nearing his end. For a while he remained unconscious of his son's presence. Then at last the old man's eyes opened, and he began to murmur. The son bent eagerly to listen:

"DUGALD," whispered the parent, "Luckie Simpson owes me five shillin's."

"Ay, man, ay," said the son eagerly.

"An' Dougal More owes me seven shillin's."

"Ay," assented the son.

"An' Hamish McCraw owes me ten shillin's."

"Sensible tae the last," muttered the delighted heir. "Sensible tae the last."

Once more the voice from the bed took up the tale.

"An', Dugald, I owe Calum Beg two pounds."

Dugald shook his head sadly. "Wanderin' again, wanderin' again," he sighed. "It's a peety."

WE know a fellow out West who made himself mighty solid with G. F. Emery out at the Live Stock Exchange National by writing in the following very clever letter:

"SIRS: Will you oblige by having your board of directors knock out 'Stock Exchange' from the name of your bank, leaving 'Live National Bank,' which it is? You know that a rose would be as sweet by any other name."

"HERE is my Iowa address," wrote J. A. S. Pollard, "and it is about as rotten as usual." It's a type of rottenness the bankers applaud to the echo. Did in St. Joseph last and in Des Moines this week.

SPOKANE is to have a new $100,000 trust company. Seventy thousand was subscribed at the first meeting, and that by some of the first citizens. The name is the puzzling thing at present.

BANKERS are predicting a bumper fruit crop and a big demand for farm loans. Group Two went on record to this effect.

IT should be understood that what is commonly spoken of as the "currency question" is much more a banking question. The currency feature of it is important, but it relates mainly to the note circulation of banks, which is now firmly bound to the security of United States bonds and prevented from fulfilling its legitimate purpose by expanding and contracting with the varying requirements for its use.

UNDER the amended banking law of Michigan, the first thing a newly organized state bank does is to submit to an examination.

ANOTHER amendment imposes upon a bank a fine of $50 if more than two months pass without a board meeting of which the minutes are kept.

STATE banks also must have an active "examining committee," which must record its acts in a book kept for the purpose.

YES, and the bank examiners, God bless 'em, are to have more pay. They are doing important work for the state.

UNDER the new law bank officers will find it almost necessary to do their borrowing in some other bank.

"NATIONAL banks will protest against the doctrine of allowing trust companies to participate in all of the benefits that might accrue from a reformation of the monetary laws, and one of their first objections will be: 'How can a trust company be permitted to issue currency?'"

THIS is a question propounded by Festus J. Wade and the following is his suggested reply:

"THE answer is plain and simple; if they comply with every requirement as to security, supervision and reserve, the same as national banks, why should they not be permitted to have all the privileges and prerogatives of national banking institutions? Mark you, I say, provided they comply with all the obligations of the national institutions."

AS Rojovensky would say, "We are pleased to report" that the Iowa convention, as usual, went fully into the question of the "Sundblad fund," whatever that is.

THE "box lunch" at Ames College was one of the most enjoyable of the little things that happened at the Des Moines meeting.

LINCOLN COUNTY BANK, at Merrill, Wis., opened its new bank building last week with fitting observation.

THEY even had a "children's day" on Saturday, and this is a hint to others. It was a huge success and they enjoyed the new sensation fully. Most children know but very little of how the inside of a bank looks.

THE building is monumental, built of stone, brick and bronze and is fireproof. The banking room is 51 by 40 feet and the ceiling 22 feet high.

THE officers and directors of the Lincoln County Bank are: A. H. Stange, president; Charles J. Kinzel, vice-president and cashier; A. Gruett, assistant cashier; A. B. Nelson, C. H. Stange, E. H. Staats, John Van-Hecke and J. A. Emerich. The present employees are Herman Tewes, teller; John Drexel, head bookkeeper; Fred Goetz, assistant bookkeeper; Miss Dorothy McClure, assistant bookkeeper and stenographer.

ILLINOIS REALIZATION COMPANY

AMERICAN TRUST BUILDING

INVESTMENTS AND GENERAL FINANCING

CHICAGO May 31st, 1913

Mr. Banker,
Everywhere.
Dear Sir:-

After an extensive and successful experience in the handling of the assets of involved institutions in bankruptcy or otherwise in the hands of the courts, or in process of reorganization, we have evolved an absolutely new and valuable service for Bankers to which we now invite your earnest attention.

Your first desire as a creditor of a financially crippled institution is to determine its fair cash value, not relying for this information on the biased representations of the interested parties or of a self created creditors committee, but rather on the investigation of disinterested experts.

We will undertake quickly and confidentially to examine the assets of any estate, fixing thereon fair liquidating values, and we will guarantee that in the event of a sale, at least the figure thus quoted will be realized. This estimate and guarantee constitute our service.

This knowledge of the certain liquidating value of the estate provides a fair and intelligent basis for all negotiations for settlement. It is also protection against a combination of bidders which may have been formed to buy in the property much below its real value.

If the assets are of a slow moving non-bankable character, you would probably be unwilling to protect your claim by bidding them in.

Our frequent appearance in many of the courts in this country as bidders, and our known purpose on such occasions, have obtained for us a desirable standing and have put us in a position where we can and do obtain prompt and reliable information from receivers, trustees and officers of court generally.

We invite you to confer with us in reference to any estate in which you are interested.

Our banking and other references will satisfy you.

Very truly yours,
A. B. Leonard
President.

UNTIL early last year he was president of the Liberty National, and before that president of the Mercantile.

THE Schencks are a banker family. Henry A. Schenck is president of the Bowery Savings; Charles N. is cashier of the Goelet estate, and Edwin S. Schenck is president of the Citizens Central National.

"THE movies" in New York are making quite a hit with the films taken at Briarcliff. "The financial at play" has the right of way.

WM. A. LAW'S faithful Mr. Haas has secured indorsements of Georgia and Mississippi state conventions for Mr. Law for first vice-president of the A. B. A. at Boston. Is he after the "solid South?"

THE main features of Canada's new banking law are provisions bringing merger proposals between two different banks under the scrutiny of the minister of finance, requiring a stricter audit system under government control, extending the bank's powers in the matter of issuing notes and facilitating loans to farmers and ranchers on the products of their labor.

WE suggest to Auditor Brady that he read the resolutions drawn by the North Dakota banking board about the "crime" of starting unnecessary banks.

NO "phony" or promoted banks will get past the plate in N. D. if the board knows them by sight, and it thinks it does.

THE Fidelity Trust Co., Boston's newest financial institution, has opened for business. This bank has taken the quarters formerly occupied by the Fourth National Bank, which have been newly equipped in the latest style and in a very attractive fashion.

THE distinguished American Banker says "one hundred and twenty women registered with the bankers" at San Diego. We shall have to ask Colonel Sartori to explain?

GEORGE F. ORDE was of the Minneapolis party making a trade-extension tour of North and South Dakota and Montana. Mr. Orde says: "The trip through the three states occupied a week's time. We had ample opportunity to observe conditions, and I can say the prospect was never better for a good crop than it is this year."

WE judge that they treated Lydell Baker, the erudite editor of the Pacific Banker, pretty well down at San Diego, where he let loose the first edition of his 1913 oration.

THE floral emblems ("bouquets" wouldn't describe them) which he flung at "the queenly city," at California, etc., would be considered rather ornate in any other state.

ALL the same, Baker is an ornament and a credit to the profession and just as soon as he completes his summer itinerary we are going to print the "speech" he is using.

MR. BAKER is forwarding the idea that a banknote secured by government bonds is not a banknote but a government note, as much so as the greenback, and that the key of currency reform is a responsive banknote founded on the demands of business and not upon the price of government bonds.

DOWN in Oklahoma Col. Andrew J. Frame said: "I have attended conventions of bankers in all parts of the country, have spoken in every state in the Union except Maine, but I must say that I have never seen so successfully conducted a state meeting of bankers as is this."

THE question is, will not Andrew J. be tried for treason, heresy or on some other grave charge, if he shows up for the Wisconsin talk-fest on the briny deep?

W. S. GUTHRIE is the new Oklahoma president, and with Secretary W. B. Harrison to help, the coming year's record should show important advances.

J. A. S. Pollard at the Iowa Convention

Peerless Fort Madison orator talks on progress and the banker at Des Moines. Sees no financial trouble of national scope with basic conditions as sound as they are in this country to-day

The first address I ever made to a state bankers convention was delivered in this city at the annual convention of this association, fourteen years ago. The subject of that address was "Progress and the Bank." Times have changed since then and conditions are somewhat different, so I assure you that while my subject to-day is somewhat similar I am not going to attempt to "put over an old sermon" on this devout congregation.

Since my last farewell tour and retirement from the financial, forensic arena, a new generation has partially grown up, and probably I should explain, in view of the fact that these younger bankers and bankeresses might waste effort in trying to follow or find a thread of connected argument in my remarks, or make the unnecessary exertion of wondering what I am talking about (the seasoned veterans having given that up long ago), that I am an ultra progressive in my style and diction, and if my feeble words sound to you rather cubist or futurist, or like the expressions of a rude person falling down a stairway, don't worry and make those creases; just avoid the color scheme in the word painting and try to catch the thought, the impression which I am trying to convey, and if you succeed you will accomplish more than I myself can.

"All things journey, sun and moon,
Morning, noon and afternoon,
Night and all her stars.
'Twixt the east and western bars,
Round they journey,
Come and go—we go with them."

How well that old rhyme describes the progress of the banker. We who have attended many bankers' conventions and have seen the delegates from Maine to California, 'twixt east and western bars, generally on the outside, where with night and all her stars we go with them—in fact help them to their rooms—can realize that the poet was a financier.

It is an interesting study to trace the evolution of the banker. We must go back to the days when prehistoric man first realized the wisdom of providing for the non-fruitful period out of the surplus accumulated in more abundant seasons, days of mighty, strong men—cave men who wielded great clubs and defied the suffragettes—and so on, passing through the days of the free coinage of beads, glass, wampum and tobacco "without the aid or consent of any other nation." Metal, and finally paper mediums of exchange became established, and along with this development came the money changer, pawnbroker, and dealer in exchange, until to-day we have the modern banker, who by his methods of handling credits, his system of checks and drafts, facilitates trade and commerce to such an extent that the actual business of the country is transacted without the use of money at all—whenever in times of stringency the city bankers get "cold feet" and refuse to ship it to their correspondents.

As you have surmised, I don't know much about banking history anyhow. I believe the money changers were driven out of the Temple and moved over and started the Bank of Venice, because they thought that a good place to float a new enterprise. And from the pink, rosy dawn of history the banker has been the subject of prejudice. As the scriptures forbade the taking of interest, the man who traded in money was regarded no better than an alderman, and the fortune he amassed was considered lawful plunder. Whenever a supply of currency was needed they hunted up a banker—there was no closed season for hunting them—and the poor, imprisoned banker, never having heard of a starvation strike, would admit his assets without any forced feeding. The circulating medium was thus very elastic and responsive to the needs of enterprise, for it could be supplied by simply pulling the teeth or gouging out the eyes of the banker. To float a large industrial issue they called in the dentist and pulled teeth, instead of the modern plan of issuing a prospectus and pulling the limb of the general public.

This custom, while it may have had some merit from the standpoint of a burglar, was economically wrong, and it made the business of banking rather a disreputable and dangerous occupation. It had to be carried on in secret and the rate for call loans ruled high. They had it up 30% until Henry IV arbitrarily reduced it to 10 per cent and the ruling powers have been butting in ever since with their usury laws and investigations, until the banker to-day is expected to pay 4 per cent on deposits and loan on the call market at 2 per cent, paying for fuel, salaries and taxes out of the difference. He would actually lose money at this if he didn't do such a large volume of business.

Well, the bankers finally invented bills of exchange and by this simple stroke of genius, this progressive step, they saved their fortunes and their teeth.

But the prejudice against the banker persisted in one form or another and by 1896 it was so intense that it took all the money Uncle Mark Hanna could furnish the sound money democrats to keep back the enraged people.

It now has culminated in an investigation of the "Money Trust." And so progress has brought the man who exchanges credits for the community to be reckoned as an important factor in the business economy. He is essential to life, liberty and the pursuit of dividends.

In this day of commercial progress which reveals strikingly the old inexorable law of the survival of the fittest, a day when in every department of trade and commerce we are profiting by the experience, study and the advice of specialists, what of the future progress of the banker? We are living in a marvelous period of business progress. The soil last year yielded over nine billion dollars added wealth to the country. Railroad, manufacturing and mercantile business has been prospering. In the districts recently devastated by the elements is shown determination to reproduce the lost capital with the remarkable energy and courage of the American people. There is right now a decided slackening of activity in many lines of business which is in all probability a temporary condition and from a banking standpoint, under present conditions, economically desirable. Our financial and banking laws, while unscientific and illy adapted to the requirements of trade and commerce under strain, are yet upon a sound and honest basis. There appears to be an abundance of everything essential to prosperity and the only scarce commodity is labor itself. The occasional murmurings of pessimists who see bad business ahead simply because certain high political offices have changed hands, have their only excuse and origin in the depression of 1893, which happened to come early with a change in political administration.

I see no parallel in conditions now and twenty years ago. At that time unwise financial legislation, passed for purely political reasons and with no economic warrant whatever, had for years steadily undermined the credit of this government so that a world-wide panic caught us in its maelstrom and caused widespread disaster. Every banker here, old enough to remember, knows that for some years prior to 1893 the financial journals were full of predictions, made both in this country and in Europe, that the watering of our currency through the purchasing clause of the Sherman Silver Act could end only in financial disaster to this country.

I could not possibly to-day, six years after the exciting experience has passed, give a more accurate description of the causes of the panic of 1907 than I gave nine years ago at the convention of the Indiana Bankers Association, and I continued to talk like a prophet of calamity from 1904 to and through the summer of 1906, about the undue expansion of credit, the losses of capital by war and the convulsions of nature and the danger from certain Napoleons of Finance who were developing chains of banking institutions in New York City and using their resources in spectulation.

I do not mention this to claim any gift of foresight (and my opinions then and now are only composites of opinions gained from those whom I consider well able to judge financial conditions), but to give a little weight, if possible, to the opinion I now express, that, granted sound and safe financial laws, even though unscientific, it is beyond the power of either politicians or the "Money Power" to cause financial trouble of national scope when basic conditions are as sound as they are in this country to-day, and no man or body of men, big enough to cause much stir of any kind, could possibly get anything out of such a condition other than the great personal loss to themselves and to their interests.

Real prosperity, you know, is prosperity for the greatest number, and even in this wonderful age of business progress a condition of permanent prosperity requires the putting on of brakes when we get so progressive as to make dividends out of our national business capital instead of our earnings.

We do need the temporary stimulation, or rather intoxication, of speculation or overexpanded credit in this country just now; in fact I believe our greatest bankers are encouraging a mild and healthy liquidation for the ultimate good of buiness. We can talk all we want to about Wall Street and the "Money Power" but look at the situation as it now is and has been for some time past. A period of remarkable business expansion—and too remarkable promotion, the fearful loses by war and the greater financial losses in preparing for possible wars in Europe, the extravagance of governments and the destruction of capital by storm and flood, all added to the tremenduous demands of legitimate business, have created an unparalleled demand for credit all over the world. The money centers of Europe—London, Paris and particularily Berlin—have been greatly embarrassed by a situation which they have been unable to handle, even by paying artificial premiums for American gold. They simply have had to sit up and take notice of "Little Old New York," the only real market of the world to-day where you can still sell something at a fair price—the only active, unembarrassed money market on the globe.

Our American bankers, realizing the economics of the situation and with commendable foresight, are discouraging promotion and holding the flyers down to the speed limit. Incidentally they are "putting over" an example of sound finance, and establishing a record and a credit for the United States of America which will mean that when the stringency eases up in Europe, the Balkan war is financed and the money comes out of the stockings over there, the capital of the world will look upon this country as the international savings bank and Mecca of the investor. It will come pouring back to repurchase at higher figures and to pay tribute to the progressive American bankers—the best financiers in the world; and this will give us a jump of fifty years toward making the principal city of the United States, wherever it may happen to be located in the future, the permanent international money center.

If every stockbroker who handles deals on margin found business so dull that he would have to seek some higher occupation, I would still fail to see any reason for the corn and wheat to stop growing, or expect to miss the song of the spindle or melody of the anvil in the "busy hum of men." A great many learned economists believe that we are on the threshold of the most reasonable, sound and sane business progress this country ever has known, but they all seem to admit that it depends largely upon the progressive banker and upon the enactment of sound and scientific banking and currency legislation.

American enterprise will have to expand and get its fair share from the markets of the world whether it particularly desires such broadening out or not. The day of limited markets and artifically sustained prices has gone by, possibly never to return. The progressive banker must lead American enterprise and he has the whole world now before him.

I think that bankers agree that in the progress of American banking currency reform is demanded—the adoption in legislation of some sound system whereby capital can be readily converted into currency when needed for legitimate business. I would not attempt to discuss details, but that I think is the main idea, and we need currency which will respond automatically to the demands of trade and commerce and which will not respond to the demands of speculation and stock gambling.

One of the most striking developments of commercial progress is the combination of capital, and what is called the "Trust" question holds many and varied problems for the progressive banker. Big business is recognized to-day by all thinking men, but anything in the nature of monopoly gained by governmental favor and privilege and not based upon economical production, the excellence and purity of product, will have to be financed with great caution by the progressive banker, for the signs of the times indicate that combination of that kind is not based upon a very permanent foundation, for the people, who

WILL SUBMIT QUESTIONS TO BANKERS

The senate committee on banking and currency began its investigation of the nation's currency system this week. A list of questions was prepared to be submitted to bankers of the country calling for their views in the matter. Summarized, the questions are as follows:

What are the essential defects of our banking and currency system?

Enumerate its advantages and disadvantages and what purposes are to be attained by an improved system.

Should national banks continue to have a bond secured currency, and should present reserve requirements for such banks be changed?

Should elastic currency be authorized, and, if so, should it be limited and to what amount? should it be notes of individual banks, a central reserve association, a number of regional associations, or the treasury?

If such notes are from the treasury should they be on pledge of security and of what kind, and should they be a first lien of the government on the concern to which issued?

Should all currency have a gold basis and how should it be issued, and what per cent of reserve should be required?

What should be the limit if notes are issued to or by an association and should it be based on capital stock and surplus?

What device should be used to retire such currency when demand subsides?

Should a tax be laid on the currency graduated to conform with the volume issued by the reserve association or with the length of time outstanding?

Should there be a central association with branches of reserve associations, with or without a central control, and if a number under such control, should it be wholly with representatives of the associations, wholly by the government, or by both?

Should such association have a geographical territory and exercise its reserve functions there exclusively or should member banks be permitted to choose which near association they should join, disregarding fixed territory?

Should state banks or trust companies be stockholders in such associations and under what conditions?

How many regional reserve associations should there be?

What should be the minimum capital stock and what amount to each bank?

How should directors to such association be elected and in what numbers, powers, and terms of office?

What should be the general nature of business of such association; should it accept credits other than those of banks, pay interest on deposits, discount double name commercial paper for member banks on equal terms to all, and should its discount rate be public, subject to weekly change?

Should it loan directly to member banks, with or without collateral security, with interest equal for all the public and subject to weekly change, and should reserve associations be permitted to deal with each in purchase and sale of paper, exchange security, and gold?

Should government deposits be withdrawn from banks and placed with such associations; how should they be apportioned, at what interest, if any, and how soon could this be done?

Should a national bank keep a reserve with the association to which it belongs except that in its vaults or should it be allowed to use other associations and if so how much?

Should a reserve association be required to maintain a reserve within its deposits? What amount? In gold only or lawful money?

Should liability of each member bank be limited to its stock subscription and if not, what should be its liability?

Should reserve associations do business with banks other than members and of what character? Should national banks be permitted upon payment of a commission to loan their credit by accepting bills arising out of the ordinary courses of commerce, and should reserve associations be permitted to deal in these acceptances in transactions with banks or other associations? Should there be a limit to such acceptances and what limit?

What dividends should associations be permitted to pay their banks and should any share of the profits of an association be distributed to member banks in proportion to the average deposits during the year?

What is your opinion of the plan of the national monetary commission and what modifications would you suggest, if any?

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

The program for the meeting of the seventh district bankers convention at Litchfield, Minn., June 10th is out. Mayor C. H. March will deliver the address of welcome, to which L. P. Moyer of Montevideo will respond. Other speakers are Senator Cashman of Owatonna, D. C. Armstrong of Albert Lea, G. F. Orde of Minneapolis and J. W. Wheeler of St. Paul.

Bank Commissioners to Meet

Arrangements are completed for the annual meeting in St. Paul June 2d-4th of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks. Kelsey S. Chase, secretary of the association, is in charge of program and arrangements for entertainment. He expects fifty delegates. Nearly all of them will be quartered at the Saint Paul Hotel, where the convention will hold its sessions. Among the more important papers will be one on "Regulation of Sale of Securities," by Charles M. Sawyer, bank commissioner of Kansas, which was the first state to pass a "Blue Sky" law. Other addresses will be made by W. R. Williams, superintendent of banks in California, and T. J. Smith, bank commissioner of Kentucky.

New Plan for Selling Bonds

James J. Hill has devised a new means of selling St. Paul bonds, in addition to the successful plan of selling them through a department store. The bond issues will be bought by Mr. Hill and associates and placed in the hands of three trustees, James J. Hill, Louis W. Hill and W. B. Dean. Certificates will be issued in $10 denominations, not more than $100 to a person. The city rate will be paid and the certificates will be protected by bonds guaranteed by the trustees. Mr. Hill took $25,000 playground bonds. The first issue draws 4½ per cent. The bonds are dated May 31st. Carmi Thompson bought the first $100. Mr. Hill's idea is to make it possible for the small investor to get good investments and enable St. Paul to finance its own public improvements. Ten thousand dollars were sold the first day in this way in three hours. The success was as marked as where $119,000 were sold at the department store.

Special Train for Convention

Twin City bankers likely will go to the twenty-fourth annual convention at Duluth, July 10th-11th, of the Minnesota Bankers Association by special train. The entertainment will include inspection of the new steel plant, reception and luncheon at the Duluth Boat Club's Spirit Lake branch, and return by water. The bankers will take their wives. J. S. Pomeroy is vice-president of the association and in line for president.

Chapman Urges Better Roads

Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National, has become concerned about the roads in northern Minnesota.

"Many of our people go to California for the winter," said Mr. Chapman. "But we forget that many of the people in the South would come to northern Minnesota for the summer if there was some way of getting around. We have lost what few people used to come to Lake Minnetonka from the South. With our thousands of lakes we have the greatest summer resort region at our very door.

"If there were good roads, so that people coming here for the summer could take their automobiles, we could get the bulk of the summer tourist trade. If there were good roads we would have good hotels and stopping places at the lakes. Without the good roads, it is useless to build summer resorts."

South Dakota Convention

The 1913 convention of the South Dakota Bankers Association will be held at Watertown June 25th and 26th. Committees are outlining a program including Governor A. O. Eberhart of Minnesota, William J. Burns, detective; W. C. Macfadden and George H. Richards, secretaries of North Dakota and Minnesota associations; E. L. Abel, A. W. Parmley and C. M. Henry, chairman of the South Dakota tax commission. George H. Randall of Rapid City will present a plan for guaranty of bank deposits. "Increasing Interest in Raising Livestock" will be handled by W. E. Briggs of the Stockyards National Bank, South St. Paul. The Watertown bankers and their wives, assisted by the Commercial Club, are arranging for receptions, band concerts, lunches, theaters and a trip to Lake Kampeska, where lunch will be served and boat trips taken.

L. A. Huntoon Dead

Lew A. Huntoon of Moorhead, Minn., former president of the Minnesota Bankers Association, president of the First National and connected with auxiliary banks, is dead after an operation. Mr. Huntoon was president of the normal school at Moorhead and recently was appointed a member of the new state public education commission. He was president of the Clay County Potato Growers' Association.

South Dakota Groups Meet

The bankers of Groups One and Two of the South Dakota Bankers Association held their annual convention in Sioux Falls. Among the speakers were Lieutenant Governor Abel Group Two elected new officers as follows: President, R. D. Burr; secretary, A. C. Kingsbury, both of Montrose.

Northwest Notes

Vice-President C. T. Jaffray of the First National of Minneapolis said that the plans for the new building at First Avenue S. and Fifth Street will be drawn by R. W. Gibson of New York and the Minneapolis architectural firm, Hewitt & Brown, will be associated with Mr. Gibson in the work.

R. W. Gibson is a noted New York architect. He designed the New York clearing house building and other financial buildings of the East. His principal western work is the present building of the First National.

The St. Paul Stock exchange has elected officers as follows: President, A. M. Peabody; vice-president, Edwin White; secretary, Norman Nelson; treasurer, A. C. Dent.

The comptroller of Minneapolis has been authorized to sell $150,000 ten-year, 4 per cent bonds over the counter.

The bonds will be offered in $50, $100, $500 and $1,000 denominations at 4 per cent, to run for ten years. At the minimum selling price of 95 the return on the investment will be 4.62½ per cent interest.

These bonds will be 4 per cent bonds, running ten, twenty and thirty years, at the option of the bidder. The minimum price at which they may be sold is 95, but the committee chairman said he expected they would bring better figures than that. By advertising now the sale can be made the latter part of June or early in July, and the time is said to be good, as the fiscal year ends June 30th, when dividend distributions occur, and investors are usually looking for a place to put surplus money.

Among new reserve agents announced for South Dakota banks are the following: Merchants National, St. Paul, for the Sioux Falls National; Dubuque National for the First National of Brookings; First National of Minneapolis for the Brule National of Chamberlain; Northwestern National, Minneapolis, for First National of Larimore; Scandinavian American National, Minneapolis, for First National, Gary; Live Stock National, Sioux City, for the First National, Wessington Springs.

McVille, N. D., now has three banks. The Security is the latest. E. L. Boyd is president, C. H. Simpson is vice-president and A. O. Moen is cashier. The State has as officers: President, Dr. A. C. Arneson; cashier, E. Colsgard. E. J. Landers of Grand Forks is president of the First State and W. J. Morgan is cashier. The new bank contemplates building and the First State will begin building a bank soon.

The Rochester Loan and Trust Company, with capital of $100,000, is the sixth trust company formed in Minnesota. E. A. Knowlton is president and Thomas B. Phelps secretary.

RECEIVERS FOR RAILROADS

The Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad and St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad were thrown into the hands of receivers on the petition of creditors in United States district courts at Chicago and St. Louis this week.

Tightness of the money market was given as the direct cause.

GROUP ONE, ILLINOIS

Group One of the Illinois Bankers Association held its ninth annual meeting at Galva on Monday of this week. The business session was called to order by Chairman V. A. Wigren, cashier of the First National of Galva, and the address of welcome delivered by John Miller, president Farmers Co-operative State Bank. An old-fashioned country chicken dinner was served to the bankers at the Midland Country Club. After the dinner there were impromptu speeches, discussions and music. A resolution was passed favoring the amended Tice good roads bill. President John D. Phillips of the Illinois Bankers Association delivered an address. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Chairman, H. C. Roberts, president First National of Princeton; vice-president, J. Y. Whiteman, cashier First National of Biggsville; secretary-treasurer H. O. Baner, cashier State Bank of New Boston; member of the executive council for three years, V. A. Wigren of Galva.

By C. C. Burford

Among the new bank buildings which will be erected this year is that of the Havana National of Havana. The new structure will occupy the corner which, with the exception of a few months, it has occupied since 1875, when the institution was organized. The new banking house will be two stories high, with a basement below, the bank to use the first floor and the second floor to be designed for club rooms. Red pressed brick will be used in the construction and the furniture will be of mahogany and marble.

Havana is becoming one of the best known summer resorts in the state, the Illinois river being one of the most abundant fishing streams in the world. Much of the summer camping and fishing life along the Illinois river centers at Havana. One of the best Chautauqua assemblies in the state, conducted by the Illinois Epworth League, is held near that city. Quiver Beach, a lake near Havana, is especially well known to anglers. The Havana National is doing a large and satisfactory business. The capital of the bank is $100,000. C. P. King is the president; O. H. Harplean, vice-president; O. D. Covington, cashier, and P. D. Duffenbacher, assistant cashier.

N. N. Lampert Aids Perry Centennial

Nelson N. Lampert, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National of Chicago, has been chosen treasurer of the Perry's Victory Centennial Commission. It is desired that the state of Illinois shall pay her share in building a monument at Put-in-Bay, Ohio, commemorating the great naval victory on Lake Erie. Many local celebrations are being held in the state and school children are being encouraged to write essays upon the War of 1812 and upon Perry's victory especially.

Other officers of this commission are: Commodore William Hale Thompson of Chicago, president; Gen. P. C. Hayes of Joliet, H. S. Beckmeyer of Springfield and James A. Pugh of Chicago, vice-presidents; and Richard S. Folsom of Chicago, secretary.

Former Cashier Now Farmer

F. N. Hossack, who was for a number of years cashier of the bank at Odell, Livingston county, now is in charge of 4,000 acres of land. Mr. Hossack is one of the directors of the Livingston County Soil and Crop Improvement Association and takes great interest in better farming methods. He is a great believer in clover production and is experimenting with hairy sand vetch. The vetch has a large rooting system and loosens up the ground, while the heavy green top makes excellent fertilization when plowed under.

"Dollars for Babies"

The German-American Bank of Bloomington does not believe in race suicide. They announce that "we are going to start right every baby born in Bloomington and Normal, and we do not care how much it increases the birth rate." Every baby born in the two towns will be given a dollar by the bank properly recorded in a savings pass-book. A separate "baby ledger" will be kept by the bank. Statistics show that last year 569 babies were born in Bloomington and Normal. "We do not consider this to be philanthropy at all," said Cashier Wochner, "for we believe that fully half of the baby accounts started will some day be paying accounts for the bank." The system has been tried elsewhere and is one of the many methods of promoting habits of thrift in children which can be used by enterprising banks.

Swindler Caught at Tuscola

W. T. Avey, president of the Central Illinois Trust and Savings of Mattoon, caused the arrest of a piano salesman who had been passing worthless checks in Tuscola, as well as having secured $64 from the Mattoon institution upon a worthless check. His arrest came just in time, as he had prepared to fleece Tuscola parties and leave for Canada. He was arrested and placed in the Coles county jail at Charleston.

Stratton Arrested

Clyde Stratton, alias Frank Williams, has been arrested with a serious charge of both burglary and murder against him. He is to stand trial for the murder of J. Lee Crowder, who kept a store and a small bank at Silvis, Rock Island county. Four men last December entered the store, secured $900 in cash and beat and kicked Crowder so badly that he never recovered, dying a few weeks later from his injuries. Stratton is a smooth and dangerous criminal and has a bad record, that of having escaped from both the Ohio and the Kansas state prisons. He was arrested in Pekin and was taken to Rock Island and placed in jail. Officers in that part of the state are breathing easy with Stratton behind the bars.

Mr. Crabtree Has Fractured Wrist

E. E. Crabtree had the misfortune Sunday afternoon to fracture the radial bone of his right arm as he was cranking his automobile. Mr. Crabtree was at the country home of John R. Allen and was ready to start for Jacksonville. He gave the starter crank a turn and in some manner it flew back and struck him on the right wrist, the fracture being the result. J. T. King, who was with Mr. Crabtree, took him to the office of Dr. Bowe, where the

Soil Improvement Notes

F. C. Grannis, soil expert of Will county, is pushing his work and is busy with the farmers. He plans the organization of agricultural clubs and, like other workers in this line, gives many lectures at rural schoolhouses and churches.

J. D. Readheimer, soil expert of Kane county, has arrived in Elgin and is becoming acquainted with the people and with general conditions. J. P. Mason, president of the Kane County Soil Improvement Association, is assisting Mr. Readheimer in every possible way. The latter will locate at Geneva, the county seat, where he will have his home and office. He has a complete soil survey of the county which was made at the University of Illinois, of which institution Mr. Readheimer is a graduate. Township organizations among the farmers will be his first work. The Champaign Daily Gazette commented editorially upon Mr. Readheimer's work and congratulated Kane county upon securing his services.

The Tazewell County Farm Bureau has been incorporated by the Illinois secretary of state, designed "to develop the agricultural resources of the county and to promote the best commercial, social and material interests of the county." A soil expert, a Mr. Robbins, has been employed and will make his headquarters in the Denhart Bank building in Washington. He will begin his work June 1st.

Ten counties, DeKalb, Kankakee, Will, Kane, McHenry, Winnebago, DuPage, Livingston, Tazewell and Champaign, have soil experts at work. Many other counties contemplate the work, and the bankers of the state and nation are active in their support of better agricultural and better rural life.

Group Nine at Alton

Group Nine of the Illinois Bankers Association held the first group meeting of the year at Alton May 14th. The meeting was held during the afternoon and the evening, the afternoon session on the Mississippi river steamer "W. W." and the evening session in the convention hall of the Illini Hotel. Eben Rodgers, president of the Alton board of trade, welcomed the visitors to Alton, and L. L. Emmerson, president of the Third National of Mount Vernon, responded. After various reports and business matters, an address was given by G. B. Hoiles, cashier of the State Bank of Hoiles & Son of Greenville, on "County Federations," and another address was by James I. Ennis, of Chicago, on "Taxation of Banks." Officers were elected on board the steamer as follows: G. B. Hoiles of Greenville, chairman; Harry Kohl, cashier Old National of Centralia, vice-chairman; M. O. Traylor, vice-president of the National Stock Yards National of the National Stock Yards, secretary; and L. A. Schaffley, vice-president City National of Alton, treasurer.

The boat docked at Alton on the return trip at 6 o'clock and dinner was served at the Illini Hotel at 6:30. The evening session at the hotel began at 8 o'clock with an address on "Modern Accounting Methods for Country Banks," by T. E. Burkholder of Chicago. This lecture was illustrated by stereopticon and constituted the most important event of the evening. J. D. Phillips, of Green Valley, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, attended the meeting. The group endorsed the Tice bill now pending before the Illinois legislature designed to give Illinois better roads. The Alton bankers royally entertained the visiting bankers and the meeting was a most decided success in every way. Alton is one of the best towns in the state and recently has been host to a number of conventions and has acquitted herself in a most commendable way in her capacity as a hostess.

The new building of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Pesotum will be ready for occupancy early in June.

A permit has been issued for the incorporation of the Farmers State Bank of East Peoria. This is the second bank for East Peoria, the other being the First National.

As an indication of Illinois farm values the following figures of a series of land sales near Delavan, Tazewell county, may be taken for example: A farm of eighty acres sold for $220 an acre; another of eighty acres sold for $252.50 an acre; and a 100-acre farm sold for $270 an acre.

A projected interurban railroad from Peoria to Galesburg is interesting a number of financiers in that part of the state. Among the Peoria capitalists interested are Clifford Ireland, George J. Jobst, W. T. Irwin, John W. McDowell and William M. Allen, besides Howard Knowles of Galesburg, president of the Peoria Water Company; E. W. Wilson, capitalist of Pekin, and Charles L. Dungan, banker of Brimfield.

The Millikin National of Decatur is carrying on an active saving campaign in that city, publishing its newspaper ads in five languages, these being English, Italian, Greek, German and Russian.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

Milwaukee banks will be fully represented on the annual trade trip of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association through the state next week. The delegation, consisting of 100 Milwaukee business men, will journey through the central part of the state in a special train of eleven coaches. The Harvester Band will accompany the boosters as in previous years. Thirty-seven Wisconsin cities will be visited. The party will leave Milwaukee Monday, June 2d, returning the following Sunday. Representatives of the Milwaukee banks participating in the trip are: E. J. Hughes, First National; E. A. Farmer, German American Bank; E. A. Reddeman, Germania National; E. H. Williams, Marine National; F. X. Bodden, Marshall & Ilsley; William M. Post, National Exchange; A. C. Elser, Second Ward Savings; Walter Kasten, Wisconsin National.

Group Meetings

Three group meetings of the W. B. A. were held this week in preparation for the state meeting June 21st to 23d. Group Three convened at Fond du Lac on Tuesday, Group Seven in LaCrosse on Wednesday and Group Six in Grand Rapids on Thursday. Most of the delegates from the Milwaukee banks attended all three meetings. Vice-president Arthur H. Lindsay of the Marine National, was one of the speakers at the LaCrosse meeting. Restriction of the number of banks in communities was favored by President F. F. Becker of the First National of Kaukauna, at the Fond du Lac meeting. Mr. Becker declared that a law similar to the one which limits the number of saloons, applied to banks, would relieve the banking profession and the public from a ruinous epidemic of starting new banks indiscriminately with or without the necessary qualifications on the part of the incorporators.

Wisconsin Notes

The city of Milwaukee's bonded indebtedness at present is $9,398,050, according to a recent statement of the public debt commission. The limit is fixed at $16,063,227, leaving a margin of $6,665,177. Although several issues will be retired in July, new issues approved or pending will leave the amount of indebtedness practically the same. The last tax levy to meet the cost of maturing bonds and interest was $883,000.

The Nekoosa State Bank of Grand Rapids has elected the following officers: President, Guy O. Babcock; vice-president, L. M. Alexander; cashier, H. H. Helke; directors, L. M. Alexander, F. J. Wood, J. E. Brazeau, H. E. Fitch, Guy O. Babcock, John B. Nash, and F. J. McGarigle.

The following officers were elected for the Nekoosa State Bank: Guy O. Babcock, president; L. M. Alexander, vice-president, and H. H. Helke, cashier.

Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt's annual report to the governor shows that the state now has 590 state banks with capital of $20,000,000, a gain of $1,350,000 over last year. Total resources are $209,000,000, a gain of $23,000,000 over 1912. No state banks have failed since June, 1904.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the new Citizens Bank of Glidden being established with a capital stock of $10,000. Rolfe J. Russell and others are reported among the incorporators.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

The demand for money during the past week has been fair and about normal; rates were firm at 5½ to 6 per cent on call and time loans. New York exchange was in fair offerings and good demand. Bank clearings have been quite large and slightly in excess of those of the corresponding period last year.

Paro Made Assistant Manager

Fred J. Paro, formerly private secretary to Tom Randolph, president of the National Bank of Commerce, has been promoted to assistant manager of the institution's bank department. Mr. Paro was born in St. Louis and has spent most of his time here in post-office, railroad and bank work. In 1904 he went to the Commonwealth Trust as private secretary to Mr. Randolph, then its president, and two years later was made traveling representative. He entered the employ of the Bank of Commerce in 1908. During the last seven years Mr. Paro has attended scores of bankers' conventions and has built up a wide acquaintance throughout Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Illinois, Iowa and Louisiana among the leading business men and bankers.

Bank Clerks Elect Officers

The annual election of members of the board of management of the St. Louis Chapter, American Institute of Banking, held at the State National, resulted as follows: F. Falkenhainer, Mechanics-American; J. F. Ashoff, State National; Hugo Boehl, German Savings; W. Haill, Third National; F. W. Wrieden, National Bank of Commerce; George F. Willing, St. Louis Union Trust; H. A. Bridges, Jr., Boatmens; H. S. Rein, Wernse & Dieckman; W. H. Bramman, National Bank of Commerce; H. J. Brenner, International; L. S. Kohlbry, German-American.

Wilson Cuts Schoenle Term

President Wilson has commuted the five-year sentence of Albert Schoenle for embezzling funds of the Central National of St. Louis to one year and a day. Schoenle pleaded guilty to embezzling approximately $1,300 and was sentenced by Judge D. P. Dyer in the United States district court. Prior to his arrest he made a voluntary confession of his peculations and it was believed that his sentence would be light because of this and the fact that he has a wife and a small child. He has been in Leavenworth penitentiary about seven months.

Assigns Property for Claims

Following a mass meeting of creditors, Mrs. Marie Chwalibog, wife of Thaddeus Chwalibog, East St. Louis banker and "King of Little Poland," on Tuesday of last week assigned ten lots and three houses to pay claims which the creditors held against Chwalibog when he departed for his old home in Poland two weeks ago. Chwalibog, according to the Polish residents, disappeared, taking with him about $5,000 in money which, they declare, belonged to them and which they had given into his keeping as banker or agent.

Cashier Confesses to $52,000 Shortage

Blaming bad loans to old friends and neighbors, whom he trusted too well, Preston T. Akers, cashier of the Farmers Bank, Smithville, Mo., has confessed that he forged the names of a number of prominent men of that city to notes aggregating $52,000 in order to cover up the bank's losses on the notes that he had taken in the last seven years. Akers organized the bank twenty-three years ago and was one of the leading citizens of Smithville. He was superintendent of a Sunday school, a deacon in the church and secretary of the school board. A bank examiner discovered the shortage. In his effort to make as great a restitution as possible, Akers gave up his watch and all the change in his pockets to the bank, as well as all of his other possessions.

Bank Increases Capital

State Bank Commissioner Mitchell has authorized the Holland Banking Company of Springfield to increase its capital stock from $100,000 to $200,000.

Illegal Appointment

It has been discovered that former Governor Robinson's appointment of John M. Davis of Little Rock, Ark., to fill the office of state bank commissioner, under an act passed by the last legislature, creating a state banking department, is null and void. Mr. Davis presumed he had been regularly appointed and when the state bankers' association met last month, outlined what he proposed to do as state bank examiner. Now it appears that the act creating the department did not contain the "emergency clause" and hence the measure could not become effective until ninety days after the legislature adjourned. As Governor Robinson made the appointment before the legislature adjourned, he was several months ahead of the law. The ninety day limit expires June 12th after which Acting Governor Futrell will announce the appointment. The law does not become actually operative until January 1st, 1914.

Provided State Farm Loans

Establishment of a state agricultural bank with its principal place of business in Oklahoma City, and farm loan banks over the state as auxiliary thereto, issuance of $5,000,000 of bonds to provide money to loan farmers on long time and at low rate of interest, and guaranty by the state of deposits in all such banks, is provided by an initiative petition filed with the secretary of state by Edmond Barrigan of Norman. About 2,000 signatures are necessary to have the question submitted to the people. The proposed bill provides for the main bank and others to be known as Farmers Loan banks in any place in the state upon petition of not less than 10 nor more than 100 responsible and respectable persons, whose sole occupation is farming. The measure makes an appropriation of $25,000 for the purpose of establishing the banks. The governing authority of the banks is vested in the governor, chief justice of the state supreme court, attorney general, president of the A. and M. college and three farmers, none of whom shall be adherents of the same political party as the governor. Members of each bank are held liable for all loans made to the members by the State Agricultural Bank or branch banks, and also liable for the deposits.

JOE HIRSCH REPORTS FOR TEXAS AGRICULTURAL COMMITTEE

Joe Hirsch, vice-president of the Corpus Christi National, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Texas Bankers Association, reported for that committee at the annual convention of the association held in Galveston. The report was intensely interesting and contained many suggestions for co-operation between the banks and the farmers.

It was decided by the committee to work for extension of the field demonstration work of the United States department of agriculture to every agricultural county in the state, backed up by county and local aid wherever practicable. Attention was called to the fact that if all the farmers of Texas had cultivated their crops under the same methods and had produced results equal to those of the demonstration farmers and the same prices for products had prevailed, the net increase in the value of the great staple crops of Texas would have amounted to about $300,000,000.

Attention was directed to a plan proposed by the Farmers Union of Texas providing for the loaning of money at 6 per cent secured by cotton stored in the warehouses of the union. Loans last year were made on a basis of not to exceed $35 per bale basis middling.

It is believed that the great agricultural countries of the world are those which devote their principal attention to the live stock and dairying industries, and that the whole subject of better farming resolves itself into the matter of putting live stock on the farms. There seems to be an unaccountable aversion to hog raising in the Lone Star state. Quoting from figures prepared by Armour & Co., Mr. Hirsch said that there is being shipped into Texas about $50,000,000 per year worth of pork and lard products. This refers to shipments made to packers, jobbers and other large-lot buyers. Texas, says the report, particularly the southern and center portions, is peculiarly adapted to the building up of a great cattle-feeding industry. Criticism was directed against certain interests which have been contending that intensive cultivation of the soil will result detrimentally to the farmer.

A foundation for permanent organization has been laid by the committee by the division of the state into district and county units, it being planned to have seven agricultural districts with the district chairman in charge of his own division. The district chairmen are urged to assist the central committee by calling meetings and by planning and following up a systematized campaign. An effort should be made also to get county chairmen to call county meetings of bankers at which agricultural subjects could be discussed.

INDIANA BANKERS AT COLUMBUS

At the annual meeting of Group Six of the Indiana Bankers Association at Columbus, last Tuesday, May 20th, Dr. S. P. McCrea of Shelbyville, was elected president and Walter Hungerford of St. Paul, was elected secretary. Shelbyville was selected as the next place of meeting. The members of the executive committee are: John N. Milliken, Newcastle; A. A. Hackman, Batesville; A. E. Newlin, Lawrenceburg; E. R. Lemon, Richmond; J. M. Perkins, Rising Sun. In an address "Advertising a Bank," Ames Philridge of Indianapolis, press representative of the association, condemned calendar and all novelty advertising and commended newspaper advertising. He said the bankers of Indiana spend $50,000 annually for calendars. Prof. G. I. Christie of Purdue University said the farmers did sixty per cent of banking, and advised the bankers to co-operate with and help and encourage them as much as possible.

DALLAS WANTS CONVENTION

Dallas chapter is preparing to make a vigorous campaign to secure the 1914 national convention of the American Institute of Banking. At a meeting of the chapter recently the matter was discussed at length and the secretary was instructed to send a personal letter to every banker in the Southwest asking his co-operation in this movement, and it was decided to send a large chapter delegation to the annual convention to be held in Richmond, Va., next September. Other cities joining in the movement to secure the convention for Dallas will be asked to send delegations to work for that object. The Dallas chapter is in a very flourishing condition and its members are enthusiastic over their work. The chapter has handsome quarters and practically every bank employee in Dallas is a member. The bankers of Dallas have promised ample financial backing in the campaign to get the annual convention for that city.

One of the oldest banks in northern Illinois is the Winnebago National of Rockford, which was established in 1848. It has capital and undivided profits of $500,000 and assets of over two million dollars. Chandler Starr, the cashier, is well known to many Illinois bankers, especially in the northern part of the state. William T. Robertson is the president and Edward P. Lathrop is the vice-president.

A LOOK AT THE FACTS

To a very unusual degree the public utterances of Joseph T. Talbert of New York circulate at par in inland banking circles. His opinions are not the reflections of European pessimism, nor are they dictated by the invisible policies of any banking institution. They are Talbertesque in origin and in diction. Always a student and full-minded thinker, he uses facts as he finds them, and his "Look at the Facts" talk before the Detroit Bankers Club is a case in point.

The reader may not agree with Mr. Talbert but he knows that what the able banker says is what he thinks and he will wish to know the reason. First of all he reiterates his former utterances against the chief American sin of extravagant living. He absolved the automobile from the onus of a former speech, saying that he used it only as an illustration and not as the chief sinner. After stating general American conditions he put this duty squarely upon the shoulders of the American banker. Mr. Talbert would have him "not merely to examine his own balance sheets and reserve percentages, which are the barometers of his trade, nor to consider merely the conditions of business in his own community, nor the promise of the crops; but to take a broad and comprehensive view, national and international; to observe all that may be in sight at home and abroad, and to analyze what is seen. This is the especial duty of those of us who hold on deposit the reserve funds of other banks, not only because of our own possible necessities, but because of our responsibilities toward those for whom we act. Our correspondent banks and individual customers as well have a right to expect of us clear vision, sound advice, and a free expression of it, to the end that they too may rightly interpret the signs of the times."

Surely this is orthodox and well placed responsibility. It is said that the sentiment was applauded by the Detroit bankers and their guests. Mr. Talbert reviewed financial and banking conditions in Germany, France and England and drew the conclusion that we are in for a period of higher rates for money. He deprecated the fact that America "is the only free market for gold in the world," and told how the gold thus is withdrawn by the European financial houses. On the money situation he said:

In view of the fact state banks and trust companies outnumber the national banks more than two to one, and that the business of the state banks and trust companies has been growing at a pace certainly equal to, if not in excess of that of the national banks, we are justified in concluding that the gross increase in loans and investments of all the banks of the United States since 1907 has been somewhere in the neighborhood of $5,000,000,000. The data for state banks is not available in complete form as that of national banks, but this estimate is well within the facts. The amount of lawful money actually required to be carried in the vaults of the banks of the country as reserves against this greatly increased liability would itself fully account for and justify the period of tight money which we have been experiencing since last autumn, leaving out of consideration altogether the influence exerted upon us by financial conditions in foreign countries.

Western bankers will read with relish the strictures the speaker put upon the custom of borrowing through note brokers, often without the knowledge of the banks interested. Mr. Talbert said:

Here I wish to utter a word of caution against the practice which has become all too common amongst merchants and manufacturers of financing themselves too largely through note brokers, and especially do I warn against any such borrowings except for seasonal uses in trade, and for that purpose only. Coming to the end, I think it quite clear that the condition confronting us is not a local one, but a world condition. Everywhere there are enormous demands for fresh capital to carry on new industries and enterprises. Prices have been steadily rising for a number of years, and this fact of itself has necessitated increased borrowings on the part of merchants, dealers and manufacturers in order to carry on the same amount, or an increased volume, of business. The whole accumulated force of these circumstances has made the demand for credit exceed the amount of gold available to sustain the increased liabilities of the banks. This has brought about higher rates of interest the world over, but it must be borne in mind that high rates of interest can accomplish no more than to check borrowing. Raising the rate of interest does not create a single dollar of new capital nor increase the amount of available credit, except such as may be attracted from one locality or country to another.

He cautioned bankers to beware of loaning for "bricks and mortar," extensions of plants, which is not banking but financing a business, and should be done on bond issues. The Detroit address is an important addition to current banking literature.

HAVE WE PROFESSIONAL BANK PROMOTERS?

Even the casual reader of the daily financial columns in Chicago papers must have noted the rapid, recent increase in the issue of state bank charters or of "permits" to organize. Many of the proposed new institutions are located in Chicago and even bill-board advertising for the sale of stock is a frequent resort. Through an Eastern financial publication a famous Chicago authority on banking has made the charge that Illinois is suffering from a period of professional bank promotions, such as Comptroller Murray stamped out in the national field.

The big Chicago observer goes straight to his subject and this is the case as stated:

Illinois is now the favorite pasturage for the professional organizer of banks and trust companies. The bars have been let down apparently at Springfield in the office of the auditor of state and no applicant for a bank or trust company charter need go away empty-handed. Within one period of two short weeks Auditor Brady, the successor of McCullough, has handed out not less than fifteen permits for the organization of state banks, trust companies and saving banks. Their authorized capital ranges all the way from $50,000 to $300,000. Most of these permits are granted in behalf of professional bank organizers who are foraging up and down the state industriously soliciting subscriptions for purchase of bank and trust company stocks. The positions of president, vice-president or election as director are baits held out to the most promising subscribers, most of whom have derived their knowledge of banking from hearsay. Many of these mushroom banks and trust companies will probably never be heard from again after the promoter collects his fees from the initial payments on subscriptions. Such as are launched must lead a rather precarious existence because Chicago and most of the thriving cities of the state already are sufficiently served by ably-managed banks and trust companies. Probably the auditor will awaken to a due sense of his responsibilities when some of these concerns fail.

In Chicago banking circles the question of where it will end is a topic for almost daily discussion. Inquiries are frequent at this office but information is scarce and it is difficult to find out who are behind the new banks. Some of the new charters have been offered for sale, so the story goes. Bankers in Chicago are hoping Mr. Brady will consult with some one who can safely advise him. His lack of banking and business experience need not prevent the adoption of a sane and safe office policy as to new banks in Illinois, and in the crowded financial district of this city.

ON SUPERVISION OF PRIVATE BANKS

Editor CHICAGO BANKER.—That private banks should be subject to state or national supervision there is, I think, no question; that they should be required to have a specified minimum capital there is some doubt. These two questions seem to have become confused in the minds of those who are now agitating for reforms in private banking methods.

The primary purpose of requiring a bank to have capital is to protect depositors. Those who run the bank must risk their money first, the depositors' money second. What has population to do with this? A bank with $10,000 capital and $100,000 deposits is, if the expense ratio is right, relatively as strong and safe as one with $10,000,000 capital and $100,000,000 deposits.

If a bank examiner were to examine a private bank and find its assets healthy, its business properly conducted, and its ratio of capital to deposits right, should that not suffice? Mere size isn't strength. Publicity of actual figures means little to many people. Few can read and understand a balance sheet. Publicity of percentage ratios would mean much more and be more easily understood. The large bank should not be allowed to use its mere size as a sort of bluff to overawe both the depositor and the smaller bank.

STATE CONFERENCE ON AGRICULTURE AND COUNTRY LIFE IN INDIANA

The program for the state conference on agriculture and country life in Indiana to be held under the auspices of the agricultural committee of the Indiana Bankers Association in Indianapolis, June 3d and 4th, has been sent out by Secretary Andrew Smith. The first session will be held in the assembly hall of the Claypool Hotel, and if the attendance warrants the change other sessions will be held in Tomlinson Hall.

June 3d, Charles L. Goodbar, chairman of the Indiana Bankers Association agricultural committee, cashier of the Crawfordsville State Bank, will tell of work for the conference, and Governor Samuel L. Ralston will discuss the relation of the state to agricultural development. T. A. Coleman, secretary Federation of Indiana Agricultural Associations, Rushville, is down for an address on "Present and Future Demands of Indiana Agriculture."

Other speakers with the subjects assigned to them are as follows: "The Building of a National Agriculture and Country Life," H. J. Waters, president Kansas Agricultural College, Manhattan; "How State and Local Commercial Bodies Can Assist Farmers," W. G. Edens, Central Trust Company of Illinois; "Aid for Agriculture Through National and Commercial Agencies," D. F. Maish, president Federation of Indiana Agricultural Associations, Frankfort; "The Church as a Factor in Country Life," Dr. Albert B. Storms, pastor Central M. E. Church, Indianapolis; "Educating Boys and Girls for Country Life," S. W. Jordan, country agricultural agent, Sedalia, Mo.; "Vocational Education," Dr. W. E. Stone, president Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind.; "Education for the Farm," Prof. A. B. Graham, Ohio State University, Columbus; "Education for Home Making," Mrs. Virginia C. Meredith, president Indiana Home Economics Association, Cambridge City; "Agricultural Development," the Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks, former vice-president of the United States, and "Farm Credits," George Woodruff, president of the First National, Joliet, Ill.

Nearly 1,000 Indiana banks in the Indiana Bankers Association, after a long and diligent inquiry into prevailing conditions and possibilities that Indiana farm resources offer far more abundant prosperity and contentment—and which can be reflected from the farms into the cities and towns—have called this state conference on agriculture and country life in Indiana. The conference will bring together the thoughtful men and women of the state that they may unite their forces in developing the business, educational, religious and social welfare of the people who live on farms and in rural communities. The conference will for the first time unify the great forces of the state which are now at work along some special line of agricultural development and give them inspiration and information which will enable these forces to move together to one great end and for the common good of every family within the state.

It is desired to secure the attendance of men and women from the farms; township, city and county school officials and members of all school boards; county councilmen and county tax officials; rural ministers and physicians; officers and members of rural clubs, representatives from commercial clubs, bankers, millers, grain dealers; teachers of industrial training and domestic science and members of town women's clubs. All sessions will be open to the public without charge, the Indiana Bankers Association meeting all expenses of the conference. It is expected that this will be the greatest educational meeting in the history of Hoosier rural life.

J. G. Haskins, pioneer resident of Des Moines and formerly president of the American and Iowa Savings banks of Des Moines, died at his home in this city last week at the age of eighty-four. He retired from active business some years ago. He had been in bad health for some time.

Iowa bankers who attended the state convention in Des Moines this week may be excused for smiling in view of the report of the state department giving the result of the call for April 17th. The report is one of the most flattering put out by the state department in many months. It shows an increase in deposits of $4,969,165.28 over the report compiled following the call of February 5th. The surplus shows an increase of $150,275 and undivided profits an increase of $2,289,740. The bills receivable show an increase of $10,446,457.21. Credits subject to sight draft show a decrease of $3,331,947.92. The aggregate amount due depositors is shown to be $32,070,661.47 greater than upon April 3d last year, truly a remarkably fine showing. In the past year there have been 45 new state and savings banks added to the jurisdiction of the Iowa department. Since the February call there have been ten new banks. The average reserve in all banks on April 17th was 19.4 per cent. The report shows that there are at present in Iowa 756 savings banks, 290 state banks and 15 trust companies. The total deposits in the savings banks are $210,513,823.17; in the state banks and trust companies $94,647,949; total $305,161,772.18. The showing is satisfactory to the state department and bankers generally.

Bankers Gather for Convention

Among Iowa bankers seen in Des Moines before the big convention opened were Cashier F. H. Graves, Farmers Savings, Madrid; Cashier H. J. Garlock, State of Maxwell; Cashier J. C. Cozad, Decatur State Savings; Vice-President L. J. Klemm, Norwalk Savings; President E. D. Bower, City of Paton and Miss K. B. O'Dair, assistant cashier People's State, Guthrie Center.

"Blue Sky" Law to Take Effect July 4th

Secretary of State W. S. Allen upon whose shoulders will fall much of the labors incidental to the enforcement of the "Blue Sky" law announces that he is going to make a liberal construction of the measure pending its taking effect. In other words he is going to give the corporations an opportunity to get acquainted with the statute and find out what is expected of them. The law takes effect July 4th. As every corporation selling stock must have a license and permit after that time, the work will pile up on the office of the secretary for several weeks at least. Mr. Allen states that pending the investigations which he intends to make thorough, he is not going to take snap judgment on any corporation. A reasonable time will be granted after the law takes effect before its terms are rigidly enforced. In the meantime attorneys are preparing to take the measure into the courts and secure an opinion as to whether or not it is constitutional.

Shaw Again High Bidder

Once more the now famous Atlantic North and South Railroad is in the spotlight. At the third sale of the property to satisfy the claims of creditors, former Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw once more proved to be high bidder. This time he was awarded the road upon his bid of $294,000. However, there are reports that Mr. Shaw had authorized the withdrawal of his bid and it is stated that his instructions were not carried out. Therefore, it appears, it is doubtful whether he will show up to claim his property on June 2d. Upon that date sufficient cash must be paid over to show that Shaw means business. If he fails to come across or if his bid is withdrawn as rumored, the road will be sold again upon the June 2d date. Secretary Shaw has reduced his bids now from $402,050 to $294,000 and at the last election was awarded the same property at a price $108,000 less than his original offer. He is thus making money fast on the deal. However, he was unable to make good on his first bid because the Balkan war prevented him floating bonds in London as he had anticipated.

Attractive Bank Buildings in Des Moines

Bankers who attended the convention spoke very highly of the changes that have taken place in Des Moines bank buildings since the convention last met here three years ago. In the past year alone four new bank buildings have been erected in Des Moines and they have been fine structures in every way. The Central State has moved into a handsome new building on Fifth street, while just across the way is the splendid new home of the Mechanics Savings. Then the Iowa Trust and Savings has occupied a new home in East Des Moines, while the Home Savings has moved into a building so completely remodeled as to make it seem as good as new. For the most part, Des Moines banks are very well housed. The Des Moines National, Capital City State, Peoples Savings, Citizens National, Iowa National, German Savings and Valley National are all in comparatively new or recently remodeled buildings. But the latter two are not satisfied. When the I. B. A. next meets in Des Moines, the German Savings and the Valley National will be located in new homes. It is probable also that the Des Moines National will add another story to its building before many months have passed.

New Savings Bank Opens.

The new Central Savings at Sioux City is open for business. Only savings accounts will be handled but 5 per cent will be paid upon them. The bank will be operated in connection with the Levitt Investment Company. K. L. Levitt is president of the new bank. The fixtures have been installed at 503-505 Bolton Block. Mr. Levitt states that the Investment Company which bears his name has 2,000 customers and he anticipates that most of them will open accounts at once in the new savings institution.

Iowa Notes.

How a forger weighing 350 pounds could escape from officers is a puzzle to Secretary P. W. Hall of the I. B. A. and how he could evade capture after once effecting his escape is even a greater puzzle. Secretary Hall is diminutive. A 350 pounder looks as big as a house to him and he cannot understand how one Harrison, alias several other names, has not been captured after the officers at Muskogee, Okla., arrested him some days ago only to let him get away. However, up to this writing, Harrison has not been recaptured.

Simon Casady, president of the Central State of Des Moines and one of Iowa's best known financiers, has been entertaining a house party at Lake Okoboji. Despite abominable weather, the party is declared a success.

SUGGESTS GOVERNMENT GUARANTY

Editor THE CHICAGO BANKER:—There has been so much talk concerning a "Central Bank," "National Reserve Association," "The Aldrich Plan," etc., until it has become an "old story" and but little nearer solution of the problem than when the start was made. With some temerity, I suggest "Government Guaranty of Deposits of National Banks." This can be done through the office of the comptroller or treasurer at a very little additional expense and at a minimum cost to national banks. It has been shown conclusively that an assessment of 1-30 of 1 per cent would cover the requirement, and I doubt if this assessment would be required more than one year in three. The very fact of a government guaranty would at once greatly cut the failures which are even now, practically nothing. It seems to me that this would simplify matters and relieve the anxiety as to the matter being handled by a few men, and divorce it entirely from "Wall Street influence."

Quoting from Senator Owen, chairman of senate committee on banking and currency: "Covering the active national banks for the past 49 years there has been an annual loss of .0362 per cent." A small amount. With a government guaranty this would be cut more than one half, so this is my reason for saying that 1-30 of 1 per cent, made once in three years, would more than meet the exigencies of the case—don't you think so?

I merely make these remarks as a suggestion and would like to hear from other national bankers.

(Signed) W. C. ROBINSON.
President First National Bank.
Winfield, Kan., May 14, 1913.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash., May 28th.—Back from an extended trip to his Holland birthplace and other European countries, R. Insinger, manager of the Northwestern and Pacific Hypotheek Bank, says that European war talk and uncertainty of Wall Street are making Dutch bankers rather cautious about investing at this time.

"Timid as the bankers are at this time in negotiating for new investments, they nevertheless are placing considerable money and they have untold amounts," said Mr. Insinger. "Just as soon as the situation clears a bit they will have any amount of money available for investment. Holland, you know, is the place money comes from. The country never was in better shape. Industries and agriculture are flourishing and the country is genuinely healthy and prosperous."

Mr. Insinger's concern brings in a great deal of Dutch money to the Spokane country each year. He said Spokane development projects have credit splendidly established in Holland and will be able to secure plenty of money when needed. Mr. Insinger, who is active in promoting better roads in this section, made a study of European methods and has started to encourage Spokane country residents to make still further road improvements.

Twenty Spokane business men held a conference this week and decided to organize a new $100,000 trust company in this city, $70,000 of the capital stock being subscribed at the meeting. The new company, several names for which are being considered, subject to the approval of the state authorities, will restrict itself by its charter to straight trust company business, and will engage in no banking business whatsoever, savings or otherwise. It will, however, enter actively the field of estate handling, mortgages, the marketing and underwriting of securities and bonds, and fire and casualty insurance. Officials of the Washington National Life Insurance Company, and of the Spokane Savings and Loan Society, are among the stockholders. T. H. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National Bank, addressed the meeting on the general field of trust company activity, and promised his friendly assistance. W. S. Gilbert, T. W. Emerson, O. R. Parker, A. L. Porter and Fred Kiesling were appointed to perfect the details of name and organization, and on the adoption of the report of this committee application for a charter will be made immediately at Olympia.

F. H. McKay, farm loan expert of the Union Trust and Savings, has returned from an extended trip of inspection of the Spokane country, including Whitman, Lincoln, Adams and Grant counties, and the wheat producing sections of northern Idaho. Mr. McKay made the trip on business of the bank and gave special attention to the growing crops and general prospects in the sections visited. He is enthusiastic over present conditions. Admitting that the spring has been backward, he still contends that the most satisfactory results have been obtained in the past when the weather in the fore part of the season had been similar to this spring. He says: "In all the above counties the winter wheat is very promising. This cool, cloudy weather has caused the grain to become well set, rooting deeply, and making a good foundation to build upon a little later when warmer weather comes, as is bound to happen. Nevertheless, June is the month that means success or failure to the wheat farmer. With another good rain in June our records will be broken. Looking backward to the snowfall of last winter, we feel sure that enough still remains in the mountains practically to assure us of a continuation of favorable weather until the critical month of June is passed. In this event we can see nothing but prosperity ahead for the man who depends upon agriculture for his livelihood."

Horace and Harlan Peyton, 22 and 20 years old, respectively, will be given the management of a $1,000,000 estate left by the death of their father, Colonel I. N. Peyton. Included in the estate is a seven-story office building in Spokane. The brothers have opened offices in the building and are starting to master the details of their big responsibility. Until January 1, 1914, they will have the active assistance of John H. Peet, who was associated with Colonel Peyton for 20 years. Thereafter the Peyton boys will have full charge, subject only to the services of Mr. Peet in an advisory capacity.

Private banks rapidly are getting their affairs into shape for the approach of state supervision, according to J. L. Mohundro, state bank examiner, who has completed a 16-day tour of the eastern half of the state. An act of the legislature requires that all private banks in the state must incorporate by January 1, 1915, and that until that time, after June 12th next, they must be subject to the same state supervision as incorporated banks. The examiner reports that many of the private banks already have incorporated since the passage of the law, and that most of them will have compiled with the law long before the expiration of the allotted time.

William Huntley, pioneer business man of the Spokane country and a director of the Exchange National Bank, and Miss Sadie Sanders of Los Angeles, were married six months ago in Los Angeles, and kept the fact a secret until last week. A pioneer of the Spokane country, Mr. Huntley has been closely identified with many important enterprises. He was formerly vice-president of the Exchange National and is still a director and one of the heaviest stockholders in the institution. He is a heavy holder in the Inland Brewing and Malting Company and several other Spokane concerns, and also is interested in the Colfax National Bank and the Huntley Mercantile Company at Colfax.

Among the out-of-town bankers in Spokane this week were: E. M. Ehrhardt, president of the Empire National, Lewiston, Ida.; A. A. Crane, president of the First National of Harrison, Ida.; F. W. Tinkel, vice-president of the First National of Coeur d'Alene, Ida., and George H. Waterman, president of the State Bank of Kamiah, Ida.

IOWA CONVENTION

Twenty-seventh annual convention of the Iowa Bankers Association held Tuesday and Wednesday in Des Moines was a record-breaker. The Auditorium just north of the corner of Fourth Street and Grand Avenue had been engaged for the meeting. Headquarters were at the Savery Hotel.

Tuesday morning at ten o'clock the convention was called to order by President Shade of Rock Rapids. Address of welcome was made by Mayor James R. Hanna and the response by Charles D. Ellis, president of the First National of Charles City, after which President Shade delivered his annual address. Treasurer C. R. Hannan, Jr., of Council Bluffs then presented his annual report. The report of Secretary P. W. Hall was distributed in printed form and not read from the platform. After committee reports by the chairmen the Hon. George W. Clarke, governor of Iowa, delivered an address and was followed by President Raymond A. Pearson of the Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, who told the bankers what is being done for agriculture in Iowa. At the close of the first forenoon session the delegates assembled in front of the Auditorium and had their pictures taken. Immediately following the adjournment of the first morning's session, members of the American Bankers Association present met to nominate a vice-president of the A. B. A. for Iowa, to elect a delegate as a member of the nominating committee of the next A. B. A. convention, nominate a member of the executive council of the A. B. A. and to transact other business. B. B. Clark, vice-president of the A. B. A. for Iowa, presided.

Tuesday at 1:30 the Hon. W. I. Nolan of Minneapolis delivered an address, after which adjournment was taken for the ball game between Des Moines and Denver.

Wednesday morning J. A. S. Pollard, cashier of the Fort Madison Savings, delivered a very able address which will be found in full elsewhere in this issue, and James M. Parsons, attorney for the association, discussed the new trust company law. Reports then were heard from the committee on resolutions and from other appointed committees, after which officers were elected for the ensuing year. Immediately after adjourment the new Council of Administration, composed of the association officers and group chairmen elected for the ensuing year, and the outgoing president, held a meeting.

At 1:30 the bankers and their guests left Des Moines on a special train on the Interurban for Ames. On arrival at the Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, the visitors were conducted in small parties through the various departments. George Woodruff of Joliet, Ill., addressed the gathering.

Tuesday evening special entertainment was provided at the Auditorium. In the afternoon the ladies went on an automobile trip about the city and to the Golf and Country Club, where a dinner was served at 6 o'clock, followed by a musicale.

Officers of the Iowa Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, Charles Shade, president First National of Rock Rapids; vice-president, F. B. Yetter, cashier Iowa National, Davenport; secretary, P. W. Hall, Des Moines; treasurer, Charles R. Hannan, Jr., cashier City National, Council Bluffs.

President's Address

President Shade of Rock Rapids reviewed the work accomplished by various committees of the association. He said in part:

"The legislative committee met with the executive council in Des Moines soon after the adjournment of our last convention, to talk over, discuss and arrange for proper and needful legislation which might be enacted by the incoming legislature, which would convene in the early part of this year. This committee has been on the job continuously, considering, weighing and sifting the many bills proposed and to be submitted to the legislature, giving its hearty approval and support to a number of helpful acts, some of which were later enacted into law, and with as much vigor opposing such proposed legislation as in its judgment seemed unwise and imprudent.

"The committee on taxation has been vigilant in its work, patrolling the legislature during its entire session, seeing that whatever special legislation was enacted for the taxing of banking capital, surplus, money and credits was wholesome and equitable. All proposed legislation along this line finally was referred to the state legislative committee on retrenchment and reform, who will not report until two years hence at the next session of the legislature. In appointing the tax committee, I selected only men who had made the subject a special research and study, and I believe that greater achievement will be accomplished at the next session of the legislature by continuing this committee.

"The laying hold of the great problem of better roads by the merchant, the tradesman, the agriculturist and the banker is awaking the folk of the nation to proper and needed legislation for its accomplishment. Through the combined efforts of the many committees appointed by various organizations on good roads, the recent legislature passed a bill which, I hope, is the entering wedge for future action in this great forward movement.

"Matters pertaining to our control, future welfare and future progress, find their way to this body through the resolution committee, and we have been guilty, during the past, of sins of commission as well as sins of omission in forcing this committee to act without time for deliberation. It is impossible for them to give just consideration to the many important resolutions coming into their hands in the allotted time of a two days' session. I deemed it wise, therefore, to name the committee early, requesting the secretary to inform the members of their appointment and to forward to them all matters which should come under their jurisdiction as soon as received.

"Last year the state of Iowa came into her rightful heritage by being dubbed the "Corn Princess." Although her acreage is not as large as some of her sister states, yet she produced more bushels of that King of Products, corn, than any other state in the Union. The slogan, "Better Farming and More Intensified Agriculture" has been kidnaped by the financier, the railway magnate, the manufacturer, the merchant, the pulpit, the press and the banker. Why? Because the true foundation of all wealth is the production of the soil. Our committee on agriculture has been one of the potential units in bringing forward that great movement, better agricultural development and education, which is forcing the reorganization of our rural schools and the revision of curricula in our colleges and universities. This is one of the great reconstructive and regenerative propositions of the twentieth century. Every member of this association should give it his personal support.

"During the last twelve months much has been said, written and published as to state supervision of private banks. Careful auditing and publicity of statement add character, stability and confidence to any institution doing a banking business. "He that has character need have no fear of his condition" is applicable to the banking corporation, and the private banker is slowly but surely coming to the same mind. I am of the opinion that the Iowa Bankers Association should not be too active in promoting any proposed legislation along this line at the present time.

"The group gatherings are coming much into favor and are looked forward to as the home-coming of the family. Here the elder brother gets acquainted with the younger brother, rubs shoulder to shoulder with his coworker and very often is introduced to his own town competitor; here experiences are related, knotty questions discussed and solved, and cooperation stimulated; here the active and energetic group chairman installs the nursery school in bringing back to the fold those who have grown indifferent and lapsed in membership; here, also, emanate many of the ideas which make for a greater and more helpful organization.

"Symptoms of fever and unrest in the commercial world almost always can be traced back to a money stringency as the primary cause, just as truly as a rise in the temperature of the blood in the human body can be traced to an obstruction or unwarranted pressure on the circulatory system. In either case interruptions in the commercial as well as the human body retard growth, close functional avenues, develop weakness and quite often force amputation in the human body, as well as driving legitimate business into bankruptcy and ruin. We are all of one mind as to the evil effects of a panic in money—or no money at all, as we had in 1907; but somewhat divided as to the remedy to be applied. Whether it is to be a de luxe pill, compounded by Uncle Sam in his statesman laboratory, or whether it is to be a flexible, responsive and effective pill, compounded by the "Patriarch Banker Physician" in his laboratory of many successful years of personal ministry, the problem to be solved is one of the greatest magnitude of the twentieth century and is engaging the master mind of statesman and financier in prolonged debate and diligent research.

"Congressman Prouty recently has submitted a bill which has been referred to the committee on currency and banking, and which I commend to you for careful study. I believe that we are nearing the time when some definite action will be taken in working out and solving this most perplexing and far-reaching problem.

"A full attendance at all the meetings of the executive council facilitated the directing of the affairs of this association with rapidity and unison of purpose. Matters of policy have been dealt with fairly by all, and out of the discussion of vital questions has come harmony and unity of action. The associating with this type of manhood has been an inspiration to me. The friendships formed, the new associations made, and the courtesies extended to me, as presiding officer, will be ever remembered as the most delightful twelve months of banking fellowship in my life's journey.

"Zaccheus was little of statute, mighty in finance and bountifully blessed by God; likewise Hall is little of stature, mighty in secretaryship and generously esteemed by all of our association who have made his personal acquaintance. His untiring efforts in the protection work have made the name 'Iowa Bankers Association' stand for more than mere letters in the alphabet of the safe blower. His executive ability in smoothing out those irritable misunderstandings and gentle disposition of those delicate political problems which always pervade the atmosphere of the presiding officers of similar organizations proves conclusively that the association's choice was timely and merited."

Discusses New Law

James M. Parsons of Des Moines, attorney for the association, gave an interesting discussion of the recent law conferring additional powers on state savings banks and trust companies. Some of the points brought out by Mr. Parson's were:

The act passed by the last General Assembly known as substitute for Senate File No. 118 confers upon state and savings banks and trust companies powers which have been heretofore denied such corporations in the state of Iowa. The new powers conferred are all contained in section of the act. And the right to exercise them is given to all trust companies, state and savings banks now existing or hereafter incorporated when the articles of incorporation provide for their exercise. So that no bank or trust company is authorized to exercise any of the new powers conferred without a change in the articles of incorporation giving the power so to do. It hence logically follows that a bank or trust company may in its articles of incorporation provide for the exercise of all or any part of the powers they are authorized to exercise.

The question has been asked, can the affected corporations, by amendment to their articles of incorporation at the present time, be ready to assume the new powers July 4, 1913, or must they wait until after that date to amend their articles of incorporation: That the articles may be amended at the present time, preparatory to assuming the powers, would seem to admit of no question. True, by section 26, article 2, of the state constitution, laws passed by the General Assembly do not take effect, if not published by authority, prior to the fourth day of July after the passage thereof. But suppose a statute forbid the doing of a certain thing and prior to the taking effect of the act, two parties should enter into a contract to do the very things forbidden by the statute, with a clause providing for the commencement of the doing of the forbidden act, at the date of or after the act was to be in effect. Could anyone question but what such contract would be illegal? Conversely an amendment to the articles made now providing for the exercise of the new powers from and after July 4, 1913, would be legal.

The powers granted by this act in brief are;

1. To be appointed assignee, guardian, executor, trustee, receiver or assignee, in the same manner as might a natural person except that the appointment as guardian shall not apply to the persons.

2. To act as fiscal or transfer agents or registrar for estates, municipalities, companies or corporations.

3. To take, accept and execute any and all trust and powers, not illegal, as may be conferred upon or committed to them, and to hold any property or estate which may be the subject of such trust, and manage and dispose of the same in accordance with the terms of such trust or power.

4. To issue drafts upon depositories and to purchase, invest in, and sell promissory notes, bills of exchange, bonds and mortgages and other securities.

5. To exercise the powers conferred on and to carry on the business of a safe deposit company.

The fifth and sixth subdivisions of section 1 really confer no powers on those corporations not included in the foregoing, but do confer power on the courts to enable executors, administrators, guardians, receivers, assignees, and trustees to be discharged from further responsibility as to all or a part of the funds, and have such corporations assume the same, in all cases proper for such action to be taken. Such order can not be made by a court exparte, but only on the application of the holder of the funds, and after such notice to interested parties as the court may prescribe.

Banks and trust companies in accepting such trusts as arise from being executors, receivers, etc., are held to the same duties and obligations as individuals acting in like capacity, and are given the same rights. They must give bonds, the statute says, "in like sum and with penalties as is required by individuals." So that it would seem that where one of these corporations is selected by will to be an executor without bond, a court might in its discretion, on admitting the will to probate, do so without requiring a bond of the corporation executor, the same as an individual.

Section 3 of the act is:

"All property, real or personal, received in trust by any such corporation exercising the powers granted by this act, shall be kept separate from such funds or property which may be in possession of such corporation, and shall not be liable for the debts or obligations of such corporation."

The purpose of this section is plain. It was the intention of the legislature that none of the property held in trust could be subjected to the dangers and risks of banking; that the bank or trust company might fail, and the trust fund be unaffected.

No corporation can assume the powers granted in the act, if a bank, without having one of the words "State" of "Savings" incorporated in the name thereof, or if a trust company without having the word "trust" in the name. Section 6 governing this recites:

"Any trust company, state or savings bank, which under this act and by its original or amended articles of incorporation shall be authorized to exercise any of the powers herein granted, shall have the word 'trust,' 'state' or 'savings' incorporated in the name thereof; and no corporation hereinafter organized without complying with the terms of this act, and no partnerships, individual or unincorporated association, shall incorporate or embrace the word 'trust' in its name."

An analysis of this section will show that banks, now or hereafter organized, may continue the use of these words "state" or "savings" in their names, without complying with the act, and without being affected by its terms, but all other corporations exercising the powers in the act must use the word 'trust' in the name, and its use is forbidden to all others, except such corporations as now have that word in the name.

Section 2 of the act provides:

"In case any corporation shall hold any of its own shares of stock in any of the trust capacities herein authorized, then such shares shall be voted at stockholders' meetings by any person so authorized by the board of directors of said corporation."

This section might possibly in some cases lead to a minority of stockholders, who happened to form a majority of the membership of the directory, voting stock so held in trust as to make themselves a self-perpetuating body. But the danger of this is probably extremely remote.

Another requirement of the law is that all such trusts be reported to the auditor of state, for which reports that official probably will make the necessary rules and regulations.

The distinctions which have heretofore marked state and savings banks are not broken down or abrogated by the act and these two classes of banks being left practically as before. But trust companies are brought more fully under the supervision of the state authorities. This latter class of corporations is now made subject to all the statutes peculiar to the carrying on of the business of savings banks, except sections 1850, relating to investment of the funds; 1851, limiting right to purchase real estate; 1852, relating to the payment of interest and dividends, and 1855, relating to debts now covered by section 7 of the new act. Trust companies also are made subject to all of the statutes which apply alike to state and savings banks.

The act on the whole appears to be well drawn, and to have the new powers carefully guarded, without any undue restrictions as to the handling of trust funds, yet affording ample protection to the beneficiaries of such trusts as may be committed to these corporations, and confers powers that have been needed, to develop the trust features which are becoming more and more necessary in the conduct of business affairs of magnitude.

rule this country, do not approve it. We all recognize that the cause of co-operation, whether by combination of capital or organization of labor, is simply industrial progress, the necessity for large centralized force to perform the stupenduous tasks of modern civilization; the never-to-be-disregarded laws of supply and demand, and so far as the theory of combination is concerned, we must let the "god of evolution" work out the destiny of man's combined usefulness. Invention, improvement and the acquired commercial knowledge and skill of centuries are inseparably welded to modern industrial and commercial economy and progress.

I believe that it is beginning to be conceded that progress has gone as far as necessary in the combination of banks themselves. That came out plainly in the remarkable investigation recently conducted to locate the "Money Trust." You can, from the reports, decide for yourselves whether it was located or not, but one thing the evidence indicated clearly was that the "Money Trust"—so called—did not like its job anyhow and was perfectly willing to quit being an "Octopus" and turn the contract over to the people under any sound and scientific currency and banking law. For some reasons the committee appeared to fight shy of the "cause" of the alleged concentration of capital—our archaic banking and currency system.

J. L. EDWARDS
President Merchants National, Burlington, Iowa

The benevolent octopi examined admitted that they were simply taking care of the country for us in the absence of adequate financial legislation, and incidentally had to admit by inference that if they were not themselves such splendid and distinguished gentlemen, scholars and good judges of credit, that it might be bad for the country. I think the investigation to locate the money power should be broadened and conducted upon practical lines. A great many people have been very anxious about this vague, indefinite menace, called the money power. The banker has been mentioned frequently as the agent of this power. I strongly suspect that if the great common people could locate the real money power by fair and impartial investigation that they would find it in the homes of those who by frugal and industrious lives have accumulated a little capital and invested it in the banks and securities of the country—the people who own the deposits, who collectively own enormous blocks of corporation bonds and stocks for investment. If that proved true I believe the banker would cheerfully assume the responsibility and plead guilty to the agency feature.

MECHANICS SAVINGS BANK
Des Moines, Iowa

It is a good thing to have had the investigation, for it has aroused the interest of the people, even though only effect and not cause was shown. Concentration of banking power is a real danger. It usually means an increase in loans made upon speculative securities and a corresponding shrinkage in proper commercial banking loans. It means the control of wealth by a handful of "Napoleons of Finance" and this ever-increasing control is neither in accord with the principles of our government, nor will it square with the proper banking function—that of dealing in credit, buying that credit from others and selling it to those who need it at the market price, which is interest.

A bank cannot serve two masters; either it will cleave to the business man and despise the speculator, or it will do the other thing. When a bank neglects its function of supplying credit, the life-blood of commerce, the commercial body is weakened and the high finance microbes play havoc with the business system. It is of higher value to the banker to have the public recognize the bank in its present independent form as the result of centuries of progress and its high efficiency the product of careful study by eminent scholars of economics the world over; that the bank is really a power for good and with needful legislation may become a positive remedy for panic and monetary stringency, than to have them either admire or distrust the colossal size of merged or connected institutions.

Any sound plan of currency reform should include the agricultural credit problem, for the American farmer is entitled to as good facilities for credit as are granted his competitors in European countries. This is a live issue, which the progressive banker must largely work out, and he will keep hammering at this problem until the great farm land basis of credit will be available to the farmer at reasonable rates the country over and the long-term bonds which should be as available and as readily convertible as our best municipals will afford a safe and desirable investment for the people and bankers alike. Along with the credit associations proposed for the farmers, to be organized by small districts, let us hope that this greatest, oldest and most essential vocation known to man will be granted the financial facilities which have been envolved in the progress of older nations.

The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

GROUP FOUR AT CRYSTAL LAKE

Group Four of the Illinois Bankers Association, which includes Cook county, held its seventh annual meeting at Crystal Lake yesterday. County Superintendent of Schools A. M. Shelton delivered the address of welcome, the response being made by Henry S. Henschen, cashier of the State Bank of Chicago. At noon the bankers lunched at the Hotel Leonard on the shore of Crystal Lake, after which they were taken about in automobiles.

Henry S. Henschen, in responding to the address of welcome, said the adoption of the group system in Illinois has fully justified the predictions of those who advocated such a system five or six years ago. It has more than doubled the membership of the state association, has brought the members together for discussion of matters of interest to the banking fraternity, and in addition has increased the attendance at the state meetings.

Group Four, from a geographical standpoint, is not one of the largest but rather one of the smallest, but financially it is not entirely negligible. According to the last figures it has deposits in its national banks of 450 millions and in its state banks of over 500 millions, a grand total of 950 millions. Mr. Henschen said that, financially speaking, Group Four, with the possible exception of one, is the largest group in the country and that it possesses more deposits than a number of states.

The attendance was about 150 and the discussions showed great interest in the two set topics of bank accountancy and the negotiable instruments problems. The chef at the Lake has a reputation for his chicken dinners and he lived up to it. Many bankers came by automobile and their cars were used to "omnibus" the guests of the little city over the mile-and-a-half which separates it from its summer resorts on Crystal Lake proper, quite a body of water. The town is the very center of the Fox River dairy country and very rich and prosperous.

Wm. George came over in his new $5,000 six-cylinder and brought Harry Cooper, ex-Banker F. P. Judson and others with him. W. G. Schroeder was among the top-notchers present. The new cashier of the National City Bank, Walker G. McLaury, was out trying his wings among the seasoned veterans. The Woodruff twins were over from Joliet. President Charles N. Stevens of Evanston was having an attack of bank-examiner over at Evanston and had to leave just as the magic lantern man got busy.

It was a rotten number for a hot day, and the regular "tourist bankers" had been having four days of it. The windows and doors had to be closed. Imagine the rest.

The new officers elected are:

C. L. Wright, Crystal Lake, president.

W. G. Schroeder, Chicago, executive council I. B. A.

R. E. McEldowney, Chicago Heights, vice-president.

E. Frank Adams, Glen Ellyn, treasurer.

Thos. E. Newcomer, Chicago, secretary.

Nelson N. Lampert of Chicago was endorsed for membership on the A. B. A. executive council, the election to take place at the Chicago convention of the Illinois Bankers Association.

J. W. ROBINSON
BOISE

A. H. Keller, cashier of the First National of Weiser, has served the Idaho bankers the past year as their president. The big convention at Weiser this week was a successful culmination of his official connection with the Idaho Bankers Association.

J. W. Robinson, the efficient secretary of the state bankers' organization, is vice-president of the Union Savings and Trust Company of Boise. He is a conscientious worker, always having the best interest of the Idaho bankers at heart.

GEO. M. REYNOLDS HOPEFUL FOR ADEQUATE MONETARY REFORM

George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago, said in Washington this week that he is hopeful monetary reform legislation of value to the country will be enacted at the present session and is of the opinion that congress will make commercial paper the basis of an available important credit system. He believes that the comptroller of the currency should receive a large salary, between $30,000 and $40,000, "so as to attract to the office men who have had wide experience in banking, and who, with five or more years of usefulness remaining, are willing to take up the government work as a rounding out of their careers."

E. D. HULBERT BACK FROM EAST

E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust, has returned from the East. In speaking of general conditions he said:

"In certain money quarters I found a considerable degree of blueness. Banks of New York do not expect real trouble. I think we shall get through the coming autumn in good shape, although interest rates will probably remain high, but if New York in its blueness finds the situation solvable, we should not look for more than a close money market."

Mr. Hulbert was in Washington, where he conferred with Secretary McAdoo in regard to the proposed currency legislation. He said the progress of the currency bill is slower than expected, but that it stands an excellent chance of being adopted during the present session of congress.

SHUMAN TO BE ASSISTANT TREASURER

Irving Shuman of Sullivan, Ill., is to be appointed assistant treasurer of the United States at Chicago, in accordance with an agreement reached between President Wilson and Senator Lewis. Mr. Shuman is cashier of the First National of Sullivan.

KELLER TO GIVE CURRENCY VIEWS

R. C. Keller, vice-president and cashier of the Colonial Trust and Savings of Chicago, has been asked to appear before the house committee on banking and currency and present suggestions which he has offered for currency reform.

NEWLY elected members of the A. B. A. nominating committee which will meet at Boston are receiving letters from H. J. Haas, First National, Philadelphia, from N. P. Gatling, New York, and from E. K. Smith, Shreveport, asking votes for Wm. A. Law of the First National, Philadelphia, for first vice-president of the association.

LOOKS as if Mr. Law would have, in part at least, the Solid South. Out west and from all over they are for Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis, as the real "man with the hoe."

SO far none else has been named publicly and it ought to be a very pretty contest.

IOWA always has a big convention and the one at Des Moines showed 1,400 registrations, two hundred being ladies. The trip to Ames showed 900, which is the record.

THAT staunch old warrior, D. L. Heinsheimer of Glenwood, is the new president and rumor had it that Joseph H. Ingwersen of Clinton will be the next.

MR. INGWERSEN'S friends tried to "run" him this time but he declined to contest with his old and valued friend and came out for Heinsheimer. According to correct tactics "Joe" should have it next year.

P. W. HALL was re-elected secretary and highly praised for his efficiency and courtesy in a difficult office. His record is A 1.

THE new member of the A. B. A council is John McHugh, an honored ex-president of the state association. He succeeds E. L. Johnson of Waterloo and not C. H. McNider of Mason City, as announced.

McNIDER went off at New Orleans after starting the row which led to the new constitution, pretty sure to come about at Boston. His Iowa friends think he has earned another term and are likely to hand it to him.

McNIDER was elected to the nominating committee, to meet at Boston and will look carefully after the interests of Vice-President Arthur Reynolds, of the A. B. A.

IT was George Woodruff who spoke at Ames and not "J. P." (thinking of the late Mr. Morgan) nor was it "J. D." (thinking of Rockefeller), as the Iowa papers put it variously. It was just plain "George," and a hummer.

THERE were but four bank burglaries attempted in Iowa for the year, showing good protective work by Secretary Hall and his associates.

IOWA looks upon the state president's address as an official document and had it printed in pamphlet form uniform with the secretary's report and the protective report. Good idea!

THE Iowa association "continues to take an active part in advocating and promoting agricultural improvement and vocational education. Over a dozen members, including the officers, participated in the second Conference of Bankers Committees on Agricultural Development and Education, which was held in Minneapolis and St. Paul August 7th and 8th, 1912.

"THE proceedings of this Conference made a book an inch in thickness, and the association purchased and distributed 2,000 copies of same, each bank in the state receiving a copy, and the balance being distributed among county superintendents of schools, teachers, etc. There is no one way in which bankers can do more to add to the wealth and comfort of citizens than by assisting in this great work."

BANK COMMISSIONER E. H. DOYLE of Michigan, delivered a fine address at St. Paul this week to his brother superinten-

MICHIGAN has 451 state banks and six trust companies with footings close to 390 millions. Savings are two-thirds of the total.

MR. DOYLE has eleven examiners who do about two banks per week each. The national examiners have still more work to do. Mr. Doyle's comments are interesting. Note what he has to say on segregation:

"I desire briefly to refer to the operation of what is known as the 'segregation law' in Michigan, which requires the absolute separation and segregation of savings deposits and investments. The operation of this law has not retarded nor restricted in any way the commercial or business interests of the state; nor has it led to any lack of confidence on the part of either the commercial or savings depositors, as deposits have increased since the law went into effect by approximately $80,000,000."

MANY had hoped that the new A. B. A. constitution would provide a full three years' term for each banker elected to the executive council, no matter how the vacancy may have occurred.

A SHORTER term is devoid of any service to the big association or to the electing state. It isn't fair to "reward" a man with a piece of a term which so often comes only once to the incumbent.

HERE are two cases in point. J. W. Wheeler of Minnesota, and Nelson N. Lampert of Illinois, each got a one-year membership.

MR. LAMPERT accepted the "short end" when it had been declined by others and actually refused by Mr. Crabtree after he had been elected.

NOW there is a big movement on foot to elect Mr. Lampert to a full term at the Chicago meeting. It started down state and of course Chicago always is for a local favorite. Perhaps two will be elected.

IN case enough new members are received to make it look plausible, a second man will be elected tentatively. Wm. C. White and W. F. Stone of Peoria have been mentioned.

MR. WHEELER took the credentials for one part of a convention session so that the state could vote its full quota on an important issue. Others had refused. Now they feel that he did not have a fair deal and a movement is on to re-elect him to a full term.

BANKERS in both states feel that such men as Lampert and Wheeler should have at least fair treatment in such an important matter.

CHICAGO bank clearings for May were larger than those of the same month last year by $11,701,905, or 0.8 per cent. The gain in clearings for the first five months of 1913 has amounted to 5.6 per cent. The increase in May was the smallest monthly gain so far this year.

AS a barometer of commercial conditions, the clearings would indicate that the volume of general business in the Middle West is still ahead of last year.

A LOCAL Chicago paper in its financial column charges that bankers of St. Louis and Chicago are at enmity, or that at least there is great envy and jealousy.

AMONG other things it says: "It goes to the length of St. Louis, in example, voting on all occasions in favor of New York against Chicago, in the meetings of bankers' associations, even when a vote for Chicago were beneficial to the Western country."

WOULDN'T that give you a moral chill? Instances without number could be stated with names and dates where the two big, western central reserve cities stood as a unit.

THE writer probably never was at an A. B. A. convention where the election of a banker from either St. Louis or Chicago was an issue. He further states that "New York and Philadelphia act as a unit." We should worry!

PRIVATE banks are getting affairs into shape for the approach of state supervision in Washington. An act of the legislature requires that all private banks must incorporate by January 1, 1915, and that until that time, after June 12th next, they must be subject to the same supervision as incorporated banks.

THE examiner reports that many of the private banks already have incorporated since the passage of the law, and that most of them will have complied with the law long before the expiration of the allotted time.

THE Northwestern Trust of St. Paul, the newest of the Hill banks, has still another new card to play. James J. The Northwestern agrees to buy them back on demand.

THE first offering of $25,000 children's playground bonds, long unsold in the regular way, was oversubscribed the first day.

ALL certificates will be of $10 denominations and will be sold over the counter of the Northwestern Trust Company. The certificates will pay high rates of interest, the rate which the city pays, and will be protected by the bonds, which will be guaranteed by the trustees.

A NEW YORK department store followed the St. Paul plan, mentioned in this column recently, and sold $100,000 city bonds first day. Such efforts as the Hills are making will be the real remedy for the "Blue Sky" investor.

E. H. Doyle Addresses Supervisors of State Banks

Michigan's Crack Superintendent, at St. Paul tells of the tricks of the trade. How examiners improve by training and what are the duties of the department

The subject which I was kindly allowed to select as the topic of this brief paper, viz.: "The Duty of a Department to Its Examiners," is not one that permits of any oratorical efforts, but is one that must be considered in a cold, dispassionate way. This paper is based upon my two and a half years experience in the Michigan department, and after observing and studying for years the merits and defects of bank supervision from a depositor's and banker's standpoint, alike.

The prime object of this association is the exchange of experiences and discussion as to the different methods or systems, with the idea of improving supervision of banks; and if possible, as I understand it, to make it more or less uniform.

The examiners in the course of a year, or several years, collect a vast amount of invaluable information. I felt that it was a duty owed to each and every examiner to collect this information and put it in the hands of each man, and all the information that could be collected from every source concerning local credit conditions and local valuations. This had not been done in the Michigan department. As you well know, the examining force of a department is subject to many and sudden changes. A department is constantly educating new men. The oldest and best men are picked by bankers now and then, especially in larger cities, to fill important positions; and the examiners themselves use the department as a stepping stone to such positions. And who can blame them!

The average new examiner has absolutely no conception of credit conditions in a vast majority of the banks he is sent to examine. This apparent weakness I determined to correct.

In Michigan, every corporation and limited copartnership is required to file with the secretary of state, in December of each year, a statement of its financial condition, together with a list of stockholders. While some of these reports may not show the true condition, yet in the vast majority of cases they do. I immediately had prepared, by cities and villages, in book form, all this information which, together with all the general information obtained by examiners, and special reports on firms and individuals from the commercial agencies, are now sent to the examiner with his assignment. Each examiner also is furnished with a pocket edition of a commercial agency (Michigan edition), with instructions to get an up-to-date financial statement of all individuals, firms, and corporations, whose loans are of any size or consequence, who are not rated in Bradstreet, or have not furnished the bank with such a statement. By following this system we have been able to enlighten our examiners as to the general condition in the different localities. They have been able to detect accommodation loans and extended lines by reason of having a list of the principal stockholders or corporations, and by reason of being able to determine interlocking directorates or stockholders of one or more corporations. The examiners also have been able to ascertain definitely the extent to which officers and directors of state banks are identified with corporations, and whether or not they have been too solicitous for the latter's welfare in extending, directly or indirectly, excessive lines of credit.

EDWARD H. DOYLE
Bank Commissioner for Michigan

The examiner, as a general proposition, should have access to information of every nature in the possession of the department. In our department a record is kept of every loan of $2,000 and upwards in the smaller banks, and $10,000 to $20,000 and upwards in the larger banks. By so doing the examiner can be informed from the files of the department as to the total borrowing from state banks of any person, firm, or corporation, and can be fully advised as to the security, whether in the way of indorsement or collateral.

Early in my administration examiners were instructed to exhaust every possible means in the direction of obtaining information which would aid the department in determining the value of any loan or asset in any bank. More excessive and extended lines of credit have been discovered since the inauguration of this system than at any other time in the department's history. The examiners have been able to converse more intelligently with the cashiers as to local condition, and many of the latter have divulged erstwhile hidden features, making certain admissions in order to clear themselves, for the reason that they were uncertain just how far the examiner's knowledge went. In fact, in several instances it has been the cause of more or less agitation on several boards of directors, ultimately resulting in the elimination of excessive lines and bad assets.

It is not an impossibility in Michigan to acquaint the examiners sufficiently with this condition in most localities to enable them to pass upon the value of credits. While it is true that it has been a gradual process, yet if followed, it can be more or less successful in every state; and the results are well worth the efforts.

Nothing discourages a conscientious examiner more than not to have his criticisms mentioned in the examination correspondence between department and bank. The head of the department must rely implicitly on the examiner; and during my incumbency as banking commissioner every criticism in an examiner's report has been, and will be, presented to the officers and directors of the bank, either through the medium of letters of criticism or at directors' meetings. It frequently happens that the directors and officers who verify the assets of the bank with the examiner do not inform the balance of the board as to the examiner's criticism; and by detailing all criticisms in the department's letters, we serve the twofold purpose of encouraging the examiner and fully informing all directors, or at least a cosiderable number of them in the larger banks and nearly all of them in the smaller banks, as to the examiner's findings.

I believe the records of the Michigan department will show that in ninety-nine per cent of the cases examiners have been correct in their deductions as to bad and doubtful assets in banks, and in their judgment as to the honesty or dishonesty of bank officials. About a year ago an examiner reported, verbally, to the department that he believed a certain bank official was crooked, and cited an instance of what he believed to be an irregular mortgage. This official always had borne the highest reputation, and stood well with the department. The department was advised that the mortgage had been paid, but the examiner insisted that there was something irregular, and asked to be reassigned to the bank. His second visit proved that he was right in his deductions, as he caught the supposedly upright bank official in various manipulations and falsifications of his books. He is not now connected with any state bank. This is but one of the many instances in the history of our department; and we feel it our duty not only to the examiner, but to the department as well, to reply implicitly on the reports rendered.

In the past five years more has been written as to what constitutes thorough bank examinations than at any other period in the history of incorporated banking. The articles were in answer to a demand by the thinking people of the United States for enlightenment. For years the only interest evinced by the public in bank examiners and their methods was at the disastrous collapse of some bank. Examiners and systems of examination were vilified and decried by the people for a time, especially in the particular locality affected by the failure, but no efforts were made to correct existing evils. Bank failures became so frequent during a certain period that the country became aroused, and the people, as well as a majority of the bankers, demanded more competent examiners and better methods of examination.

The impotent and shameless bank supervision in the past can be charged to the indifference of the people. As public interest increased, supervision became more efficient and potent. When the depositing public takes as much interest in banking legislation as is shown by a certain type of bankers, then, and only then, will bank supervision approach its acme of perfection. Until the people, through their legislatures, insist on the absolute elimination of the contaminating influence of politics, we cannot expect to make the needed advancement.

Politics has been the blight which has retarded and prevented the development and betterment of bank audits and examinations. It has put many incompetents on the examining staff of your department, and has summarily dismissed from the service many men well equipped and qualified from every standpoint.

To illustrate the extent to which politics has in the past exerted its baneful influence in Michigan, your attention is called to the following incident, as related to me by an examiner in the Michigan department: About the time it was conceded by everyone that there would be a change in the head of the department, this examiner discovered a dangerous condition of affairs in one of the smaller banks, which was occasioned by the dominant influence of a director, who was a foreign banker. The examiner, after completing his work, made out his report and hurried to the department office in order that immediate action might be taken to eliminate the dominant influence, and also the resultant doubtful assets. After reading his report to the official in charge (who, by the way, was not the commissioner himself), he was asked this question: "Do you think this is the proper time to concern yourself about the banks? Why not concern yourself about holding your position?" It is needless to expect men to give the best there is in them when politics permeate a department to this extent.

Political belief, creed, nationality, or locality is not considered to-day in the Michigan department. Efficiency is the controlling guide; and when a man becomes lax, careless, or heedless, or shows any signs of weakness or incompetency, he is dismissed; and all the political influence, whether emanating from ward-heeler or dignified statesman, or whether it runs the entire gamut from dog-warden to Governor, cannot reinstate him. Every examiner must pass an examination before appointment as an examiner. We follow the system of employing a man as an assistant examiner from one to six months, and if he cannot pass the examination in that time his serves are dispensed with.

While it cannot be denied that better men are employed, and better systems of examination are in vogue to-day than at any other period, the national and state departments are demanding the impossible from some examiners, in view of the number of banks and amount of assets to be examined and the limited time to perform the work, without mentioning the niggardly salaries paid in some states.

The average salary paid bank examiners to-day in the United States will not exceed $2,000. And is it, therefore, to be wondered, considering the inconveniences of travel and the confining nature of the work, that departments are unable to retain the services of their best men! The examiner is, in fact, the watch-dog of the peoples' funds, and it is the peoples' duty, therefore, to pay him such a salary as will retain his services for a maximum period. The minimum salary should be $3,000. Heretofore, in Michigan, it was thought $2,000 would be ample; but I am convinced that in order to retain the valuable men the first amount should be paid. While previous banking experience is indisputably a necessary qualification of an examiner, his value and availability to a department, and to the public, is largely determined by his term of service.

From the figures submitted by forty-three states and the comptroller of the currency, in 1912 there were 319 examiners employed in the United States. In these forty-three states there were 23,050 banks to be examined; and as the law in many states requires two examinations each year, as does also the national banking act, it was necessary that these 319 men make 41,550 examinations. In other words, they must examine, collate, and tabulate approximately thirty-five billion dollars of assets and liabilities. This means that one examiner must make 130 examinations each year of banks whose total footings average more than $800,000, or more than two banks each week. In fact, this is a low estimate; as in Michigan the national bank examiner is required to make nearly two hundred examinations, or examine the assets and liabilities of approximately $300,000,000.

From my observation, the weakness in the present banking supervision is not due to lack of knowledge as to what constitutes a thorough examination, but is due to the insufficient number of examiners. As applied to the country as a whole, examiners are required to cover too much ground and to attempt to examine too many banks in a given time.

It has been said that experienced bank examiners work rapidly, and collect all the necessary data as they proceed with the examination. This is true. But it is also a fact that in a large number of cases there is too much undue haste, and some feature of the work must of necessity be sacrificed.

The fee system is largely to blame in national bank examinations, especially in isolated districts, or districts in which banks with small capital predominate. And again, when you take into consideration that there are but five or six men to make annually one thousand or more examinations in some of the states, no other conclusion can be drawn than that some part of the work is slighted.

Give the average bank examiner adequate time, sufficient salary, relief from political entanglements, and furnish all possible data and information concerning the conditions in the localities where he is sent to pursue his work, and there will be a marked reduction each year in the number of bank failures.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Indication what the First National of St. Paul plans and what the allied financial institutions have in mind for the capital city is outlined by Chairman Louis W. Hill of the First, the Northwestern Trust and the Great Northern road. He said in Portland, Ore.; "We are going to make our financial facilities just as big and important as our railroad enterprises and our colonization and agricultural development work.

"We are going to do what we can to help cities carry forward needed improvements and develop their parks, playgrounds, educational systems and other departments," he added.

"We will do this in such a way as not to interfere with the operations of local banks in any territory. It will be done through our First National Bank and Northwestern Trust Company.

Assistant Bank Examiners Appointed

Kelsey S. Chase, superintendent of banks, has announced appointment of C. I. Welch and D. B. Fuller of Minneapolis as assistant bank examiners. Mr. Welch was formerly cashier of the Minnesota National, Minneapolis, and before that with the National Bank of Commerce. He came to Minneapolis from Henderson, Minn., where he was in the banking business. Mr. Fuller is paying teller of the East Side State Bank.

Minneapolis Clearings

Bank clearings in Minneapolis for May were $92,380,984, or $12,622,789 more than May, 1912. The first five months of the year totaled $486,906,356, or $77,391,071 more than for the same period in 1912. A gain of $200,000,000 for the year is expected. As the grain movement has subsided seasonably, the May bank figures reflect activity in wholesale, retail and manufacturing lines.

To Erect New Bank Building

The Sleepy Eye Improvement Company has plans for the new State bank building, Sleepy Eye, Minn., from the Minneapolis architects. It is to be 25 by 80 feet. The first floor will be for the bank, with a banking room 16 by 22 feet; customers' private room, 10 by 10 feet; officers' room, 8 by 12 feet; directors' room, 11 by 16 feet; private deposit vault and bank vault, 8 by 10 feet. The work will be ready Nov. 1 at the latest. The bank was organized by F. H. Dyckman in 1880. In 1886 Hans Mo, president, became connected with the bank. In May, 1891, the bank was changed from a private to a state institution. On Jan. 1, 1912, O. W. Hagen and Hans Mo sold their stock to a corporation of twenty-six men headed by Mr. Mo.

Sees Good Prospects

W. G. Bierd, vice-president of the Minneapolis & St. Louis road, said: "I have never seen a better prospect at the opening of June and am planning the heaviest maintenance and betterment outlay for several years. Although the wheat acreage is smaller on account of the lack of fall preparation of the ground, there will be as big a wheat crop as last year off the area. I would say the South Dakota crop has only one thing to fear, possibly hot winds, but the cool weather has made the plant deep-rooted and firm in the ground."

Sees Disadvantage in Bumper Crop

E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, doesn't want a "bumper" crop. He said: "A bumper crop causes low prices for the grain and means excessive cost of labor. A normal crop, evenly distributed, so that every one gets his share is what we should have, and from reports received from the country prospects were never better. The railroads are about the only concerns which realize heavily on a bumper crop. They get their returns from hauling the grain."

Bank Commissioners Meet

Forty-five delegates to the twelfth annual convention of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks, in session three days at St. Paul, were guests one day of the Minneapolis Clearing House Association at luncheon at the Minneapolis Club. President R. M. Scammon of Vermont spoke briefly. The sessions were in the Hotel Saint Paul and at the capitol.

"Blue Sky" laws led in interest in the discussions and the proposal that bank commissioners and examiners enforce the statutes relating to sale of stocks and formation of corporations. Among the speakers were F. C. Williams on the Vermont law, and Charles M. Sawyer on the Kansas law. Richard Scammon of New Hampshire opened the discussion on the co-operation between state and national examiners. Among other speakers was: "Assisting Directors to Direct," J. A. Broderick, credit bureau New York state banking department.

"Successful management of a banking institution depends primarily upon its directors," he said. "To them the depositors look for the safeguarding of the funds deposited with the bank. To them the stockholders look for an efficient supervision which will insure safety of investment and fair dividends, and it is to the directors that the national and state governments look for a sound, business-like administration in accordance with the provisions of the banking law."

"How the New Banking Law Is Working in Kentucky" was the subject of an address by Thomas J. Smith, bank commissioner of Kentucky. He told of the manner in which the new law operates, finding objection in the fact that the matter of fees is based upon surplus of capital, which he termed "inequitable," and should be remedied. Fees should be based upon a certain percentage of resources, he declared. Edward H. Doyle of Michigan delivered an interesting address which appears elsewhere in this issue.

The supervisors were entertained in St. Paul in an automobile ride, with a dinner at the Minnesota club, by the associated banks of St. Paul.

Governor A. O. Eberhart discussed the state banking system and the co-operation between the banks and the Minnesota banking department, and the difficulty of getting certain banking laws through because of the opposition of private bankers.

Northwest Notes

Bolger, Messer & Willaman were again the successful bidders for $450,000 bonds of Virginia, Minn. Unsuccessful competitors are Commercial Investment Company, and N. J. Upham & Co., Duluth, and Farson, Son & Co., Chicago. The bonds are fifteen year 5 per cents.

Minnesota has paid to insurance companies in twenty-seven years $500,000 in premiums more than it has received. In effect there is $10,000,000 insurance on which $111,000 has been paid. The state is going to insure itself, 33 per cent on fireproof buildings and 66 per cent on others. The state treasurer is to credit to the state insurance account during the years 1914, 1915 and 1916 an amount equal to the premium as fixed by the commissioner of insurance, which will be the same rate as is now paid by the insurance companies. After 1916 75 per cent of such premiums shall be set aside.

S. B. Duea Investment Company of Pipestone, Minn., has filed its articles of incorporation. Its business is loans, mortgages, securities, lands, bonds, stocks. The incorporators are S. B. Duea, F. A. Duea and H. S. Stevens, all of Pipestone, and T. P. Hermanson, of Tyler. The capital stock, 500 shares, is $50,000, and highest indebtedness, $50,000.

Whether lands held by banks outside the state can be taxed is a question put up to the Minnesota attorney-general by the state tax commission. Under the law banks are taxed on the value of their stock, determined by combining the capital, surplus and undivided profits and subtracting the value of the bank's real estate. This deduction is made to prevent double taxation. The commission has discovered that many Minnesota banks own real estate located outside of the state, and not taxed in the state. Several cases are cited where banks have escaped taxation entirely in Minnesota. One in particular has a capital, surplus and undivided profits of $90,000, but has deducted $90,000 as the value of Texas and Canada lands, and thus pays nothing to Minnesota.

William H. Barrow, one of the pioneers of Greene county, Illinois, died at his home in Roodhouse on Wednesday of last week. Mr. Barrow had been connected with the Roodhouse Bank ever since its organization and at the time of his death was its vice-president.

MISSOURI BANKS SHOW UP WELL

A vigorous growth in all important items is shown in the report of the condition of the state banks and trust companies of Missouri compiled by Bank Commissioner Mitchell. The report is based upon the call of the Missouri banking department bearing the date of March 26th. The last previous call was made November 26th of last year. Since that date the loans and discounts have increased $12,543,727, the capital stock $667,245, surplus and undivided profits $73,499 and deposits $12,555,424. Since January 1, 1913, seventeen new banks and four new trust companies have been organized. There are 1,208 incorporated state banks and twenty-seven private banks. The seventeen banks and trust companies of Kansas City included in the report have resources to the extent of $40,273,228. Their capital stock paid in is $3,987,500 and the surplus fund amounts to $1,900,000. This was the first statement issued by the Missouri banking department under the new administration.

FIRST NATIONAL OF MASON CITY

First National of Mason City, capitalized at a quarter of a million, has surplus and profits of $285,000 and a line of deposits of approximately $2,700,000. C. H. McNider is the president. Other officers are as follows: F. E. Keeler, vice-president; W. G. C. Bagley, cashier; C. A. Parker and R. C. Smith, assistant cashiers.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Central and southern Illinois are suffering from one of the most severe droughts ever known in May and early June and unless there is rain soon (June 4th) the condition of crops will be serious. Oats especially seem to be suffering and hay and pasture also are needing rain badly. Corn is not doing well and more moisture will be required for it. Many farmers are replanting their corn but much rainfall will be necessary to promote its welfare.

Northern Illinois has enjoyed plenty of rain and the counties from Chicago west and south have had good rains at frequent intervals. The chief sufferers seem to be the farmers in the central counties of the state. Indiana upon the east also has enjoyed considerable moisture over large areas. The outlook for a good crop in many regions of the lower two-thirds of the state is unfavorable and while the rich black soil of our great agricultural state never has proven an entire failure, yet all candid observers must admit that there will be a very severe shortage this year; even with rains the present shortage cannot be fully overcome. Bankers are watching the fields with interest and with some anxiety. The farmers are more especially anxious and although country banks have been well loaned up with great demand for money during the past few months the farmers will need more help from the banks. General business has been good the past fortnight and banks were busy over the first of June. Building lines are especially active and much improvement is noted in city and village and upon the farm.

Death of Miss Eloise Brownback

Bankers generally unite in sympathy with J. M. Brownback, first vice-president of the Millikin National of Decatur, who has lost by death his only daughter, Miss Eloise Vandeveer Brownback. She died in the Roosevelt Hospital in New York City, whither she had gone for an operation for appendicitis. Her condition was very grave and was known only to intimate friends, so that the news of her death came as a great shock in Decatur and elsewhere. She leaves her father and one brother, A. Vandeveer Brownback. Her mother died in 1898. J. M. Brownback, the father, is well-known to Illinois bankers, as he is one of the group of men who served with the late James Millikin of Decatur for a business lifetime and who has aided in the building up of the colossal business of the Millikin National.

Group Ten Meets at Benton

Group Ten composing the counties in the most southern part of the state, met at Benton, May 15th, with 175 bankers present. President J. D. Phillips of the Illinois Bankers Association addressed the meeting and the group passed resolutions favoring the Tice bill now pending before the legislature. Lunch was served by the bankers of Benton and after lunch the ladies were entertained in the home of Mrs. Robert R. Ward, wife of the vice-president of the Benton State, while the men were taken on a tour of the new industries and mines of Benton.

Officers were elected as follows: Willard Wall, president of the First National of Murphysboro, chairman; Robert R. Ward, vice-president Benton State Bank of Benton and a member of the soil improvement committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, vice-chairman; Ira O. Karraker, cashier Bank of Jonesboro, secretary; and W. B. Maulding, cashier of the First National of Dahlgren, treasurer.

Group Six at Mattoon

Mattoon bankers were hosts to the bankers of Group Six of the Illinois Bankers Association Tuesday, June 3d. John M. Glassco, cashier of the Charleston State Bank and chairman of the group, presided at the business meeting where the following officers were elected: Grover R. Helm, assistant cashier of Bragg, Helm and Company of Tuscola, chairman; W. T. Osborne, cashier Central Illinois Trust and Savings of Mattoon, vice-chairman and John A. Cathcart, cashier First National of Sidell, secretary-treasurer; George W. Telling, cashier Commercial Trust and Savings of Danville and former chairman of the group, member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association and John M. Glassco, vice-president of the state association for Group Six.

The reception committee consisted of the bankers of Mattoon and Charleston and Coles county and the morning session was held in the Elks lodge rooms. Addresses were made by S. E. Bradt of DeKalb, William G. Eckhardt, soil expert for DeKalb county, upon the topic "Better and More Permanent Farming" and by James I. Ennis of Chicago, who discussed "The Negotiable Instrument Act."

At 1:30 o'clock special interurban cars conveyed the visiting bankers to Urban Park, midway between Mattoon and Charleston, where an elegant luncheon was served, after which many of the bankers played golf.

The delegation of Chicago bankers who made the round of the Illinois group conventions were described as "a lively bunch" and their presence added much to the enjoyment of the various group meetings. The car was a sleeper with enough berths removed so as to make a dining-room in the center of the car, where "some dinners" were served. The Chicago bankers made many friends among down-state bankers and the glad hand of hospitality was extended to them.

Chicago Business Men Down-State.

A special train with thirty members of the Chicago Association of Commerce, representing various lines of business, has been touring the state during the past ten days and the members of the party have been most royally entertained along the line of travel with automobile rides and "talkfests." Each town has endeavored to show the business men from the "big town" that their individual community is the best commercial and residential city upon the map of Illinois. As the good towns of Illinois are all so well improved and the citizenship so good, it will be a puzzle for the business men of the Chicago delegation to decide upon the merits of each town and city. The trip is a trade boosting expedition and a better feeling results when the business men of the metropolis and of the smaller cities and towns meet in a social way.

The party left Chicago over the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, proceeding south to Watseka, Hoopeston and Danville, thence west to W. Urbana, Champaign, Decatur, Springfield, Jacksonville and Quincy and thence north and east again into Chicago.

Group Five at Frankfort

Group Five of the Indiana Bankers Association met at Frankfort with bankers present from twelve counties of the group, which are Benton, Warren, Vermilion, Fountain, Clinton, Parke, Vigo, Clay, White, Tippecanoe, Montgomery and Putnam. The speakers for the group meeting included Professor G. I. Christie of Purdue University; D. F. Maish of Frankfort, president of the Indiana Federation of Agricultural Associations; J. L. McCullough of Marion, president of the Indiana Bankers Association, and Andrew Smith, vice-president of the Indiana National of Indianapolis and secretary of the Indiana Bankers Association. The president of the group is D. S. Coulter of Frankfort, and the secretary is O. S. Clark of Attica.

Pana Bankers Hosts to Group Seven

The annual meeting of the bankers of Group Seven was held Tuesday, May 27th, in the Elks rooms in Pana with about 150 bankers present. J. E. Reese, vice-president of the H. N. Schuyler State Bank of Pana and chairman of the group presided. Officers for the next year were elected as follows: Thomas F. Chamberlin, cashier First National of Brighton, chairman; Guy P. Lewis, assistant cashier Millikin National of Decatur, vice-chairman; H. B. Herrick, cashier of the Litchfield National of Litchfield, secretary-treasurer; J. E. Reese, vice-president H. N. Schuyler State Bank of Pana, member of the executive council of the I. B. A., and E. G. Foster, cashier of the Tower Hill Bank, retiring secretary, vice-president of the Illinois Bankers Association for Group Seven.

Some very interesting addresses were made at this group meeting and the bankers present were pleased to hear Leroy A. Goddard, president of the State Bank of Chicago and also president of the Pana National of Pana, discuss the topic of "Money". The class in bookkeeping in the Pana high school attended this lecture as well as the one by Thomas E. Burkholder of Chicago upon "Modern Methods of Country Bank Accounting." Pana people extended a warm welcome to Mr. Goddard, as he is regarded as one of their own citizens and is most widely respected by the citizens of that city.

B. R. Heironymous, president of the Illinois National of Springfield, replied to the address of welcome which was given by Pana's grand old man, Captain John W. Kitchell. Mr. Heironymous paid a most fitting tribute to the public services of Mr. Kitchell, who, besides many donations such as a park and other improvements, has given valuable coal lands to the city of Pana for expense money in building good roads about the city. Pana has some of the most valuable mining interests in the state and the gift of Captain Kitchell was especially significant because of its great money value.

Other addresses were by H. N. Schuyler, president of the H. N Schuyler State Bank of Pana, upon "Experiences" and by James I. Ennis of Chicago upon "The Negotiable Instrument Act." Bert Ball, secretary of Crop Improvement Committee of the American Grain Exchange of Chicago, outlined the work of the county farm bureau which ten counties of the state have now organized. He emphasized the value of a crop expert and all of the counties of Group Seven have taken the matter of a "soil doctor" under advisement.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

A dinner to the veteran members of the Wisconsin Bankers Association will open the festivities aboard boat when the state bankers depart from Milwaukee, June 21st, for a three-days lake trip, comprising the annual state meeting. The "old guard" consists of about sixty charter members of the state organization and the past presidents. Most of these have been continuous members since the organization was founded in 1892. Arrangements for the dinner are being completed by a special committee headed by J. W. P. Lombard, president of the National Exchange.

Merchants and Manufacturers Expedition

Bankers of central Wisconsin cities on the route of the Merchants and Manufacturers annual trade expedition are prominently identified with the entertainment arrangements for the Milwaukee business men and bankers participating in the trip. Thirty-seven cities are included, with stops varying from one hour to twelve. The greater portion of the itinerary lies in the Fox River Valley.

Wisconsin National "Bluebook"

Walter Kasten, cashier of the Wisconsin National, is at work on his "Bluebook" of Wisconsin banks in preparation for the annual state convention. The book, handsomely bound in blue morocco, is annually awaited by state bankers as one of the most attractive as well as practical of the convention souvenirs, and its utility long outlives the convention.

Trust Company for La Crosse

The La Crosse Trust Company, La Crosse, Wis., $50,000 capital, has organized. Directors were elected as follows: J. C. Burns, L. C. Colman, Dr. A. Gundersen, F. P. Hixon, B. C. Smith, F. G. Tiffany and G. Van Steenwyk.

Later the directors elected the following officers: President, L. C. Colman; first vice-president, F. G. Tiffany; second vice-president, F. P. Hixon; secretary, G. Van Steenwyk; assistant secretary, H. K. Holley. Mr. Tiffany will be manager of the La Crosse Trust Company, while Mr. Holley will be his assistant in the office.

At the outset the company will make a specialty of real estate loans, and also will sell mortgages and various other securities. The development of that portion of the business dealing with the handling of estates necessarily will be slow, but in a few years this is expected to attain large proportions.

The La Crosse Trust Company is authorized under the state law to receive time deposits, but it cannot receive checking deposits.

INDIANA AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE

State Conference on Agriculture and Country Life in Indiana, held under the auspices of the state bankers association in the convention hall of the Claypool Hotel in Indianapolis, was attended by a large number of representatives of agricultural, horticultural, labor, commercial and financial organizations and of Purdue and Indiana universities. The conference was a great boost for vocational education, a reorganization of educational work, at least so far as the country is concerned, as is permitted and provided for in the new Indiana vocational education and county agent laws enacted this year.

Charles L. Goodbar of Crawfordsville, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Indiana Bankers Association, pointed out the deep interest taken by the bankers in the welfare of the agricultural classes in Indiana, who represent 60 per cent of the bank deposits. He said, also, that more than 50 per cent of the bank presidents and cashiers in the Hoosier State own and operate Indiana farms through tenants.

T. A. Coleman, secretary of the Federation of Indiana Agricultural Associations, laid especial stress on the need of reorganizing farming for what it really is—the greatest business of the state.

W. G. Edens of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, secretary of the agricultural comittee of the Illinois Bankers Association, said that every community in the Middle Western states should support a commercial club or business men's association, and it, in turn, should be identified with the state federation of commercial clubs and finally be represented in the National Chamber of Commerce recently organized, which has headquarters at Washington.

AT HEAD OF INDIANAPOLIS CLEARING HOUSE

Stoughton A. Fletcher, president of the Fletcher American National and one of the youngest bank presidents in Indiana, has been elected president of the Indianapolis Clearing House, succeeding Volney T. Malott, dean of Indianapolis bankers. Mr. Malott has served as president of the Clearing House Association for a number of years and declined to continue in that capacity. Mr. Fletcher, who has been vice-president of the association, was unanimously chosen as the new executive head. John H. Holliday, president of the Union Trust, was elected vice-president, filling the vacancy created by the advancement of Mr. Fletcher, and Ross H. Wallace, secretary of the Union Trust, and George C. Calvert were re-elected treasurer and manager, respectively.

GROUP EIGHT, INDIANA

Group Eight, Indiana Bankers Association, held its annual meeting Tuesday of last week aboard the handsome remodeled steamer John S. Hopkins at Evansville. At 1:30 Chairman S. T. Fisher, cashier of the Peoples National, Princeton, called the meeting to order and the address of welcome was delivered by the Hon. Howard Roosa, editor of the Evansville Courier. After appointment of the nominating committee Secretary C. B. Enlow, cashier of the City National of Evansville, presented his report to the members. C. R. McKay, manager of the transit department of the First National of Chicago, talked on the proposed country clearing house and Percy H. Johnston, national bank examiner, Louisville, Ky., was down for a talk on bank examination and supervision. Palmer H. Taylor of Springfield, Mass., gave an address on "Commercial Paper," and the Hon. D. F. Maish, president Indiana Federation of Agricultural Associations, Frankfort, Ind., had been assigned the subject of "Back to the Farm," which he treated in an able manner.

CEDAR RAPIDS NATIONAL

Cedar Rapids National has capital stock of $300,000, surplus and profits of $97,000 and a line of deposits of close to five millions. GETTING A NEW CURRENCY SYSTEM

A story is going the rounds that the representative of the currency and banking commission of the house, when he called upon the head of a certain big New York bank in quest of information was treated to threats of a panic. "This bank," said the banker, "always has made money in panics and it can do it again." Rumor has it also that the aforesaid big banker, owing to loss of prestige at Washington and elsewhere, is having about all he can do to hold his job, much less to start panics.

If the story be true it shows one reason why the establishment of a better currency system is so difficult. On the other hand we are enabled to quote President Wilson, writing to a senator, as follows:

This is the time to pass currency legislation, and I think we are in a sense bound in loyalty to the country to pass it, so that any attempt to create artificial disturbance after the tariff shall have become law may be offset by a free system of credit which will make it possible for men, big and little, to take care of themselves in business.

This is the proper spirit in which to approach so momentous a question. It is a question of the highest loyalty and patrotism. Then we have the expressed views of Mr. Reynolds, who was called in conference by the government. Mr. Reynolds said:

I was impressed with the evident desire on the part of the administration and the banking committee of the house and senate to prepare a bill which will effect changes and still be for the general good. The desire of the administration appears to be to avoid the pyramiding of reserves. The plan, in its purpose, appeals to me though there might be a difference of opinion as to the details. However, as no one knows it all, I am willing to submit my views and work with those who may entertain dissimilar opinions. What is wanted is a good currency measure. I am inclined to think such will be worked out by the administration.

This is a high-minded view to take of the question. Mr. Reynolds wants a "good currency system for the country" and is willing to work with those who differ from him in details, but who also want a good currency system for the country. No threat of panic should be made and no such threat should do other than react upon him who makes it. It will not deter the government and the right-minded bankers of the country in their efforts for better things.

SHOULD MEET THE CHALLENGE

The challenge of purpose which Alderman Theodore K. Long has put upon the motives of the Chicago Association of Commerce must be met if that organization is to continue to claim unquestioned high standing among the citizenship of Chicago. The issue arises out of the activities of the association in the matters of smoke suppression and of terminal electrification of the railways entering Chicago. Alderman Long charges, and cites the official records to sustain the charge, that the association concerns itself chiefly about the material interests of its sustaining members rather than the public welfare. In other words it is charged that the Chicago Association of Commerce so far as the electrification of terminals is concerned is with the railroads and not with the people. In short it has been a special pleader, Mr. Long says, in many other cases for private profit and not for public good.

The whole issue was raised in the most public way and the answer must be complete or the association must modify its claims to public confidence and support.

SCIENTIFIC NEW BANKING LAW

The savings banks of New York failed to defeat the Pollock bill for the appointment of a commission to draw up an entirely new and scientific banking law for the state. The savings banks saw in it a plan to give the trust companies larger functions, perhaps, to their own disadvantage. The bill carries an appropriation for expenses (the commissioners serve without pay) and for the fees of competent counsel. The bill has been the cause of state-wide discussion and it has been made pretty evident that the only plan in mind is the betterment of the state law, adding safety and efficiency to the state institutions. Trust companies no doubt will be given, as they deserve, greatly increased powers.

J. N. DOLLEY REPLIES TO "BLUE SKY" CRITICS

During the campaign for the passage of the "Blue Sky" law, I notice that this legislation is very strongly assailed and condemned in certain states. Its enemies are becoming very active indeed. They have even gone to the extent in the state of New York and elsewhere of stating that I have given out an interview saying that the "Blue Sky" law has proven to be unworkable in Kansas and was bad legislation. I wish emphatically to deny these charges, and to say that I never have issued or made any such statement.

The "Blue Sky" law has proven to be very successful in its operation in Kansas, and has completely driven out of our state the illegitimate stock and investment salesmen, an army of more than five thousand, who had been preying upon the Kansas people for the past fifty years to the extent of having taken out of the state tens of millions of dollars during this period and I have failed to find a single case where any money ever has been returned to the investor.

I can prove to any man, by the citation of specific examples, where the law has saved the state of Kansas from three to six millions of dollars each year since it has been in operation. The charge also has been made that the law has hindered and driven from the state a large number of legitimate companies, and deprived thousands of men of labor and driven them from the state in consequence thereof. This statement is rather amusing to Kansas people, as nothing could be further from the truth, and yet it is being circulated widely in New York, California and elsewhere, where a campaign is being made for the enactment of a "Blue Sky" law. These statements are, of course, being started by the unscrupulous promoter. The law has aided and assisted all legitimate enterprises since its enactment, and enabled a large number of them successfully to organize and finance themselves where it would not have been possible for them to do so without the assistance of legislation of this kind, and there are more legitimate companies being organized under the Kansas laws today than ever before in the history of the state.

The Investment Bankers Association of America gave out some statements a short time ago criticizing the Kansas law, or rather pointing out some of the defects of the law, wherein it did not provide for the investment banker or dealer in stocks and bonds. The unscrupulous promoters also are using this statement very widely, claiming that the Investment Bankers Association condemn the law whereas they merely ask to have the law amended so as to provide for the transaction of their business. This provision was not put in the Kansas law when first enacted, for the reason that there were no investment bankers doing business in this state at that time. The law has since been amended so that it now, I believe, meets with their approval.

Some twelve or fifteen states have to my knowledge enacted "Blue Sky" laws similiar to the Kansas law recently, and I sincerely trust that more will follow. I hope that no state legislature will be misled by the untrue statements being circulated regarding this law, and that they will make a careful, thorough investigation of conditions in Kansas before refusing to enact such legislation. The very attitude and actions of the illegitimate promoter, should be one of the strongest recommendations for the enactment of the law.

I cannot speak too highly of the law and its effect in Kansas, and I sincerely hope that every state in the Union will have a similiar law upon its statute boks within the very near future. I believe that all the states should enact a uniform law as nearly as practical in accordance with the conditions in their respective localities, so that each state can co-operate as much as possible with the other in its enforcement. Legislation of this character is a new departure and it is necessary to work it out to meet every condition and situation in the investment world.

I strongly urge the enactment by congress of a federal statute that will protect, aid and assist those states having this kind of legislation in enforcing the same as against outside influences and agencies now beyond their control.

The success of a properly written law de-

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

FORECASTING the future, in 1872, the founders of this bank named it The Northwestern. ¶Starting with a capital of $200,000, its capital and surplus are now $5,000,000, and its resources are well over $34,000,000. Deposits nearly quadrupled in the last ten years. ¶It has justified its name: The Bank Has Kept Pace With Its Wonderful Territory. ¶And, having the largest volume of business in the Northwest, it is able to offer unexcelled facilities.

pends entirely upon the judgment and discretion with which it is enforced. It should be administered by competent business men and those charged with its enforcement held responsible for its success or failure in the different states, and should the law fail to bring the desired results in any instances it would, in my judgment, be due to improper enforcement and administration. All administrators of the law should use every effort to advance and promote all legitimate enterprises and to weed out the faker and confidence man, posing under the guise of a dealer in investments. If the law is properly administered there is no question as to its success.

The American people have accepted this legislation as constructive and needed. The legitimate bond and investment house or dealer, and all other legitimate enterprises, should support this law and use all efforts at their command to secure its enactment. It is to their interest to do so.

J. N. DOLLEY,
Ex-Bank Commissioner of Kansas and Author of the Kansas "Blue Sky" Law.

A. F. DAWSON ADDRESSES ILLINOIS BANKERS

If the present congress does not give the country a new currency law that will measure up to the modern requirements of business it will disappoint the reasonable hopes of the American people, was the declaration made in a speech to the bankers of Group Two by ex-Congressman A. F. Dawson of Iowa, now president of the First National of Davenport. He declared that one of the essentials to continued prosperity and development—more important than legislation on the tariff—is to provide a monetary system that will meet the needs of the times and automatically adjust itself to the seasons' variations of trade and commerce. Continuing, he said:

"There is much to be said in commendation of the existing system. The banks of the country are sound and capably managed, and the almost universal confidence in them is well merited. The National banking system, created in the midst of the Civil War, has been a powerful factor for good, but since that system was established there has been such a tremendous advance in business that we have outgrown it, and it is inadequate to meet the needs of to-day.

"The existing reserve laws, for both national and state banks, operate to intensify conditions rather than to relieve them, in times of financial stringency. The cash reserves are scattered among 25,000 widely separated banks, with no provision whereby they can be mobilized. If signs of trouble appear each bank engages in a scramble with every other bank to build up its individual reserve. If the reserves of the country were concentrated, so as to be available when and where most needed, they would afford protection to all; scattered as they are, they prove almost useless.

"The banking power of the United States is estimated at over 21 billions of dollars; it is equal to the combined banking power of Great Britain, France and Germany. What a powerful factor it would be in any financial situation which might arise if all the banks of the country, both national and state, were organized in an association which would secure unity and co-operation, especially in times of stress! United for the common good, they could cope with any emergency; divided into scattered units as they now are, they are helpless and ineffective.

"A law embracing these essential features, together with certain minor additions, would give the country immunity from the disastrous money panics of the past, and assure the increasing business of the nation with safety and security.

"The country is fortified against a recurrence of the disturbance of 1907 by the Vreeland emergency currency act now on the statute books, which provides for the issue of emergency currency. But this act expires by limitation one year hence, and it is the plain duty of congress to replace that temporary measure by a permanent one which will put the United States on an equality with the other great commercial nations of the earth."

M. K. Rankin at Harris Trust

S. B. Rankin and Andrew Smith, "major-league" state secretaries, both have sons in Chicago's big banks. George Smith as previously noted is with the Fort Dearborn National and making good. M. K. Rankin, a big handsome, six-footer has been with the Harris Trust since early last year, and recently has been advanced to city salesman in the bond department. He is a son of S. B. Rankin of South Charleston, Ohio, president of the Bank of South Charleston, and for twenty years secretary of the Ohio Bankers Association. Rankin junior is a graduate of Princeton University and had some banking experience in the family institution at Charleston. He is regarded as a "comer" at the Harris Trust.

DAIRY INTERESTS TO CONVENE

At a conference recently at the Hotel La-Salle between representatives of the Illinois Bankers Association and men connected with the dairying interests of the state, it was decided to call a meeting of bankers, representatives of the faculty of the University of Illinois and the Milk Producers Association of Illinois for the purpose of devising ways and means of stimulating the production of live stock, cattle and milk in the state.

It is contended that Illinois is not producing milk sufficient for the use of its own people. Our butter production is far short of what we daily demand, and our beef cattle and stock are declining. An attempt will be made to discover the reasons for this situation at the conference. The meeting at the La Salle was called by B. F. Harris of Champaign, chairman of the committee on agriculture of the Illinois Bankers Association.

LOUISIANA GOES IN FOR AGRICULTURE

The Louisiana Bankers Association has appointed the following Committee on Agricultural Development and Education: L. E. Thomas, president Continental Bank & Trust Company, Shreveport; J. W. Bolton, vice-president Rapids Bank, Alexandria; L. M. Lichtenstein, vice-president Commercial National, New Orleans. This committee with the president of the association, H. D. Apgar, will attend the meeting of the Conference in Kansas City. The Kansas City meeting will be held August 26th-7th. President Joseph Chapman will preside.

SEDALIA BANK ELECTS

At the annual stockholders' meeting of the American Exchange Bank, Sedalia, Mo., the present board of directors was re-elected as follows: W. S. Sneed, E. M. Stafford, E. W. Shultz, E. L. Keuper, Green McFarland, E. R. Barrett and W. W. Barrett. The American Exchange is just two years old and during the past year has increased its deposits about 60 per cent.

FARM FINANCE LEGISLATION

Address delivered by George Woodruff of Joliet, Ill., before the Indiana Conference on Agricultural and Country Life at Indianapolis, June 4

The American people have for some time been studying European systems of farm finance and it now has come to be generally understood that in a majority of the agricultural countries of the world distinctive systems of agricultural credit have been developed. These systems comprise short time personal credit banks extending small personal loans to farmers for comparatively short periods of time and long time mortgage banks extending mortgage credit to farmers on an amortization basis for long periods of time. Some of the personal credit banks are organized on a joint stock basis and some on a co-operative basis and the same is true of the mortgage banks, and in certain instances government aid of various kinds has been extended to these different types of institutions. In America, the people have now come to realize the necessity for increased farm finance facilities and being now fairly well-informed in regard to the methods in use in Europe, are beginning to formulate plans of action.

Divisions of the Subject.

The discussion of proposed American legislation on this subject naturally divides itself into two parts: first, that concerning personal credit, and second, that affecting mortgage credit; and each of these two subdivisions doubtless demands two different kinds of legislation: one designed rapidly to improve the present situation and to bring some immediate degree of relief to the farmer, and the other planned to develop gradually and build up permanent systems of farm finance, the benefits of which necessarily will be reaped by the farmer some time in the future.

Agricultural Personal Credit

Agricultural personal credit should be developed immediately by an enlargement of the facilities of our present banks, and permanently by the establishment of a system of little, co-operative, neighborhood, financial institutions similar to the co-operative banks of Germany and Italy. We have already an organization of ordinary joint stock credit banks such as never has been seen before in any country in the world. These banks are practically all independent, locally owned, community institutions, and if they were given sufficient flexibility they would be able immediately to do much to care for the temporary needs of the American farmer. This flexibility can be brought about only by the passage of a proper federal banking and currency law creating some central banking organization which will tend to bind all of the independent banks together, as is done in Europe, where each system of banks, whether joint stock or co-operative, is held together by its central bank.

This law should provide for the establishment of a central bank or banks to which the individual institutions can in time of need apply for re-discount privileges, and also should authorize bank acceptances. Under such a law the small country bank in the little agricultural community would be able to command enlarged credit facilities for its local agricultural interests through its ability to rediscount farmers' notes with the central bank, and would be able to follow the example of the European banks, both joint stock and co-operative, and by "accepting" the farmers' bill of exchange and obtaining the acceptance of another bank, would be able to turn these bills into prime mercantile paper good in the international discount markets of the world. Thus by the passage of a proper federal banking and currency law, a great enlargement of short time agricultural credit could be brought about and the farmer would feel the benefit almost immediately.

Permanent systems of farm finance doubtless should be co-operative and in states where the need exists a successful system of co-operative personal credit banks could perhaps be brought about by the passage in each such state of a co-operative personal credit bank law similar to the Massachusetts Credit Union Law, which provides for the establishment of little co-operative banks resembling the co-operative banks of Europe.

However, the states should go further than Massachusetts has and also should provide for the establishment of state central banks to be co-operatively owned by the individual banks; the central banks to bind the individual banks together, to act as re-discount and deposit agencies, and to promote the organization, extension and proper conduct of the individual banks. Without the developing power of a central co-operative bank, the creation and growth of the little individual institutions probably would be exceedingly slow and even with the aid of such a central organization the inauguration and building up of an entirely new banking system based necessarily on the petty financial transactions of each community would be very gradual but as the years go by the little sums of money gathered together in the various small agricultural centers gradually would mount into larger and larger totals and eventually the farmer would find himself the owner, manager and beneficiary of a great system of farm banks controlling huge sums of money.

Agricultural Mortgage Credit

Agricultural mortgage credit should be developed immediately by the organization of joint stock mortgage banks, and permanently by the establishment of a system of co-operative mortgage banks modeled in some respects after the American Loan and Homestead Associations, and in others after the Landschaften of Germany. Each state should perhaps pass laws copied as nearly as possible after their present state banking laws authorizing the establishment of a new class of banks to be incorporated and organized on exactly the same general restrictions, the only difference being that these institutions should be known as state mortgage banks and should have no powers beyond those of loaning money on long term amortization mortgages and issuing and selling bonds secured by the mortgages but these proposed mortgage banks should of course be subject to all of the special restrictions which have been found by universal practice to be necessary to the safe conduct of this type of bank. Upon the passage of such laws, many mortgage banks doubtless would be started promptly because the element of personal gain would prompt many men to organize companies quickly and educate the public at large in regard to all of the details of this method of handling the mortgage business and the farmer in a very short period of time probably would be able to realize a real advantage.

After a while, it might be found advantageous to pass a federal law establishing a large national mortgage bank which would act as a central bank for all of the individual state institutions. It would perhaps be best to have this central bank under the authority of the national government, although the individual banks should be organized under the state laws because of the differing mortgage laws and practices in each state. The functions of this national mortgage bank might be only to accept mortgages under certain restrictions from the individual state banks and issue therefor its bonds secured by such mortgages. The national bank would therefore merely exchange its bonds with the individual bank for its mortgages, but as the bonds of the national bank would be thoroughly known and understood throughout the world and would be listed upon the principal stock exchanges, the individual bank always would be able to sell at some price the bonds which it received from the national bank, and consequently, within certain limits to be provided to guard against over-extension of mortgage credit, the American farmer practically always would be able to obtain money promptly upon his farm mortgage even though the available mortgage funds in his own community might be temporarily exhausted.

As soon as the operations of the above suggested joint stock mortgage banks had educated the general public to the new methods of conducting the mortgage business, it might be advisable for each state to pass a co-operative mortgage bank law which would authorize the organization of a system of co-operative mortgage banks conducting business on the same general lines as those laid down for and made popular by the joint stock mortgage banks. By that time the farmers would have become fairly familiar with co-operative finance through their experience with the little co-operative personal credit banks and would have become educated as to proper mortgage bank methods through the operation and publicity of the joint stock mortgage banks, and they then would be in a position gradually to assume the ownership and control of their own co-operative organizations for handling farm mortgages, while the operations of the joint stock mortgage banks would be gradually confined to the cities where the experience of the world shows that they would attain the best results.

These state laws providing for co-operative mortgage banks also should provide for co-operatively owned central institutions which would bind the various individual banks together and would act as strong agencies in creating and developing co-operative land credit institutions throughout each state. Thus would the American farmer gradually build up on a permanent basis his own system of long time mortgage credit.

Government Aid.

In the development of prosperous, desirable citizens a little self-help is worth more than a great amount of government aid, and while foreign nations have in many instances granted direct government aid to farm finance, nevertheless the results have not always been of the

Cincinnati CENTRAL STATES LETTER Cleveland

First bids from banks seeking to secure the deposit of Cleveland city funds since the passage of the Friebolin law have brought forth the highest offers of interest in the city's history. Twenty-six banks are in competition and the average interest offered for active accounts exceeds 3 per cent, while the average interest offered on inactive accounts is close to 4 per cent. The higher rate means an added $100,000 to the general fund through the city's interest fund. Cleveland has an average of $13,000,000 on deposit in banks during the year, and last year the interest amounted to about $348,000. Prior to the passage of the Friebolin law no bank was allowed to accept deposits in excess of $1,000,000 nor to bid for deposits in excess of its paid in capital or surplus. Three years ago none of the big banks bid over 3 per cent for inactive accounts.

National Discount Expands Capital

The National Discount Company, dealers in manufacturers' discounts and commercial paper, has expanded its outstanding capital to $225,000, in order to admit strong local banking interests. The company has an authorized capital of $300,000. At a special meeting S. Livingston Mather and George Garretson Wade were elected members of the board. A finance committee also was elected composed of E. R. Fancher, C. A. Paine, E. B. Greene, F. F. Kennedy, and L. R. Pulliam. Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Pulliam are president and vice-president of the company. The National Discount Company has been in business about two years. Its total resources are in the neighborhood of $800,000.

Cleveland Notes

The sinking fund commission recently voted to borrow $200,000 from Cleveland banks and take up a like amount of electric light plant bonds which the commission was unable to sell two months ago. Important contracts can now be entered into and work put in progress so the plant can be opened November 1st.

George T. Bishop, president of the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis, has been elected a director of the Munsey Trust Company of Washington, D. C. A short time ago Mr. Bishop was elected a director of one of the oldest national banks of Baltimore. The Munsey Trust was formed by Frank Munsey, the publisher.

The Central National, on Wednesday of last week, celebrated the twenty-third year of its existence. The corridors were lined with flowers and through the day there was a procession of patrons and friends of the institution who came to congratulate. Col. J. J. Sullivan, president of the bank, is its founder. Since the Central National began operation, nine other national banks began business in Cleveland, but practically all of them have been merged with other institutions.

Auditor Will Call for Reports

Finding that his predecessors have not followed the law which requires the examination of trust and title guaranty companies, State Auditor Donahey proposes to take up this branch of the work next month. The provision has been in the statutes many years, but more latterly it seems to have been honored more in the breach than in the observance. The statutes provide that all such companies shall make detailed reports to the state auditor within ten days after the annual meetings are held and also shall file detailed reports of the business they are handling annually. It also provides that these reports in full shall be printed in the annual report of the auditor. From the files of the office, there apparently have been no examinations made since 1904 and no reports filed since that time. Auditor Donahey has submitted the subject to Attorney-General Hogan for a construction as to his duties. He expects to ask the companies to file copies of the reports for the years that are not covered by the records in his office.

Close Affairs of Bank

On July 1st the liquidating department of the state superintendent of banks will wind up the affairs of the Guaranty Savings Bank and Trust Company of Mt. Vernon by paying the final dividend of 20 per cent and interest to depositors. There will be several thousand dollars in securities to be returned to the stockholders. The institution was forced into liquidation July 29, 1911.

The Mechanics Savings Bank Company of Toledo paid its last 10 per cent dividend and interest last week. It paid depositors in full. More than $4,000 in cash besides many securities will revert to the stockholders.

Issue More Stock

At a special meeting of the directors of the City Trust and Savings Company, Youngstown, held last week, it was determined to issue $50,000 of the authorized $100,000 increase in capital stock. It was first the determination of the bank officials that but $25,000 of the increase should be offered, but owing to the fact that this is said to have been subscribed for four times over, the further issue was agreed upon. The stock will be sold at 60 above par. When taken the institution will have a capital of $150,000.

Bankers Meet at Erie, Pa.

Bankers from nine counties in the northwestern section of Pennsylvania attended the eighteenth annual conference and banquet of Group Seven of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association, which convened in Erie. After the business meeting a banquet was served at the Kahkwa Club. Harry L. Moore of Erie was toastmaster and responses were made by Henry A. Williams, national bank examiner, Pittsburgh and Cleveland districts; A. B. Marshall, vice-president First National, Pittsburgh, and Milton W. Shreve.

Group Four, Pennsylvania

Group Four, Pennsylvania, held its annual meeting at Ederbloom Cottage near Williamsport on Friday of last week and elected these officers: President, John G. Reading, Williamsport; secretary, William H. Painter, Williamsport; executive board, James B. Graham, Williamsport; W. D. Husted of Mansfield and Horace P. Stubbs of Mifflinburg. By a resolution L. T. McFadden of Canton was endorsed for vice-president of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association. About one hundred bankers were present.

Oppose "Blue Sky" Law

The Morgantown (W. Va.) Bankers Association and the Morgantown Board of Trade at a joint meeting recently adopted resolutions characterizing as vicious and harmful to all legitimate business enterprises the recently enacted West Virginia "Blue Sky" law, which was designed to protect investors from fake stock schemes. The local chamber of commerce has taken the initiative in the matter and intends to lead a state campaign against the new laws. Auditor John S. Darst, who is charged with the enforcement of the new legislation, in a letter to James H. Stewart, president of the Morgantown board of trade, holds that the statute in no manner interferes with the transfer of stock in a corporation by individuals but had been interpreted to apply to "promotions" only. He declares that professional promoters have left the state since the new law became effective and says that he believes it to be one of the best pieces of legislation for the masses ever passed.

Group Five to Meet at Huntington

Bankers of Group Five, West Virginia, will meet in Huntington to-day (Saturday) for their annual convention. Among the visitors who are expected are Thomas J. Davis, vice-president of the First National of Cincinnati, and Charles T. Crane, president of the Farmers & Merchants Bank of Baltimore.

Among the Pittsburgh bankers who attended the meeting of Group Six, West Virginia, held recently at "Paradise," the summer home of A. B. Fleming, near Fairmont, were D. C. Wills, Diamond National, who was the chief speaker of the occasion; C. D. Richardson, Commonwealth Trust; J. P. McKelvey, Exchange National; Alexander Dunbar, Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A.; and G. A. Stevenson, First-Second National.

Group Four, Kentucky, at Elizabeth

The fourth annual meeting of Group Four of the Kentucky Bankers Association was held in Elizabethtown on Friday of last week. More than a hundred bankers were present. The meeting was featured by an address by John E. Buckingham of Paintville, president of the association, on "Relation of Agriculture to the Banker." Other speakers were the Hon. J. D. Wilson of Greensburg, president of Group Four; Major John H. Leathers of Louisville on "Needed Currency Reform"; R. N. Cook, Bardstown, "Ethics in Banking"; the Hon. D. H. Smith, Hodgenville, "Signs of the Times"; and S. B. Lynd, Louisville, "Central Bank Idea."

President of New Bank Chosen

With $159,000 of the proposed $250,000 capital stock subscribed, organizers of the bank which it is planned shall succeed the Commercial Bank and Trust Company, Louisville, have announced that O. L. Ballinger, now at the head of the Lancaster, O., National Bank as active vice-president, will be president. He was formerly cashier of the Harrison Deposit Bank at Cynthiana and was born and reared in Kentucky. Mr. LeBus, who is promoting the new bank, says that all of the stock could be placed by this time but that the promoters want 75 to 99 per cent of it in Louisville. A committee composed of Messrs. LeBus, Robinson, Turner and Ballinger will select a cashier and other officials.

Incorporation papers for the State Savings and Trust Company of Indianapolis, authorizing capital stock of $1,000,000, have been filed. The board of directors met this week for organization purposes. It is understood that the plans are to make the institution of more than local importance by seeking patronage in other parts of the state as well as in Indianapolis. The company expects to begin business in August of this year or as soon thereafter as practicable. The directors are C. A. Schrader, Pickens, C. J. Murphy, F. J. Geiger, Joseph Jones, W. L. Aged Frankfort Banker Dies

James W. Coulter, president of the First National, Frankfort, Ind., and one of the most prominent men of the county, died recently at the age of seventy-five.

AMES TRIP ENJOYED BY IOWA BANKERS

At 1:30 p. m. May 28th, about 400 delegates and at least 100 ladies left Des Moines on the interurban in two special trolley trains of five cars each for Ames. Dean Curtis of the Iowa State Agriculture College was aboard and handed out illustrated leaflets descriptive of Ames and the work of the college. When the party reached the college grounds President Raymond A. Pearson and other members of the faculty were on hand to welcome the guests. The party divided up into groups and under the guidance of the faculty or some advanced students the members of the association visited the various buildings and points of interest on the 1,200 acre state farm. Gen. Lincoln commanded the cadets, a full regiment of sturdy, virile looking young fellows in khaki uniform, who marched onto the parade ground at 4 o'clock and entertained the visitors with a fine military program, including the honors to the flag.

At 4:30, in the assembly hall of the administration building, under the auspices of one of the Greek letter societies of the college, George Woodruff, president of the First National of Joliet, Ill., was introduced by President Pearson and addressed the members and the students on the subject of financial problems confronting the American people, particularly with reference to the adoption of the European system of farm financing. Mr. Woodruff substituted for President W. C. Brown of the New York Central Lines, who was unable to be present.

A congenial party, including W. A. Heath, G. F. Emery and L. L. Hobbs of the Live Stock Exchange National of Chicago; George Woodruff, Joliet; C. B. Mills, Minneapolis; W. G. Edens, Central Trust, Chicago, and a number of Iowa bankers, spent the evening in the office of Dean Curtis, where President Pearson and Prof. Kennedy furnished information as to their plans for enlisting support of the Iowa bankers in behalf of the college and the subjects of intensified farming and agricultural education and road development. President Pearson is a native of Indiana, but formerly resided in Iowa. He had four years experience in the State of New York, having been appointed to an important position by Governor Hughes. He has only been at Ames for the past seven months. Everybody believes that he will make good and he impressed the bankers as a real live agricultural educator. His address to the bankers at Des Moines contained splendid suggestions for effective co-operation.

Pittsburgh Banks

The showing made by the state banks and trust companies of Greater Pittsburgh, in response to the first call of the year, is sufficient to dispel any feeling that might exist that the business and financial situation is not as good as at the beginning of the year. Twenty-eight of the 32 trust companies and the 27 state banks report combined deposits of $221,853,069, against $200,213,803, reported at the time of the last previous call, November 2, 1912, and $208,474,938 the record of May 3, 1912. The surplus and profits of these institutions combined, as of May 1st, make a total of $155,135,834, as compared with $68,437,814, reported November 2, 1912, and with $67,798,314, the total of May 3, 1912. Only a month ago the 28 national banks of Greater Pittsburgh, in response to the call of Comptroller Lawrence O. Murray, made a record showing. The total deposits of all the banks of Greater Pittsburgh exceed $454,000,000.

McKeesport Bank Elects

The directors of the National Bank of McKeesport, Pa., have elected Wesley C. Soles as president to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Thomas M. Evans. Mr. Soles has been an active director since the bank was organized in 1887 and in recent years was one of the vice-presidents. The board created a new position of chairman, naming John K. Evans, brother of the late president. James E. Patterson was elected first vice-president; D. H. Rhodes, cashier, second vice-president, and J. W. Albig, assistant cashier, was elected to the board of directors. Mr. Rhodes and Mr. Albig will continue in their old positions.

NEW BANK FOR STANTON, KANSAS

The last Kansas county without banking facilities is to have a bank of its own soon. Charles M. Sawyer, state bank commissioner, has authorized the granting of the charter of the Johnson City State Bank. It will have $10,000 paid up capital when opened for business. The incorporators are R. J. Cockrun, Charles Heimin, Charles Norlin, H. P. Jones, James Herrick, John V. Cockrun. Stanton is the last of the five railroadless counties to get a bank. There formerly was a private bank there but it was closed in 1894 and there has been no bank in the county since.

GROUP SEVEN, INDIANA

Group Seven, Indiana Bankers Association, held its annual meeting in the directors' room of the Second National in New Albany, May 22d. A resolution was adopted against a feature of the income tax law which, it was stated, means double taxation on the banks. Another resolution, adopted unanimously, was an endorsement of William Borgerding of New Albany for the position of national bank examiner. W. F. Huthsteiner of Tell City was elected president and Joseph Andrews of Seymour secretary. An executive committee consisting of S. Otto Rady of New Albany, W. A. Brown of Bedford, C. D. Billings of Seymour, Murray Wilson of Borden, and R. J. Beckman of Ferdinand, was chosen and Hugo Rothert of Huntingburg was elected group member of the nominating committee of the state association.

"Development of Agricultural Resources" was the topic of the meeting. This is in line with a state-wide movement of the Indiana bankers. Prof. G. I. Christie, who is at the head of the agricultural extension department of Purdue University at Lafayette, Ind., was the principal speaker. Col. J. L. McCulloch, of Marion, president of the state association, delivered a brief address and Andrew Smith of Indianapolis, secretary of the association, also spoke. W. W. Cave of French Lick, the retiring group president, presided at the meeting, and W. F. Huthsteiner of Tell City, the retiring secretary, served as secretary. On their arrival in New Albany, the visiting bankers were entertained by the bankers of New Albany at luncheon at The Tavern, and the meeting convened at 3:20 o'clock. The attendance was the largest of any meeting of the group in the history of the association, 103 bankers having registered. The group embraces thirteen southern Indiana counties.

Clark, president; Thos. D. Murphy, vice-president; F. E. Crandall, cashier, and W. M. Apple and O. R. Byers, assistant cashiers.

John Burke, U. S. treasurer from North Dakota, has named the American National, St. Paul, a government depository. He also has told the Twin City banks and trust companies that Minnesota drainage bonds are regarded as good security by the government and that postal savings deposits will be loaned on them.

T. J. Van Horn, president of the First National at Mount Pleasant, died a week ago at Mount Pleasant at the age of 75. He entered the bank as bookkeeper in 1865 and rose gradually to the position of president. He was a native of Pennsylvania and is survived by a wife and two children.

Des Moines, June 5th.—Iowa has reached the worry stage on the corn crop. Continued cool and damp weather for the most part this spring has seriously handicapped the planting of Iowa's greatest crop. Small grain and hay are reported from all directions to be first class but corn has been held back with rather uncertain weather conditions until there is fear in some quarters that corn will not escape the frost next fall. It is certain also that the corn acreage is going to be reduced because many farmers have despaired of getting through with their corn and consequently have planted land set aside for that purpose in other crops. However, there seems to be little reason for pessimistic feelings relative to the Iowa corn crop. The sun came out May 28th and 29th scorching hot, while a warm wind aided in taking moisture out of the ground, so that the farmers were able to get busy on the corn. By the end of this week corn planting will be complete in Iowa. Many reports state that corn planting was completed last week in some parts of Iowa. Charles Shade, retiring president of the I. B. A., reported while in Des Moines at the convention that fully 50 per cent of the corn in northwestern Iowa was in the ground. His report was more optimistic on the subject, however, than those of most of the other bankers. Implement men take a hopeful view of conditions. They declare that reports from dealers in farm machinery are that the warmer weather of late has been of tremendous importance to the farmers and has enabled them to catch up with the procession.

Compliment for Secretary Hall

There is general satisfaction over the manner in which the Iowa Bankers Association took a decided stand for improved agricultural development at the convention here last week. Many Iowa papers have commented most favorably upon the attitude of the bankers. The Des Moines Capital in an editorial congratulating the bankers remarks that it is fortunate a man so enthusiastically for crop betterment as Percy W. Hall is to remain as secretary in actual charge of the work.

The bankers will name an agricultural committee of eleven for the coming year. President Heinsheimer is expected to name one from each group. This committee will get more actively in touch with farm conditions than ever before has been done. The bankers also have come out for the project of having a crop expert in each county. When this movement was first started by the Greater Des Moines Committee some months ago, the bankers hung back and finally decided not to line up for the idea. However, the view was reversed at the recent convention and now the I. B. A. may be counted upon as strongly in favor of adding in all possible ways to the crop wealth of the state by the county expert plan.

Miller Holds Golf Tournament

Homer A. Miller, president of the Iowa National of Des Moines, pulled off a most enjoyable golf party immediately following the state convention. Mr. Miller has held a private golf tournament all his own every year but this time the attendance was larger than usual because of the presence "in our midst" of bankers from out of the city who were here to attend the state convention. Those who participated in Mr. Miller's golf party were Vice-President Joseph T. Talbert of the National City of New York; President E. F. Swinney, First National of Kansas City; President Luther Drake, Merchants National, Omaha; S. H. Burnham of the Lincoln National; Charles L. Allen and Silas Strawn, Chicago attorneys, and Alexander Revell, Chicago. Those from Des Moines who played were Charles H. Martin, E. C. Finkbine, J. C. Cummins D. W. Corley, K. E. Jewett, J. W. Howell. Just who won this tournament never has been permitted to ooze out.

Boom Casady for Bank Examiner

J. N. Casady, Jr., cashier of the J. N. Casady Jr. Co. of Council Bluffs, was an interested attendant at the state convention. Mr. Casady is being boomed for national bank examiner and it is thought he will win out. He proved an excellent mixer at the convention besides having the responsibility of chaperoning President Price of the Commercial National of Council Bluffs.

Iowa Notes

John Carmody, the Perry candidate for treasurer of the I. B. A., is a good loser. Carmody was defeated for the job by Harry Moore of Wellman after the only live contest of the convention. But he did not get peeved about it and the first night after the convention had adjourned he presided most auspiciously at a banquet at the opening of the magnificent new Hotel Pattee of Perry. Mr. Carmody is vice-president of the Perry Commercial Club. Among the guests at the banquet was Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National.

Secretary of State Allen is of the opinion that his department is going to need a bunch of additional clerks when the "Blue Sky" law takes effect. Mr. Allen is anticipating a busy time. He has written to ex-Commissioner Dolley of Kansas for information as to how many clerks are employed to handle the business in that state. He figures, however, that more persons will be needed in Iowa especially in order to get the new law working.

The First National of Waterloo figures quite extensively in a mock trial held by the high school kids in that city. One Ray Davis, was accused of arson in that he had tried to destroy the bank by fire. However, the jury disagreed.

Speaking of the First National, that institution has ordered two oil paintings to be suspended in the institution. One will be of King Corn and the other of Queen Hen. The pictures are emblematic of the statement that "the Iowa corn crop is greater than the wheat crop of Canada or Argentine republic. Madame Hen is the next best booster on the job."

Deloit is to have a new bank. The town has been without a financial institution for several years. J. H. Jenks of Avoca is president; F. A. True of Deloit is vice-president; N. Guy Martin of Deloit, cashier.

J. A. S. Pollard, the banker orator from Fort Madison, lived entirely up to his reputation at the recent convention. Mr. Pollard in his address paid a glowing tribute to corn and fairly brought the bankers to their feet as he reached climax after climax. In his address, Mr. Pollard observed that threatened war with Japan is largely "the work of ink slingers." Mr. Pollard is a modest sort of chap but it is not going to be possible for him to remain in obscurity.

In his report for the year, Detective Gust Patek, Iowa representative of the Burns Detective Agency, pays a high tribute to Percy W. Hall, secretary of the I. B. A., as thief catcher. Mr. Patek acknowledges that Mr. Hall has been of mammoth assistance to him during the year in running down forgers. The showing of the protection department this year was one of the best ever made.

The women who attended the convention had a splendid time. Grant McPherrin of the Central State was in charge of the feminine entertainment. There were probably a hundred of the fair sex here and the party they held at the Golf and Country Club while the men were at the smoker at the Auditorium was a notable social event.

A special train of seven cars was required to take the bankers to Ames to wind up the convention by getting an insight into Iowa's splendid farm college. Fully 500 financiers were passengers on the train which went over the electric lines of the Fort Dodge, Des Moines & Southern. Once at Ames, the bankers saw the sights, heard Banker Woodruff of Joliet and enjoyed a magnificent luncheon served beneath the trees on the beautiful campus. President Brown of the New York Central had expected to be present but sent his regrets.

The new savings bank at Massena is being put up rapidly. Massena is enjoying a big boom.

John Leavitt, eldest son of Rogers Leavitt, well known Cedar Falls banker and grandson of John H. Leavitt of Waterloo, goes to Naperville, Wash., as cashier of a bank upon graduation from Grinnell College this year.

Claude Spicher has been made cashier of the First National at Swea City. He succeeds A. T. Wherry, who has resigned.

H. H. Lexvoid has become cashier of a bank at Ellsworth. He was formerly cashier of the Bank of Radcliffe at Radcliffe.

The Commercial Bank at Britt has been reorganized and is now the Commercial State. The capital has been increased from $35,000 to $60,000. C. W. Erwin is president; E. P. Healy and T. W. Erwin, vice-presidents and D. J. Miller, cashier.

Harry F. De Seelhorst has been made cashier of the Peoples Savings at Grundy Center.

Hospers is to have a new state bank with a capital stock of $25,000. Peter Jungers, G. Draayom, J. B. Landhuis and N. Jungers are behind the new institution.

Marshalltown (Iowa) State, with capital stock of $100,000, has a surplus fund of $30,000 and undivided profits of more than $58,924. Deposits on April 17th were $1,371,707. Officers are as follows: A. F. Balch, president; Geo. A. Turner, vice-president; P. S. Balch, cashier; C. C. Trine, assistant cashier.

South Dakota Notes

The Capa bank, which was closed some time ago, has reopened following a conference with Bank Examiner J. L. Wingfield on one side and J. Thorne and A. H. Bloom, stockholders, on the other.

The Dakota State is the name of a new bank on the new Fairmount & Veblen Railroad. John Gumo of Thunder Hawk, Henry Helvig, Andrew Marvick and J. W. Barington of Sisseton are incorporators. Helvig is president, Marvick vice-president and Gumo cashier. The capital stock is $10,000.

best and the American people unquestionably would decide against any proposition providing for a subsidy to the farmer. However, the national government and the state governments could be of tremendous aid to this great movement by encouraging and assisting in the passage of proper laws and the building up of strong and useful institutions. The national government could perhaps go somewhat further and empower the present national banks to invest a stated proportion of their savings deposits in mortgages, and the post-office department to invest a specified part of the postal savings in the securities issued by the proposed new mortgage banks. The state governments also could be of direct assistance by legalizing the securities issued by the proposed mortgage banks as approved investments for trustees and acceptable as collateral for public deposits, and by starting a movement for a uniform foreclosure law and for a uniform and improved system of abstracts of title.

The many suggestions that doubtless will be made in connection with proposed legislation looking toward improved farm finance in America should now have the careful interest and attention of the farmers, bankers and public men of our country, for the widespread discussion of European agricultural credits which has been going on throughout the nation unquestionably should be so guided as to culminate in definite action looking toward the improved prosperity of that man whose business is fundamental to the prosperity of everybody—the American farmer.

Manufacturing in the South spreads with every season, and the developments of Southern industries in cotton and tobacco manufacturing, cottonseed and its various products, in kaolin, talc and coal, in quarries, in machinery, shipbuilding, iron, steel and coke, sulphur, salt, and in timber, lumber and various workings of wood, all go to increase in numbers the industrial classes of the South. These give to that section the profits accruing to the labor which turns natural resources and raw materials into finished products, and add largely to the accumulating wealth of that section.

The fertility of the soil assures of long continued production and large crops, while the mildness of the climate of the region south of the Potomac frees the people, not only of much of the rigors of the more northern states, but of heavy costs for fuel during the winter months.

Working people can live at less expense in the South than is possible in the majority of the Northern states, and now, when work is plenty, both North and South, thousands of artisans from the North spend their winters in the South, busy at their various occupations, earning good wages and enjoying the balmy climate from Virginia to the Rio Grande.

Knapp Country Life School

The late Dr. Seaman A. Knapp originated the idea of boy corn clubs and of farm demonstration work throughout the South. The work has been extended until there are now in the South a thousand men showing better methods of farming and home-making to at least a hundred thousand farmers, and the boys' and girls' auxiliary clubs contain as many members. It has spread, as any really good thing is sure to do, almost everywhere, and has wrought wonders already. Dr. Knapp died about a year ago, and the general education board, as a new experiment, endowed in connection with the Teachers' College at Nashville, a Knapp School of Country Life, $250,000 being devoted to that purpose. In addition to this generous provision $150,000 is to be raised for the erection of a building and the purchase of a farm near Nashville.

The Work to be Done

The purpose of the school is officially stated thus:

"Besides the courses offered on the campus in the Knapp Memorial Building for the study of agricultural and rural conditions, it is intended to have a farm in some typical rural section within ten or twelve miles of Nashville. Here will be exemplified the best practical forms of effort, both for leading backward communities into better ways and for providing to prosperous communities new roads to still greater prosperity. In this environment of model barns, fences, implements and of high-bred farm animals and farm plants, will be developed a model rural school as a community center. This farm will work out its results with reference to varying Southern conditions and will become a suitable rallying point for demonstrations and conferences of rural workers. Thus through the country will the entire South be assisted in its economic and social betterment."

There can be nothing more important to our future than the improvement of rural life.

MECHANICS SAVINGS OF DES MOINES

Mechanics Savings of Des Moines has capital stock of $50,000 and surplus and profits amounting to more than $19,000. Deposits are about $670,000. The officers are as follows: G. E. MacKinnon, president; Harry F. Gross, vice-president; F. L. Walker, cashier, and H. F. Schoen, assistant cashier.

COST OF BALKAN WAR

According to the London Economist, the Balkan war has cost the allies and Turkey roundly $450,000,000, the estimate being based on the number of combatants and a cost of 10 shillings per day for each soldier. The figures follow:

	Men
Bulgaria	300,000	£24,750,000
Servia	200,000	16,500,000
Greece	150,000	12,375,000
Montenegro	40,000	3,300,000
Turkey	400,000	33,300,000
Totals	1,090,000	£90,225,000

The Economist adds:

"The capture of Adrianople is officially said to have cost the Bulgarians 10,000 to 11,000 men killed and wounded, while the Servians lost 1,200 killed and wounded. Probably the Bulgarian losses cannot now be put at less than 30,000 men killed, and an equal number permanently incapacitated. The losses to Turkey and Montenegro have, there is reason to suppose, been even heavier in proportion to their total numbers, and it is unlikely that the losses of all the combatants together are less than 110,000 killed and 110,000 wounded.

"That is to say, assuming the average conscript to be capable of earning £25 a year, and his life to be worth ten years' purchase, the loss of productive labor to the countries concerned amounts to a total of at least £37,500,000, which is not included in our table above."

GROUP SEVEN, WISCONSIN

C. B. Melby of Whitehall was elected president of Group Seven, Wisconsin Bankers Association, last week to succeed J. A. Thwing of La Crosse, whose term expired. W. E. Sprecker of Independence was chosen secretary and treasurer. The officers of the group together with J. P. Reinhart of Tomah and Mr. Taylor of Seneca constitute the executive committee for the coming year and J. A. Thwing was elected the group representative on the nominating committee of the state association, with John A. Bayer of the Batavian National of La Crosse as alternate.

After the election of officers, the convention adjourned and the 100 delegates enjoyed a launch ride on the Mississippi before attending a dinner at the Stoddard hotel as the guests of the La Crosse bankers.

Considerable discussion took place in the convention on the nineteenth annual convention of the state association which will be held aboard the steamer "North American," which will leave Milwaukee for a three days' trip on Lake Michigan, June 21st. The boat will go to Sault Ste. Marie and return the evening of June 24th. It is believed that nearly every member of the western group will attend the state meeting on board the steamer.

No date or place was decided upon for the next meeting of the group, this being in the hands of the executive committee.

The Guaranty State of Tyler, Tex., has purchased ground on which it will erect a skyscraper to be the permanent home of the bank. J. T. McCarthy is president of the institution.

IDAHO CONVENTION

The ninth annual convention of the Idaho Bankers Association was held in Weiser Thursday and Friday of this week and is in session to-day (Saturday). Meetings were held in the Commercial Club rooms, fifth floor of the Hotel Washington.

Thursday at ten o'clock President A. H. Keller called the convention to order. After the invocation by the Rev. H. E. Cullison, address of welcome on behalf of the city was delivered by Mayor R. B. Ayers and the response by William Thomson, vice-president of the Idaho Bankers Association, after which committees on credentials, resolutions and nominations were appointed.

After the report of the committee on credentials at the afternoon session, President A. H. Keller delivered his annual address and was followed by reports from Secretary J. W. Robinson and Treasurer D. C. Driggs. The Hon. D. W. Davis, president of the First National of American Falls, spoke on the development of Idaho, and Fred Brown, a national bank examiner, talked on more efficient directoral control. At four o'clock there was an auto trip to Payette and Ontario and at nine o'clock a ball was given at the Commercial Club rooms.

WILLIAM THOMSON
Vice-President Idaho Bankers Association

Friday morning the executive council reported. William B. Davidson, an attorney of Boise, spoke on "The Product of the Soil as a Basis of Credit," and Lydell Baker, editor of the Pacific Banker, on "Landmarks of Financial America." After reports from committees adjournment was taken until the afternoon.

At the afternoon session W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National of Spokane, Wash., read an interesting paper on bank advertising, furnishing many valuable hints and suggestions to the bankers present. J. E. Cosgriff, president of the Continental National of Salt Lake City, Utah, told the delegates of some troublesome problems in banking. At three o'clock there was a reception for the visiting ladies; at half past four an auto ride through Weiser Valley and at eight o'clock a banquet at the Hotel Washington.

This morning (Saturday) Miles Cannon, an attorney of Weiser, is down for an address entitled "Idaho in Its Early History and Present Opportunity." A. E. Reid, bank commissioner for Idaho, will talk on "Examinations by the Examining Committee: Their Purpose and Value." After miscellaneous and unfinished business, report of committee on nominations, election of officers, selection of place for holding the next annual convention and appointment of standing committees, adjournment will be taken. At 8 p. m. a smoker will be held in the Commercial Club rooms.

At the close of the convention members of the American Bankers Association will meet for the purpose of electing a vice-president from Idaho, and a delegate to the national convention in Boston, Mass., October 6th-10th.

Officers of the Idaho Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, A. H. Keller, president First National, Weiser; vice-president, William Thomson, president Lewiston National; treasurer, D. C. Driggs, cashier First National, Driggs; secretary, J. W. Robinson, secretary Union Savings and Trust Company, Boise.

Address by W. D. Vincent

W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National of Spokane, read a paper on the "Banker's Advertising." He said the time has long since passed when there is any serious doubt as to the value of advertising and that there is no question that publicity of the proper sort possesses a great value to the modern bank. He said the bank which refuses to advertise merely because it is difficult to determine the exact returns which it secures will in all probability soon be the bank which must be content to take care of the business its competitors do not care for, for stagnation surely will result from a policy which does not take into account the value of proper publicity.

American Falls Banker on Program

D. W. Davis, president of the First National of American Falls, told of the opportunities afforded by Idaho to new settlers, of the large number of people who have made their homes there in recent years and of the growth and development of the state.

FIRST NATIONAL OF PAYETTE, IDAHO

First National of Payette, Idaho, with capital stock of $80,000, possesses surplus and profits in excess of $32,000; deposits are more than $400,000. The officers are as follows: A. B. Moss, president; Peter Pence, vice-president; M. F. Albert, cashier, and Geo. W. Baker, assistant cashier. Mr. Moss has been president for seven years. He was first vice-president of the Idaho Bankers Association and its second president.

CHICAGO CURRENCY MOVEMENTS

On the direct currency movement into and out of the city in May Chicago banks made a gain of nearly $1,900,000. Their total shipments of cash were $10,765,000, and the receipts from outside sources were $12,651,000. The shipments were the smallest for any month in the year since January and some of the amount went to New York.

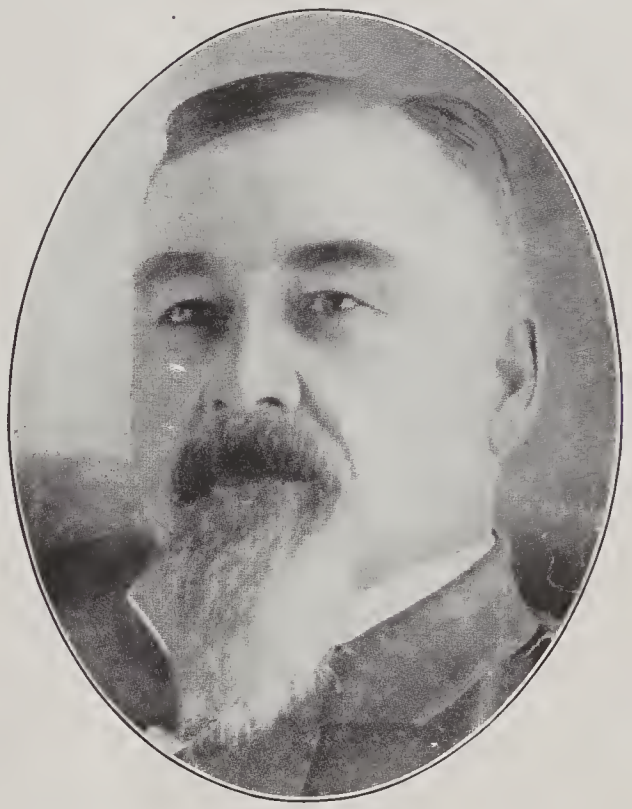
The demand from the West was very moderate, and is expected to continue so until September. Country banks have invested their own funds very largely in commercial paper and are carrying less than their usual balances with city correspondents.

NEW ORLEANS CHAPTER GRADUATES

During the past year the practical banking and finance course of New Orleans Chapter, American Institute of Banking, has been conducted by Rudolf S. Hecht, trust officer, Hibernia Bank and Trust, in conjunction with Morton S. Aldrich of Tulane University. The average attendance at the classes was thirty-five, of which seventeen passed the examination. Six of these having passed the commercial law course examination, are now entitled to the Institute certificate. New Orleans Chapter plans on maintaining, during the coming season, a post-graduate course for the further study of finance and currency questions.

SEATTLE BANKS LOCALLY CONTROLLED

All of Seattle's twenty-seven banks, for the first time in the history of the city, are to-day controlled by Seattle men. This is one of the striking facts shown in the lists of stockholders just completed. This list designates the ownership of each separate parcel of stock of the local institutions. The Canadian Bank of Commerce and Bank of California, foreign banks with only branches in Seattle, are not included.



A. B. MOSS
President First National of Payette, Idaho

The capital stock of all the banks is shown to be $7,565,000, divided into 76,650 shares, each of the par value of $100. The actual selling value of the stocks, however, varies from $100 to $400 a share.

Changes in the personnel of stockholders during the past year show Seattle men are investing more than ever in local bank stocks. For the first time since it was founded, the pioneer institution, the Dexter Horton National Bank, is shown to be owned in Seattle. Control heretofore had been held by Ladd & Tilton, a big Portland concern. They had owned about 55 per cent of the stock. This year they are shown to have only about 40 per cent. W. M. Ladd of Portland remains still the largest individual stockholder, having 2,184 shares.

GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK DECLARES DIVIDEND

The board of directors of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 6 per cent and an extra dividend of 2 per cent payable on June 30, 1913, to stockholders of record June 24th.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

As the beginning of a three-year campaign for more corn, alfalfa, hogs and dairying in the Spokane country, the chambers of commerce will conduct a four-weeks alfalfa campaign next fall, in all probability with the active co-operation of Professor P. G. Holden, the man who put Iowa on the map as a corn state.

"The important feature of the autumn campaign," states President Charles Hebberd, "will be a series of 'alfalfa automobile trains' to carry the message of alfalfa growing from the towns directly to farmers' homes, schoolhouses and fields. Here is the idea in a nutshell: The states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana import annually $29,000,000 worth of packing-house products and enough other things, such as dairy products, poultry and eggs, to swell the total to $40,000,000. We ought to be raising these things right here in the Inland Empire, where we have every requisite for their successful production. If at the end of three years we can cause that $40,000,000 to shrink to $20,000,000 or to $10,000,000, it will mean more money for the farmers, the bankers, the business men and for everyone in this Spokane country. In a few years we ought to be exporting these products, so great are our opportunities. It costs $1.04½ to produce the average bushel of wheat, including wear and tear of the soil, according to so well-known an authority as Dr. J. H. Worst, president of the North Dakota Agricultural College. He says the farmers are mining the soil and robbing future generations every time they grow a wheat crop, and that they are in reality producing the crop at a real cash loss every year, considering the present and future interests of all concerned. Instead of these vast wheat farms in various parts of the Inland Empire, we should have more farmers producing things at a real profit, things that will conserve the soil and will mean prosperity for all. The chamber of commerce considers the increased production of alfalfa, corn, hogs and dairy herds as the most vitally essential undertaking for the Spokane country. A three-year campaign along these lines can accomplish more here than twenty years' effort in the older sections. The alfalfa demonstration work will be the first step in such a campaign."

Investment bankers from all parts of the country are unanimous in predicting the best bond market in the fall of 1913 that they have enjoyed for four years, according to Herbert Witherspoon, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, on his return from St. Louis, where he attended the meeting of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America. Mr. Witherspoon is a member of the board. "Municipal bonds have been selling on a higher income basis to the purchaser recently than for ten years," said Mr. Witherspoon. "While the tariff question is under discussion the demand for bonds is light and is expected to continue so. It is the feeling of investment bankers that tariff legislation will make no ultimate difference. They are absolutely hopeful that the wonderful resources of the country and the great recuperative powers of the financial and industrial interests will bring the country great prosperity in spite of the tariff. Fine crop conditions were reported from every section of the country and the nation's wheat crop is estimated at 520,000,000 bushels. Investment bankers everywhere are opposed to the income tax in its present form. A keen demand is anticipated for bonds by fall, the best there has been for four years."

Spokane is the only northwestern city represented on the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America, San Francisco being the other western city on the board.

Any sum of money, from $1,000 to $100,000,000, can be secured by Spokane investors and banks from the string of Hill banks in St. Paul, recently consolidated by James J. Hill. This is the news brought by J. J. Elliott, manager of the bond department of the Hill banks; O. E. Rice of the First National of St. Paul, a Hill bank, and Louis W. Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the Great Northern Railway and a heavy stockholder in the First and Second National banks of St. Paul and the Merchants Trust Company. In Spokane this week the St. Paul bankers conferred with Spokane bankers and assured them that henceforth municipal and other bonds can be floated easily in St. Paul. A recent consolidation of banking interests in St. Paul by James J. Hill is responsible for the visit of the bankers from Minnesota's capital to Spokane and other western cities.

Several Spokane men, headed by Eugene Enloe, have purchased the Nixon-Kimmel Company's power plant on the Methow river, just above Pateros, Wash., also the power and light distributing system at Okanogan, Wash. They are organizing a $300,000 corporation to supply light and power for the rapidly developing Okanogan district, now being opened up by the Great Northern's Wenatchee to Oroville branch. Eugene Enloe is president of the new corporation; S. E. Gates, vice-president, and W. C. Sivyer, secretary-treasurer. These men are now associated in the Big Bend Light and Power Company, which supplies light and power to seven towns in the Big Ben country. They also have the Grangeville Light and Power Company, supplying nine towns in the rapidly developing Grangeville district of Idaho.

Spokane bankers are co-operating with bankers from northern Idaho in arranging for a special car to carry them to the annual convention of the Idaho Bankers Association, to be held this year at Weiser, Idaho, June 5th, 6th and 7th. W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National, is the only local banker on the program. He will speak on bank advertising. Bankers from Salt Lake, Boise and Portland also are on the program. Idaho and eastern Washington bankers also are planning to join in securing a special car to attend the Washington state convention at Bellingham August 7th, 8th and 9th. A large number of eastern bankers are to attendthe state convention and a special car will be arranged at Bellingham to bring the party back to Spokane, where the eastern bankers will visit for several days before continuing with a local party to the Montana state convention at Helena a few days after the Washington convention. Many Spokane men are making preparations to attend all three state conventions.

Indorsement has been given by the Spokane Clearing House Association to a rural life conference to be held under the auspices of the Washington State College at Pullman, June 18th, 19th and 20th. The session will be devoted to discussion of conditions and problems of farm and country life, especially of the following subjects: "Surveys of Rural Life Conditions," "Economics of Agriculture," "Social Agencies for Rural Betterment," "Co-operation in Marketing," "Farmers' Organizations," "The Rural School" and "The Church."

Richard C. Halliday, founder of the Halliday Hotel of Spokane, which he sold about a year ago, has purchased the Idaho State Bank at Rupert, Idaho, and has assumed charge, John W. Murphy, chief clerk at the Halliday, has accepted the position of cashier of the bank. Mr. Murphy is one of tht best known hotel men in the Pacific Northwest, having been at the desks of leading Spokane and Portland hotels for 20 years.

EDMONTON NEWS

Dr. R. Hoppe of San Francisco, who already has expended more than $100,000 in exploring coal lands in northwestern Alberta, received advices in Edmonton on April 30th that the federal government has granted a charter, under which he and his associates will be able to build 400 miles of railway line to connect his coal fields in the Grande Prairie district with the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern railways, west of Edmonton. Dr. Hoppe has the coal rights on more than 30,000 acres of land in the district. A trail of 90 miles has been built north from Hinton, Alta., and preparations are being made to begin active development work within 30 days.

F. T. Fisher, secretary of the Edmonton Board of Trade and the Edmonton Jobbers Association, reports that the announced reduction of 20 per cent in express rates will mean the saving of thousands of dollars to the people of this district. The agitation for more equitable rates has been kept alive for 19 years.

CHICAGO CHAPTER ELECTION

The annual election of Chicago Chapter, American Institute of Banking, was held May 27th at capter headquarters, and it resulted in the election of the following officers for the year 1913-14: Thomas J. Nugent, First National, president; John W. Gorby, Peoples Trust and Savings, vice-president; Frank M. Day, Merchants Loan and Trust, corresponding secretary; W. W. Walton, Continental and Commercial National, financial secretary; Myron D. Goldberg, Live Stock Exchange National, treasurer. Executive committee (three-year terms), Jos. J. Schroeder, National Bank of the Republic, and C. F. Sommers, Continental and Commercial National; executive committee (unexpired terms), H. L. Benson, Union Trust Company, and A. G. Holmes, Northern Trust Company. Forty-five delegates to the national convention at Richmond, Va., September 17th, 18th and 19th also were selected.

The adding machine contest, staged in conjunction with the election, resulted in some unusually fast time. John T. Gallagher of the Continental broke the world's amateur record on the Burroughs machine, 250 checks, by shooting them through in 3 minutes flat. H. M. Jackson, of the same bank, took second prize in 3:12 1-5, and C. Sorenson third in 3:17. Harry Boyell of the First National lost third money by one second. The 500 check contest (Burroughs machine) was won by John T. Gallagher, Continental and Commercial National, 6:19 1-5; second, C. Sorenson, Continental and Commercial National, 6:45 1-5, and Harry Boyell, First National, third, 6:47 1-5 The judges and timers were F. E. Musgrove, Bruce Baird, Leigh Sargent, H. W. Schrader, J. F. Metzger, C. F. Sommers, T. J. Nugent, J. J. Schroeder, G. W. Cooke, David Johnstone, A. G. Holmes, W. H. Damon, L. V. Regan and C. A. Edmonds. The Burroughs Company donated the prizes.

John W. Rubecamp of the Corn Exchange National, president of Chicago Chapter, in his annual report said that membership at the present time shows 1,118 names enrolled, the largest in the history of the Chapter. The final examination of the banking and law class, which opened up with an enrollment of 313 students, was passed by 175. A class in English and rhetoric was started with about 175 members, and the class in public speaking under the direction of Prof. Kline proved to be popular. That the work of Prof. Kline has borne fruit is evidenced by the recent victory of the Chicago Chapter debating team at Pittsburgh, which makes them champions of the A. I. B.

On account of the increase in the number of Institute graduates it was planned at the Salt Lake City convention last year to have a post-graduate course, in order that the graduates might continue their studies in banking and finance. This course was fairly launched in Chicago Chapter this year and activities will be resumed next year.

At the general meetings there have been a number of stereopticon lectures by authorities on various subjects and addresses by prominent speakers on topics of interest to bank men.

Chicago Chapter has, for many years, been handicapped by lack of adequate housing accommodation. A committee was appointed by President Rubecamp and as a result more comfortable quarters in the Northwestern University building at Lake and Dearborn streets were secured. There is a class room seating about 200 and in addition several large reception rooms, a library, room for the use of the president and secretary and editor of the Bankman.

ATLANTA CHAPTER

By John Yopp

Atlanta Chapter is in a flourishing condition. Interesting addresses were made recently by Jos. A. McCord, vice-president of the Third National; Robert S. Parker, a prominent attorney, and George M. Brown, president of the Georgia Savings Bank & Trust Company. The former and latter have been identified with the American Bankers Association for a number of years and are, therefore, equipped to give good advice and helpful informtion to the members.

Chapter Growing

President T. W. Townsend of the Fourth National has been active in the interest of the chapter since his election some few months ago. A dozen or more new members have been added and a large percentage of the membership attend regularly. The chapter magazine edited by Julian Clayton is giving the members interesting matter each month and is also helpful to the chapter.

F. W. Ellsworth

Atlanta Chapter was highly pleased over the acceptance of Fred W. Ellsworth of New York who addressed the members on the evening of Thursday, May 15th. Mr. Ellsworth's subject was "The Ideal Institute Man." He stopped over on his way to Macon, where he was on the program for an address before the Georgia Bankers convention in that city.

DES MOINES NATIONAL

Des Moines National, capitalized at $750,000, has resources of more than seven millions. The officers are as follows: Arthur Reynolds, president; J. H. Blair, vice-president; C. A. Barr, cashier, and A. J. Zwart, assistant cashier. Mr. Reynolds is well known to bankers all over the country. He always has taken an active part in state association and A. B. A. matters and at the present time is first vice-president of the American Bankers Association.

National Park Bank, N.Y. Buys 6 Duplex Burroughs for use on one kind of work

The National Park Bank will use these 6 Duplex Burroughs for making up a list of the charges against out of town correspondents.

On these machines they will be able to get the detailed amounts on narrow tape, transfer the totals to the Posting Sheet and when the work is finished have grand total—all in one operation.

But that is only one of many ways in which the Burroughs Duplex saves time in banks.

For instance, the Germania National Bank of Milwaukee is writing its Check Journal on a Duplex.

The Duplex features enables the operator to get individual totals for each account and a grand total of all checks in all accounts for the day at one operation.

Then, the First National Bank of Poteau, Okla., uses a Burroughs Duplex for making out Customers Statements.

With the Duplex you can add and print Balances and Overdrafts—distinguish one from the other by appropriate symbols —secure both totals—all in one operation.

In proving incoming mail, listing One and Two Name Paper, proving deposits sl ps and on many other kinds of bank work the Duplex is invaluable because t does in one operation work that requires two operations on an ordinary adding machine —a straight saving of at least 20%.

Our 16-page bulletin—"The Burroughs Duplex for Banks," illustrates many different forms and te ls many different ways in which the Duplex is being used to save time and money in big and little banks.

Send for it—or ask us for demonstration. June is Duplex month, and the Burroughs man in your territory has a machine to demonstrate to you on your own work.

Just say the word.

WISCONSIN TO AID NEW SETTLERS

Several measures for the agricultural development of northern Wisconsin have been considered by the legislature and some have been adopted. Among the latter are the Gulickson joint resolution for a constitutional amendment permitting counties, cities, towns and villages to exempt certain classes of property from taxation, and the Nye joint resolution for a constitutional amendment permitting the state to establish a system of state loans to farmers.

The Gulickson amendment makes it possible for the legislature to authorize counties and towns, where a majority of the voters so desire, to exempt buildings and other improvements on land from all taxation and to put the entire burden of local taxation, aside from the income tax, on the land itself. This, it is contended, would aid greatly in the settlement of the northern counties, first, by encouraging the industrious settler to develop his farm and, second, by discouraging the operations of the idle land speculator.

The Nye amendment is designed to meet the great need of the settler on cutover lands—as well as of the tenant farmer of the southern counties—for a system of long-time farm loans. This amendment, however, cannot become part of the state constitution until it has been adopted by the legislature of 1915 and accepted by the people of the state. A bill has therefore been introduced in the senate to permit counties to aid farmers in securing funds for farm development.

May Bond to Make Loans

This bill provides that the board of any county of the state may issue bonds and loan their proceeds on the security of farm land to settlers within the county to aid them in draining their land or in removing from it such stumps, brush, fallen or standing timber or stones as prevent an efficient use of the land for agricultural purposes.

Any county board which votes to take advantage of the proposed act must elect two persons to serve with a third person appointed by the governor of the state as members of a board to be known as the county reclamation board. This board is in general to have charge of the carrying out of the provisions of the act with respect to the examination of lands offered as security for loans, the investigation of the desirability of the reclamation work proposed to be performed by aid of the loans requested, and the inspection of the work of reclamation after it is performed and before the loans granted are actually paid over to borrowers or to contractors.

Six Per Cent or Under

Borrowers are to be granted loans running for twenty years, but are to be permitted with the consent of the county clerk and the chairman of the county board to repay their loans at any time within that period. Loans are to be of not less than $100 nor more than $2,000, and are not to exceed 75 per cent of the value of the land accepted as security, exclusive of the value of buildings and other perishable improvements, when reclaimed as proposed in the petitions for the loans.

The rate of interest to be charged borrowers is to be sufficient to cover the rate paid by the county on the bonds which it issues to secure the funds loaned, plus the expense incurred by the county in administering the system of loans.

Although the system will thus be entirely self-supporting, it is believed that the counties which use it will be able to furnish loans to settlers with the proper security at rates of interest under 6 per cent. These comparatively low rates and the additional advantage of being able to obtain a loan for a long term of years without the payment of a commission and with the privilege of repayment by instalments, it is urged, will enable settlers in the northern counties to make much more progress in developing their farms than they are able to make at present.

NEW YORK CHAPTER GRADUATES LARGE CLASS

Ninety-three men took the final examination in the practical banking course conducted by New York Chapter, American Institute of Banking, during the past season. Seventy-six of these men were successful in passing the examination. David M. Cross of the Fifth Avenue Bank was high man with a mark of 94.9 per cent. This is the largest first-year class that has ever been graduated from New York Chapter.

WILLIAMS, BANKER, TAKES BRIDE

Webster, S. D., May 31st.—News has reached here of the marriage in New York on May 28th, of David Williams, president of the Farmers and Merchants National of Webster, and vice-president of the First National of Duluth, to Mrs. Elizabeth B. Gilbert. They sailed from New York on the liner Kaiserin Augusta, and will spend the summer touring Europe.

FIRST NATIONAL OF SIOUX CITY

First National of Sioux City is capitalized at $400,000, has surplus and profits of $139,000 and a line of deposits of about $7,230,000. The officers are: John McHugh, president; John J. Large, W. L. Montgomery, H. G. Weare and F. A. McCornack, vice-presidents; H. A. Gooch, cashier; and O. D. Pettit and Fritz Fritzson, assistant cashiers.

LIVE STOCK NATIONAL, SIOUX CITY

Live Stock National of Sioux City, with capital stock of $100,000, has surplus of a like amount and deposits in excess of two and one-half millions. The officers are as follows: George S. Parker, president; F. L. Eaton and J. L. Mitchell, vice-presidents; C. D. Van Dyke, cashier, and A. W. Smith, assistant cashier.

GOVERNMENT TO HELP FARMERS

Washington, June 1st.—The "rural organization service," a new branch of the department of agriculture, which includes a division of markets as one of its principal activities, will begin actual operation to-morrow with the arrival of Dr. Thomas N. Carver of Harvard University, selected some time ago to head the service.

Announcement was made to-day that two of Dr. Carver's assistants will be Dr. Carl W. Thompson of Minnesota and L. H. Goddard, who has been studying farm management in Ohio.

The department announced to-day that the efforts to study the farmers' needs and then meet them would fall into three main groups. There will be "surveys" to get at the basic facts regarding various kinds of organized rural agencies that were to have been tried; to discover how and why they have failed or why they are succeeding; investigations in certain regional units and among certain kinds of agricultural interests to discover the reasons for existing rural conditions, and then certain units of territory will be selected in which to make demonstrations and experiments with schemes designed to improve the farmers' financial, physical and social condition.

JAMES B. FORGAN ON THE MONEY SITUATION

Commenting upon the money situation and outlook, President James B. Forgan, president of the First National Bank, is quoted as saying: "When rates are normal, country banks send us their unemployed cash, for which we pay them 2 per cent and put it out at, say 4 per cent. But at such times as the present and in the recent past the out-of-town banker buys commercial 6 per cent paper, a proceeding which lightens our bank deposits, but at the same time relieves us of just so much responsibility. When the crop-moving weeks shall approach, the interior banker must, to a certain extent, finance himself instead of relying upon us to finance him."

NOT TO HAVE GUARANTY OF DEPOSITS

Washington, June 3d.—The new banking and currency committee of the house of representatives will not favor the incorporation of a bank deposits guaranty in this year's banking and currency legislation. The chairman, Mr. Glass, is a conservative, as are the other committee members, and they do not think it would be wise to take such a step in the new bill. The work is being carried on in co-operation with President Wilson and other officials, and the belief is general that a measure will be evolved that will be acceptable to a majority of the house Democrats.

Associated with Mr. Glass on the committee will be Representatives Korbly, of Indiana; Brown, of West Virginia; Bulkley, of Ohio; Neeley, of Kansas; Patten, of New York; Stone, of Illinois; Phelan, of Massachusetts; Eagle, of Texas; Wingo, of Arkansas; Seldomridge, of Colorado; Wilson, of Florida; Weaver, of Oklahoma, and Ragsdale, of South Carolina, Democrats. Hayes, of California; Guernsey, of Maine; Burke, of Pennsylvania; Woods, of Iowa; Platt, of New York, and Smith, of Minnesota, Republicans. Lindbergh, of Minnesota, Bull Moose.

With the exception of Mr. Lindbergh, who introduced the original money trust resolution, the new banking and currency committee is regarded as conservative from top to bottom. In making selections for this committee, the democratic leader proceeded with great care. President Wilson had the privilege of rejecting any member who was not entirely satisfactory to him and in some cases it is understood that before selections were made representatives who were suggested for the committee were questioned concerning their views on the money question.

CHICAGO RESERVES AMPLE

Heads of Chicago national banks declared this week the money reserves in Chicago are ample to take care of all present needs of business. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo's offer to issue $500,000,000 new national bank notes under the Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency act is highly appreciated by the business world, they said, but the present conditions are considered so favorable that there is no immediate necessity of calling for additional cash.

The bankers said Secretary McAdoo's announcement serves as an assurance to the public that there is no danger of a repetition of the conditions of 1907.

"We are glad to see Secretary McAdoo putting this matter out," said George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National. "I regard the law under which this reserve may be put out as a strong resisting force between the business world and a panic."

"There is no need for any of the funds here," said James B. Forgan, president of the First National. "The Chicago banks, as shown in the statements issued on June 4th, are stronger in reserves now than at the time the last statements were issued in April. Not only are they stronger but they are increasing their cash resources ready for the fall business."

"So far as this bank is concerned, we have no need of the money Secretary McAdoo offers," said D. A. Moulton, vice-president of the Corn Exchange National. "It is, however, a very comfortable feeling to know that any national bank can get it if necessary. Had this same condition prevailed in 1907 it would have saved the country a great deal of anxiety and loss."

"The fundamental conditions here are sound," said H. E. Otte, vice-president of the National City. "There is no immediate necessity for additional reserves. The machinery of the reserve association has never been used. It is cumbersome and the money is expensive."

CALL MONEY UP IN CHICAGO

Some of the leading Chicago banks have given notice of an advance to 6 per cent in the interest rate on demand loans outstanding at 5½. This will become effective June 15th. Time money is slightly firmer also, some banks that have been lending at 5½ per cent to the highest grade of borrowers holding their funds now at 6 per cent.

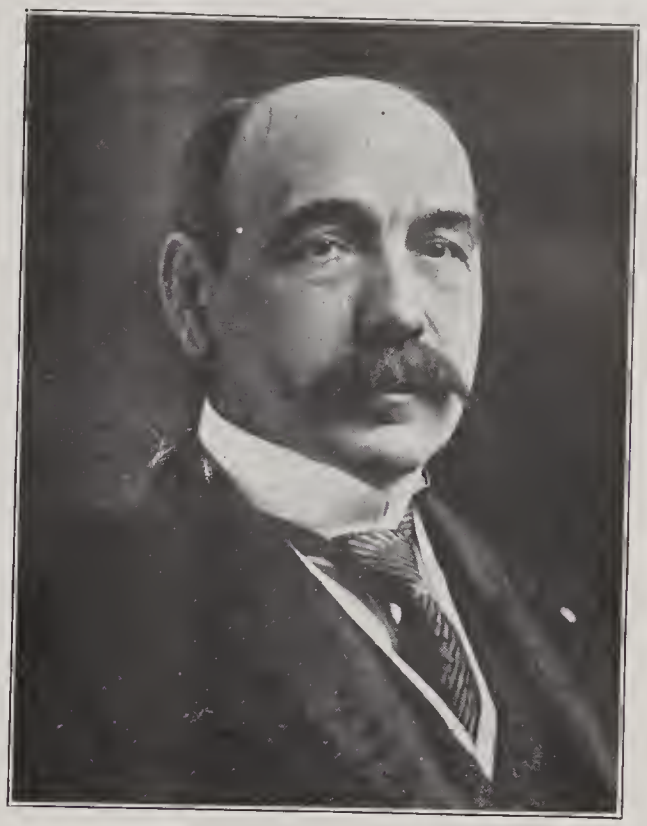
This advance is considered to be more a step in preparation for the fall demand than a matter of present necessity. The statements of June 4th showed local institutions to be in good cash position, but even a larger percentage of cash may be necessary to approach the fall demand for funds if the agricultural harvest proves as large as the government's estimates indicate.

DALLAS BANK TO INCREASE CAPITAL

Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas, Texas, has filed an amendment to its charter, increasing its capital stock to $1,000,000.

Association Heads Presiding This Week

BENJAMIN F. DAVIS
LANSING, MICHIGAN



CORNELIUS A. PUGSLEY
PEEKSKILL, NEW YORK

BENJAMIN F. DAVIS, president of the Michigan Bankers Association, also is president of the City National of Lansing, where the Wolverines held their fine convention this week. He has fully justified the confidence reposed in him by his fellow bankers and ably and intelligently guided the destinies of the Michigan bankers during his incumbency.

This week in his annual address he urgently advocated the adoption of more scientific, up-to-date methods of tilling the soil, pointing out that such a procedure will enhance to a marked degree the resources of this country and enable it to compare favorably with other leading nations of the world in an agricultural way.

President Cornelius A. Pugsley of the New York Bankers Association has an acquaintance which is national in scope. He presided this week at the convention of the state bankers association held on Canadian soil, the occasion being the celebration of one hundred years of peace between the English speaking peoples. President Pugsley's annual address appears elsewhere in this issue and is well worth reading. He is president of the Westchester County National of Peekskill.

STATE BANKS SHOW LARGE GAINS

The state banks in Chicago are nearly four to one of the nationals. Sixty-eight state banks in Chicago, reporting their condition as at the beginning of business June 5th, show an increase of $7,700,000 in deposits over the total reported for April 5th and an increase of $8,250,000 in their total cash means. Total loans are virtually the same—$358,700,000, compared with $358,475,000 two months ago.

Combining the figures of the state banks with those of the twenty national institutions gives total deposits of $995,549,000, a gain of nearly $3,000,000 over the amount reported two months ago. The total loans show a decrease of nearly $11,000,000 during the period, while the combined cash resources of the state and national banks were increased more than $17,000,000. The total cash means June 5th was $322,000,000, or 32.36 per cent of the total deposits. The proportion of cash means to deposits two months ago was down to 30.7 per cent.

FORGAN EXPECTS CURRENCY PLAN

J. B. Forgan, president of the First National, returned yesterday from the East, where he went at the invitation of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo to confer over prospective currency legislation. Mr. Forgan told some of his friends he felt hopeful a currency plan would be worked out.

From various trustworthy sources it is learned there is strong probability of there being presented to congress a banking and currency bill which will, in the main, meet with the approval of congress and banking interests.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

YOUR UNCLE JAMES P. HINTON of Hannibal, Mo., has seen the Star of Hope for the farmer come to rest over Joliet and at once divined the cause.

HE didn't delay long, and already there has been incorporated at Hannibal a farm-loan company on approved lines.

THE new association has purchased the building at the northwest corner of Main and Center streets, formerly owned and occupied by the Farmers and Merchants Bank, where it will open for business as soon as the necessary steps in organization are completed. With the building were purchased the large vault, safe and other furnishings.

THE incorporators of the new company are men of well-known business ability and financial standing. Every man connected with it has been very successful and their names as the organizers insures that the new firm will be one of great strength and high standing.

MR. HINTON is one of the best known bankers in the state, an ex-president of the Missouri Association.

"NO. 40" says that "N. D. Alling is the Newt who put the toot in Institute."

PRESIDENT JAMES G. CANNON has offered a prize of $25 for the best essay on the collection of transit items, and the New York Chapter A I. B. will be the judge.

KNAUTH, NACHOD AND KÜHNE of New York has sent out a little circular that ought to make a hit.

"MONTHLY INCOME PAYMENTS" is the title and it contains a list of safe investments which will give a stated regular monthly income to the investor. The plan is simple.

THE sample lists are in multiples of $50 and $100 per month and here is one of them.

SUPPOSE you wished to establish an income of $100 per month for yourself or for someone else. You can, for $11,825 buy bonds of $12,000 par, at 5 per cent.

THE trick is to have them so that the interest will come regularly at $100 per month.

YOU get $2,000 in Wichita Falls and Northern with interest payable January and July; Canton & New Philadelphia, with interest payable February and August; Milwaukee with interest payable March and September; Hudson and Manhattan, April and October; National Tube, May and November, and Shreveport and Southern, June and December.

THUS the interest check or coupons come off in consecutive months in even $100 chunks. It's a good stunt and ought to make a hit.

K. N. & K. will send the literature to anyone interested.

At this time there are several attractive investments in Bank Stocks and Public Utilities, yielding a comparatively high rate of return. Particulars will be furnished upon request.
NEW YORK DETROIT

THE FIRST NATIONAL of Whiting, Ind., is about to erect a new building at the corner of 119th Street and New York Avenue. This prosperous institution is almost a Chicago bank.

THE building will be of the monumental type, with heavy stone columns as the chief architectural feature. The room will be lighted from above.

THE Bank Publicity Association of New York City, which was launched on April 3d, has completed its organization by the election of directors and officers. The officers are E. B. Wilson, president; N. P. Gatling, vice-president; E. A. Bennett, secretary; Horace Anderson, treasurer.

THE directors are C. E. Meek, Fourth National; F. W. Ellsworth, Guaranty Trust; W. E. Purdy, Chase National; Horace Anderson, Title Guarantee and Trust; H. A. Dunn, Columbia-Knickerbocker Trust; E. B. Wilson, Bankers Trust; N. P. Gatling, Chatham and Phenix National; E. A. Bennett, American Exchange National; and J. T. D. Cornwell of the Peoples Trust Company.

"THERE is a tendency plainly noticeable to widen the scope of the bank advertising man's work. He is becoming an adviser on matters of policy and a suggester of methods for increasing business. There has been no way in New York for these men to improve their methods by actual contact with men of similar endeavor. The association will give this much needed opportunity."

A WATERLOO, Iowa, paper recently published a "boom edition," in which the banking and financial article was by Dr. W. F. Powers of the Black Hawk National of that city.

WATERLOO has $2,500,000 capital and surplus employed in her banks as security for ten millions in deposits. Never had a bank failure and never issued a single clearing house certificate, not even in 1907.

BANK clearings in Waterloo are about seventy-five millions a year, and this is why commercial clubs of other cities are after Dr. Powers all the time to "c'mon over" and tell them how it is done.

THE doctor predicts that Iowa will not show a loss of population next census, and that the corn crop will run up this year to well beyond the record.

TO save trouble for F. P. Judson of Aurora let us explain. He's out of the business of making brass acorns, or the Acorn Brass Company, or whatever it was, that lured him away from Chicago.

HE has backed a company of young artisans, share-and-share-alike, in making bank and other fixtures at 1835 West Lake Street. Every man in the company works, including Mr. Judson. Business is humming.

THE popular ex-secretary of the Illinois Bankers Association will retain his home in Aurora, coming to Chicago as many times per week as the business demands.

C. B. MUNDAY, the man behind the guns at the LaSalle Street Trust, has purchased the Matthiessen residence at 4917 Drexel Boulevard, one of the largest and costliest houses in Chicago.

JOHN BURNHAM says the chief "worry" now is lest the tariff bill should get through congress and the currency and banking bill should not.

ROLLIN P. GRANT stopped only briefly in Chicago on his way back to New York from the California convention at San Diego. Had a fine time there and looked "fit and hard as nails."

EDENS denies emphatically that the boat upset at Crystal Lake was pre-arranged so that the Rainbow-chasers might escape hearing the "fourthly and lastly" of his speech.

THE banks pay 40 per cent of all personal property tax paid in the entire south-town district of Chicago. How do the assessors have the nerve?

AT the Rochelle group meeting Senator D. W. Baxter came out strong for a "Blue Sky" law but was way below even the soft pedal on the topic of bank supervision.

A LOCAL paper: "You could hardly imagine dignified cashiers like Henry Antrim, Manley Clark and Lewis Jungkunz dancing a highland fling on top of a table, could you? Well, they didn't, but others just as dignified looking behind a cashier's window did."

A FREEPORT paper: "The entire Stephenson county delegation of dignified and marble-hearted bankers joined in singing such frivolous songs as 'We Are Here Because We Are Here,' 'Melinda's Wedding Day,' 'Mornin' Cy,' 'That Old Girl of Mine,' and 'Goodbye Everybody.' They put vim and vigor into their singing, too, and were especially strong on 'That Old Girl of Mine.' Henry Antrim led in the singing and he seemed as familiar with these frivolous songs as he is with church hymns."

S. E. BRADT of DeKalb is the new council member for Group Three. He had it coming to him and will give the job his very best attention.

HE will make a fine running mate for Group Four's new member, W. G. Schroeder, the two being much alike in many ways.

F. K. LISTER, the new a. c. at the Fourth National, New York, is a "home grown" product from start to now. He began with the Fourth in a very humble capacity but he had the goods.

CHAIRMAN Hepburn has called a meeting of the currency commission at Atlantic City for June 17th to "Exchange views on the currency and banking situation at Washington."

THOSE serving from the West are Messrs. Forgan and Reynolds of Chicago, Wade of St. Louis, Drake of Omaha, Swinney of Kansas City and Sartori and Perrin of Los Angeles.

OTHERS prominent are Wexler of New Orleans, Talbert of New York, Wardrop of Pittsburgh, Howe of Princeton and Rue of Philadelphia. Col. Farnsworth is secretary.

THE Ottawa program had two big headliners in Hill and Owen.

COMMISSIONER DOYLE of Michigan is the new head of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks and it will meet in Atlantic City next year. Had a big time at St. Paul.

NEW YORK chapter graduated seventy-six at the "June commencement." Pretty soon New York will quit "lifting" western men, and rely upon home grown.

OVER at Lansing the executive council had before it a request from a Southern state secretary to indorse Wm. A. Law for vice-president of the A. B. A. at Boston.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN was on the Lansing program, probably unknown to the secretary who made the request.

THE proposal was turned down simply as "bad politics," the members of the council not taking into account that their "orator of the day" had been put in the race by his friends. It was turned down unanimously.

THE attorney-general has called to the attention of Oregon bankers that the word "trust" is protected in the new banking law. Must not use the word unless having $100,000 capital and complying fully with the law.

THE "little" trust company is a thing of the past in Oregon. A deposit of $50,000 must be carried with the state treasurer.

THE "Mainly" is a little short this week. Chapman was here and said he wanted to see the "outskirts" of the town, having seen all the others. It was a fine day for fine company.

GEORGE E. ALLEN, chief agriculturist to the New York Bankers Association, has switched as to what ought to be done with the New York lands which stand pretty nearly on edge.

LAST year he suggested Angoras, at Buffalo, but at Ottawa he stood for Brazil (or was it hickory) nuts.

IF the educational emancipator keeps on solving these knotty problems we shall soon be compelled to "boom" for secretary of agriculture.

HE wouldn't be either a goat or a nut; he'd be a peach.

G. W. COOK over at the First tells us that Boston Chapter, A. I. B., has a plan which will increase the influence of its delegation at Richmond.

THE delegation will consist, first, of all the officers; second, of all the members of the board of governors; third, of Institute graduates; and fourth, of members of the chapter committees. Delegations from other chapters will have to look to their laurels when they buck up against the Boston delegation.

THE delegation will be far from green hands. Something to it. If Boston makes a killing, other chapters will try the stunt.

RICHMOND CHAPTER has elected the following officers to serve during the ensuing year: President, George H. Keesee; vice-president, W. M. Goddard; secretary, J. F. Wood; treasurer, George S. Barnard.

point in favor of the stamp is its legibility. Arthur Reynolds is going to get one when they begin to make them in dreadnaught sizes.

THE meeting of the members of Group Four, Illinois, at Crystal Lake on Friday of last week brought to a close the group meetings of Illinois for the season. The representatives of the Chicago banks who traveled in the private Pullman car "Rainbow" reported one of the best year's group meetings since the system was inaugurated. There was a big attendance and lively interest at every point.

I. H. CHRISTIAN of I. H. Christian & Co. organized the boys into a musical combination and spread commercial paper—good cheer—at every meeting. Several new faces were found among the representatives of the Chicago banks who carry down-state accounts.

THESE included James A. Walker of the Corn Exchange, a transit man of wide experience; John Grier, Jr., of the Merchants Loan, who created a favorable impression and F. F. Winans of the Northern Trust, who made a hit with his Roman gladiator stunt wherever put on. John W. Gorby of the Peoples Trust and Savings, formerly with the Central Trust, is a serious-minded student of banking matters and takes an active part in institute affairs, being a native of Marietta, Ohio, the home of financiers.

MISS FLORA BUCK, cashier of the Farmers State at Genoa, accompanied by her friend, Miss Georgia Walker, attended the meeting at Rochelle. Miss Buck is a regular attendant and says the group meetings are of great value to those attending.

MESSRS. COX and Ireland of the program committee representing the presidents and secretaries of the group organizations are entitled to great credit for their work.

SOME of the regulars who accompanied the Rainbow party were R. E. Gamble of the Drovers National; W. H. Monroe, First National; George A. Jackson, Continental; C. B. Hazlewood, Union Trust; T. E. Nowcomer, Fort Dearborn; L. L. Hobbs, Live Stock Exchange National; Charles H. Fox, Chicago Savings Bank and Trust; E. D. McCullough of the National City, and W. F. Van Buskirk of the Standard Trust and Savings.

ALL the boys had special badges. One read "Wm 'Goodroads' Edens". The Rainbows are for George Woodruff for chairman of the council this year and for Edens in 1914.

SOMETHING would be doing most of the time with such a succession as Aisthorpe, Woodruff and Edens occupying the big chair.

CANADA FAVORS AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION

The Dominion government has asked the provincial governments to submit plans for spending ten millions for agricultural education.

"BLUE SKY LAW" ATTACKED

Alleging that the "Blue Sky Law," enacted by the last legislature, intended to govern the operations of stock-promoting concerns in Arkansas, is invalid on the ground that it was not legally passed, the Mechanics Building and Loan Company of Little Rock has filed a mandamus suit against State Auditor Cathout to compel him to issue a certificate of authority to the plaintiff company, without requiring it to file a $20,000 bond. It is alleged the bill, after passing the senate, was amended in the house, but that the records do not show in the senate that the amended measure ever passed that body.

GROUP TWO, INDIANA

Group Two, Indiana Bankers Association, held its annual meeting in La Porte June 11th. Address of welcome was delivered by Admiral R. R. Ingersoll. After the report of Secretary Frank J. Pitner, cashier of the First National Bank of the State of Indiana, La Porte, Col. J. L. McCulloch, president of the Indiana Bankers Association, delivered an address on "Our Association" and was followed by a talk by Prof. Abram Piatt Andrew and one on Indiana agriculture and country life by the Hon. D. F. Maish, president Indiana Federation of Agricultural Associations, Frankfort. Secretary Andrew Smith of the Hoosier association talked on new banking laws for Indiana.

Luncheon was served at 1:30 on the porches of the La Porte Country Club, followed by an automobile tour of the city and the surrounding country.

BANKS SHOW UP WELL

The call of the comptroller this week for statements of condition of national banks found these institutions in both Chicago and New York in a stronger position so far as their surplus reserves are concerned, than at this time in any of the last ten years, with the exception of 1908 and 1911. Because of the curtailment of loans this spring on account of falling off in cash holdings, the surplus now is the largest of any time in sixteen months.

ILLINOIS VOTES GOOD ROADS MONEY

Springfield, Ill., June 11th.—Appropriations for state roads, to make effective the good roads bill in the event that the bill becomes a law, were taken up by the house to-day. One bill appripriates $300,000 annually from the general revenue fund and another, yet to be placed on its passage, appropriates $400,000 out of the automobile license fund. The first of these two bills was passed, 120 yeas to 5 nays.

DISAPPROVES PACIFIC'S DISSOLUTION PLAN

Washington, D. C., June 9th.—Attorney-General McReynolds disapproves both of the two latest plans for the dissolution of the Union Pacific merger which a few days ago were submitted by the Union Pacific railroad to the United States court at St. Paul.

VOLUME XXXIV | CHICAGO, JUNE 14, 1913 | NUMBER 24

Cornelius A. Pugsley at New York Convention

President of the Empire State bankers at Ottawa speaks of progress and development of North America and of the existent amity between this country and Canada. Tells of necessity for currency reform in U. S.

The New York State Bankers Association has gathered within the gates of this beautiful city to celebrate upon Canadian soil, and with our Canadian friends, a century of peace among the English-speaking peoples, a century of marvelous achievement both for the Dominion of Canada and the United States.

When I look upon this mighty continent, which in a few hundred years has had such wondrous development; when I behold its magnificent cities, its fertile plains and valleys, its mountains even yielding their treasure, its civilization equal to, if not surpassing, that of any other section of the globe, it seems to me that in the long ago some beautiful goddess of this Western Hemisphere must have breathed forth a prayer in the words of the poet:

"Bring me men to match my mountains,
Bring me men to match my plains,
Men with empires in their purpose,
And new eras in their brains;
Pioneers to clear thought's marshland,
And to cleanse old error's fen,
Bring me men to match my mountains.
Bring me men."

The prayer was answered, the men and the women came. They builded their cities, they developed a continent, they united with bands of steel the Atlantic and Pacific, and westward the course of civilization took its way with the same resistless force and the same refining influence as, centering in Asia four thousand years ago, civilization passed onward and westward to Greece, and sweeping over Europe could not be held in check by the turbulent waves of the Atlantic.

One of our famous ex-presidents, Mr. Roosevelt, at a great suffragist meeting in New York city, recently said, "Civilization is now slowly creeping from the West." Whatever our views of the progress or status of civilization, or of the direction it now is tending, East or West, how true it is that as both Canada and the United States have in the past needed men of courage and of brain to meet national issues, to develop national policies and fulfill national destinies, so will we need them in the issues of to-day and of the future. Well did Edmund Burke say, "Big empire and little men go ill together."

It is a splendid, it is an ideal civilization which has enabled two great nations, with far the longest unscientific boundary in the world dividing them, to dwell together for a century in peace. And what a boundary line! Formed by mountains, of which it might be said in the words of the English poet, Sir Walter Scott:

"Mountains that like giants stand
To sentinel enchanted land";

by vast plains and prairies, by great inland seas, by the rapids of the mighty Niagara and by the silver waters of the St. Lawrence as it wends its way to the sea through its thousands of islands so marvelously beautiful and picturesque! With no frowning forts or military patrol in all its length of over four thousand miles, with no navies upon its inland seas, it shows forth a beautiful relationship between nations which might well be emulated by all the world.

One of the delightful memories of my life is that of a day when I stood upon the summit of the White Pass in Alaska and beheld the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes waving side by side.

The close neighborliness and friendship engendered by this century of peace and good will has "thriven and ripened in vast trade, in common prosperity and in growing esteem." We rejoice to-day in the bonds of peace, in the intercommunication and community of interest and in the strongest of all ties, a common language, that binds together the Dominion of Canada and the United States. We rejoice that for virtually one hundred years there has been peace between the United States and the British Empire. Although differences have arisen to disturb the friendly relations between the two countries, in every case "only common sense has been required," to use Mr. Gladstone's famous phrase, to adjust or solve those differences.

We believe that the century of peace that has passed is but the forerunner of other centuries of peace, amity and good will which shall cement together still more closely the English-speaking peoples and, may we not hope, the whole civilized world.

Great economic, social and international problems confront Canada and the United States. Every thoughtful citizen of both countries, as he seeks to vision the future, must realize that the Pacific is destined to be the theater of world events. As the Mediterranean was in the centuries gone by, and as the Atlantic has become, the center of the world's commerce and civilization, may we not believe that in the future mighty forces of commerce and civilization shall center in the Pacific. May we not hope that Anglo-Saxon brawn and brain, Anglo-Saxon courage, Anglo-Saxon liberality and realization of the common brotherhood of man will then and there play an important part? Well did a Tokio editor recently say, "the patriotism and loyalty of Japan should join forces with the liberality of America. By this means the Pacific would nobly justify its name." May we have "An international mind to understand,

An international heart to feel."

Within the boundaries of our great countries great railway systems demand just and equitable consideration, if they are to meet the requirements of a rapidly developing continent. Capital and labor must join forces for the public weal. Every legitimate enterprise and industry, honestly conducted, should receive the sustaining influence of our governments, not their condemnation. Canada is to be congratulated upon an admirable currency system, while in the United States currency reform is a question of vital import now waiting and pressing for solution.

A sound, stable and responsive currency is one of the great bulwarks of national glory, greatness and power, and one of inestimable value to its business interests. It is the life-blood of a nation's commerce and prosperity, It concerns so closely not only the banker, but the manufacturer, the merchant, the farmer, the wage earner and all classes of our citizens, that no measure should be enacted into law unless it shall be the expression and the result of the most painstaking study, calm deliberation and the mature judgment of men qualified and equipped to deal with so great a financial and economic problem. I believe that any measure or measures considered by our present congress should receive intelligent thought, study and discussion by men of all political parties if we are to evolve an ideal currency system. Currency reform should rise above political or party expediency. It should not be made the football of politics. I believe that the financial, commercial, and all other interests of the United States will consistently and conservatively press onward toward the attainment of a monetary system that shall command what the currency system of Canada commands, and which our own country in other particulars enjoys, the respect, the confidence and the admiration of the world.

In closing, I desire to express to the chairmen of the Groups, to our secretary, Mr. Henry, to our treasurer, Mr. Schenck, and to the chairmen and members of our various committees, my appreciation of their loyal and splendid service in the interests of this association during the past year.

CHICAGO NATIONALS BUILD UP CASH

It is shown conclusively by their answer to the call of June 4th that the Chicago Nationals without exception have been building up cash resources. With the contraction of loans came a material improvement in reserves. Banks at other points show similar results. The loan decreases were by the largest banks. The Continental, First National, and Corn Exchange showed relatively about the same amount of contraction, although the Corn Exchange led in both amount and percentage.

In cash resources the First National showed the largest gain, with about $3,000,000. The Corn Exchange was up $2,100,000. The Continental-Commercial increased its resources about $800,000. These figures compare with those of April 4th, the last previous call.

In the matter of deposits the First National held steady around $115,500,000. The Continental and Commercial was down to $175,000,000. The Corn Exchange decreased $2,200,000. The smaller banks made irregular exhibits in loans, deposits, and cash resources, being up in one department and down in another. Considering the public tendency to curtail commitments the showing in all the banks, large and small, is one of strength.

Compared with June 14, 1912, the date corresponding most nearly with the call of June 4th, there is shown a decrease in deposits of $16,771,544, or 3.43 per cent, and a decrease in loans of $9,716,234, or 2.85 per cent, while cash resources are down $6,618,209, or 3.48 per cent.

While figures indicate the national institutions are preparing in a way for autumn demands, there is nothing violent in the changes that have been effected since last April. At that time the banks were fairly well expanded.

WHY WE NEED BANK SUPERVISION

John Worthington, president and principal owner of the American Bank of Chicago, a private institution at 117 North Dearborn Street, must defend himself against the charge of operating a confidence game. An indictment was returned by last month's grand jury, but the news did not become public until this week.

The complaining witness is Jules F. Koelling of 3842 North Hoyne Avenue, and from his testimony it is believed Worthington was pursuing methods similar to those which landed him in Sing Sing prison some years ago for a four-year term.

On May 1, 1911, when he opened his private bank, which he sometimes refers to as the "American Banking Association," Worthington advertised himself to be worth $800,000. and he says he has been increasing this fortune ever since, despite the fact in September of that year Detective Robert Miller of Kansas City sought to arrest him on a fugitive warrant. Worthington hastened to Kansas City and gave bond. The fugitive warrant was based on the alleged issue of fraudulent notes. Worthington gave bond. His career has been rather stormy as between the courts and his depositors and others.

WANTS RAILROAD RECEIVERS CURBED

Washington, D. C., June 12th.—Legislation to protect the stockholders of railroads from the financial jugglery of receiverships is proposed in a second resolution dealing with the Frisco system failure, which Representative Hinebaugh offered in the house on Tuesday.

The resolution Mr. Hinebaugh offered calls for a special investigation of the Frisco affair by a select committee of nine members, who also are charged to frame legislation to reform the evils of railroad receiverships.

The resolution directs the committee "to report a bill providing for a simple and comprehensive plan of reorganization of insolvent railroad corporations engaged in interstate commerce and that such bill shall provide for a plan of reorganization similar in scope to the companies' act of Great Britain, pursuant to which all plans of reorganization of insolvent railroad companies be placed under the direction and control of the courts, with the proviso that if the plan is just and receives the consent of three-fourths of each class of security holders it becomes binding upon all, but if the plan is unjust it may be defeated by any shareholder."

Another provision is that the committee frame a bill to place the issuance of stocks and bonds by interstate railroads under government supervision.

O'HARA KILLS BANK SUPERVISION

Springfield, Ill., June 10th.—Lieutenant Governor O'Hara was the chief factor to-day in cutting off the last chance of getting a private bank regulation bill passed at this session. Although twenty-nine senators—three more than a constitutional majority—voted in favor of allowing Senator Samuel A. Ettelson of Chicago to reintroduce his bill regulating private banks, and though Senator Walter Clyde Jones, chairman of the rules committee, brought in a special rule allowing such a bill to be reintroduced by a majority vote, the lieutenant governor ruled repeatedly against giving the bill a chance to come to a vote.

OMAHA BANKS DON'T DESIRE FEDERAL DEPOSITS

Only one bank in Omaha and South Omaha has announced that it will receive a share of the $10,000,000 apportionment of government funds which the treasury department will distribute among the banks of the country. The City National has asked for an additional $25,000, which will make it depository for $75,000.

Local bankers say there is no profit in the business and other institutions than the City National which have federal moneys on deposit do not desire an increase in the amount.

W. T. FENTON ON CONDITIONS

W. T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, said:

"While there is a tendency to slow down, trade is active and only around grain and stock exchangegs is dullness reported, and that is because speculative ventures are prohibited. The mercantile and manufacturing community is in excellent condition; President Wilson is causing no worry."

EAST ST. LOUIS BANK OPENS

The New Drovers National of East St. Louis opened for business on Monday of this week. The bank is at First Street and St. Clair Avenue, just outside the entrance of the National Stockyards. The bank expects to employ an interpreter and an effort will be made to obtain the accounts of workmen in the packing plants. It is said that the savings of most of these persons are kept hidden in their homes.

The capital stock of the new institution is $200,000. A. J. Williford, formerly of Nokomis, Ill., will be president; M. A. Bright and Thos. J. Landers, vice-presidents, and G. W. Doerr, cashier.

HANOVER NATIONAL OF NEW YORK CITY

Hanover National of New York City was established in 1851. It has capital stock of three millions and surplus and profits in excess of fourteen millions. The officers are: James M. Donald, chairman of the board; William Woodward, president; E. Hayward Ferry, Henry R. Carse, and Samuel Woolverton, vice-presidents; Elmer E. Whitaker, cashier; Wm. I. Lighthipe, Alexander D. Campbell, Charles H. Hampton, J. Niemann and William Donald, assistant cashiers.

NO SPOTLIGHT ON THIS

At the head of the list of those who subscribe to the doctrine of "the public be damned" write the name of young Mr. Barratt O'Hara.

It was that "friend of the poor working girl" who delivered the death blow to the measure bringing private banks under the reasonable supervision which state banks accept. Mr. O'Hara's heart throbs nobly in the spotlight—when wages are mentioned—but to protect wages saved by hard economy and thrift leaves Mr. O'Hara cold.

The measure of Mr. O'Hara is pretty well taken by this time.—Chicago Tribune.

Take Over Faribault Bank

St. Paul capitalists have bought the interests of the Chase family in the Chase State of Faribault, Minn., with capital increased from $25,000 to $50,000 and a surplus of $10,000. The new men are O. H. Schroeder, Otto Bremer, Herman Schmidt, E. J. Meilicke, H. E. Meilicke and Vice-President C. H. F. Schmidt of the American National. O. H. Schroeder has been made president and S. Fisch vice-president. Leo F. Shandorf will remain as cashier. The new directors are O. H. Schroeder, L. F. Shandorf, M. S. Fisch, H. E. Meilicke and Otto Bremer.

Doyle Heads Bank Commissioners

Edward H. Doyle, bank commissioner for Michigan, was elected president of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks at St. Paul. Other officers are Vice-Presidents B. L. The 1914 meeting will be at Atlantic City. The committee to arrange a conference on "Blue Sky" law legislation is A. L. Thorndike, Massachusetts; F. C. Williams, Vermont; J. A. Broderick, New York.

Resolutions requesting the comptroller of the currency to continue co-operation with the state banking departments were adopted. It has been the custom for some years for the comptroller to arrange meetings with groups of state examiners, but the new administration has shown a disposition to discontinue the meetings, which are regarded as important.

First District Bankers Elect

The First District Minnesota bankers at Albert Lea elected officers as follows: President, R. D. Sprague, Caledonia; vice-president, F. E. Cook, Rochester; secretary-treasurer, A. S. Kennedy, Plainview; executive committee, Lyle Hamlin, Spring Valley; C. A. Hubbard, Lake City; executive council, W. W. Dean, Adams.

Twin City Bankers at Anoka

Twin City bankers went to Anoka, eighteen miles, by special private car, Wednesday. They were guests of the new Minneapolis and Northern railway, the third suburban line. At Anoka they were entertained by the Commercial Club. At Coon Rapids they inspected the new Minneapolis General Electric Company (Byllesby) power-plant in the Mississippi river.

Seventh District Meeting

One hundred bankers met at Litchfield for the seventh district meeting of the Minnesota Bankers Association. President L. P. Moyer of Montevideo presided and Frank W. Murphy of the state fair board gave the results to date of the new West Central Development Association, which is introducing county agricultural superintendents. Secretary G. H. Richards of the bankers association closed the morning session. The author of the new Minnesota distance tariff law, Senator T. C. Cashman, Owatonna, discussed the law and the fact that it had been adjudged that the common law fits the case. Senator Peterson of Litchfield spoke on the law governing negotiable instruments. Other speakers were G. F. Orde, Minneapolis, who drove a party over by automobile; J. W. Wheeler of the Capital Trust and D. C. Armstrong, Albert Lea. At the dinner the speakers were W. A. Lancaster, Minneapolis; H. W. Parker, St. Paul, and L. O. Thorpe, Willmar.

Favorable Conditions in Northwest

"The stock market has ceased to be a barometer of business conditions," said E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National. "Business conditions in the Northwest are good. Reports are that the crop outlook is better than it has ever been at this time of year. With a good crop the Northwest will be able to pay its bills all right. The financial situation everywhere is somewhat strained. This is true in the foreign markets, and that money that has been invested in American securities has been withdrawn. Naturally the stock market has become weak. However, this country is in good condition at the present time and the Northwest is the best part of the country now."

Sees Good Prospects

Norman Hanson, president of the First State of Fertile, Minn., who is in Minneapolis arranging details for the construction of a new home for the bank, that will be one of the most up-to-date country bank buildings in Minnesota, is a believer, he said, in a year of Minnesota prosperity. "In the vicinity of Fertile, along the Northern Pacific line in Polk county, on the Great Northern line across Clearwater and Polk counties and over to Crookston, and on the Soo line up from the White Earth reservation to Thief River Falls, the country had rain, followed by good growing weather, and crops are coming along nicely. This condition is true of northern Minnesota as a whole. It looks like a good year for farmers and business men."

Northwest Notes

W. H. Clubine and others have arranged to start a bank at Winter, Wis., to be known as the First State. The capital is $10,000.

While Minnesota has $6,000,000 bonds of other states it cannot hold its own, and cannot now buy $275,000 state prison and educational fund certificates at 4½ and 5 per cent interest. The state investment board has only $103,000 and has applications for loans from school districts and municipalities for $1,500,000.

The First International State of Rosholt, N. D., has been organized with $10,000 capital. Incorporators are Emil Hostbjor, A. Kokenson, E. J. Clusgren, O. A. Bjork, Olof Oiseth of Crawford, Julius Rosholt, Minneapolis.

Lauritz Swenson, minister to Norway, is expected to return to Minneapolis, where he was vice-president of the Union State. He was once minister to Denmark and to Switzerland. Albert Schmedeman of Madison, Wis., a banker, is to succeed Mr. Swenson, who is a republican.

By C. C. Burford

The delegation of business men from the Chicago Association of Commerce, which has been making a tour of Illinois towns and cities within the past fortnight as a campaign of good fellowship, has been most royally entertained by bankers and business men in all communities visited. Each entertaining town sought to give the Chicago delegation the best time possible and many special entertainments and luncheons were served, while automobile rides to "show them the town" were planned in all cities visited.

The visit of the delegation of the Chicago Association of Commerce has been a source of inspiration to commercial organization officials in many Illinois towns and cities and the spirit of "I will" has been instilled into many ambitious business men. There is a wide possibility for the extension of commercial club activities in most of our minor cities and better towns and this field has as yet been scarcely worked. Peculiar conditions exist, of course, in every community which are usually offset by some advantage in natural resources or transportation facilities. With great advantages of oil, coal and transportation, and with a soil of marvelous fertility, there is every promise of greater growth by the wide-awake towns and cities of Illinois. Their growth means a corresponding development in the work of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Dan Norman, assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial National, and J. J. Arnold and Herman H. Heins of the First National were Chicago bankers with the party and they made hosts of friends among downstate bankers. Regarding the purpose of the trip, Herbert F. Miller, business manager of the Chicago Association of Commerce, said:

"In a way this tour is an innovation on the part of the commercial and industrial interests represented in our association. It signalizes the desire which Chicago has to do its part in wiping out the imaginary line which seems sometimes to divide the interests of the downstate business men from those of the Chicago business men. We are here to accomplish something toward promoting better acquaintanceship and a spirit of co-operation between the cities of Illinois and Chicago, and closer co-operation with business organizations similar to ours in the cities of Illinois. The established and primary policy of the Chicago Association of Commerce is to assist other communities in every possible way. We hope to learn while on this visit a great deal concerning the problems which confront other Illinois cities, and if we can help in solving these problems, it is our hope that you will call upon us for every aid that lies within our power. We feel confident when we have returned to Chicago it will be with a record of having done something of real, practical, mutual benefit to all the cities visited and to Chicago itself."

Group Two Entertained at Peoria

Group Two of the Illinois Bankers Association was entertained Wednesday, June 4th, in Peoria, "the convention city." Peoria enjoys a most enviable reputation as a host and hundreds of organizations, large and small, and of every varied nature possible, have met within the last two or three years in Peoria. The Peoria Association of Commerce is wide-awake all of the time and is bending every possible effort to make that city well-known to the business world, which it certainly is doing. Many Illinois bankers recall the pleasant convention of 1912, which was held in that city, as well as previous ones.

The morning session was held in the Association of Commerce rooms and at noon the bankers took special street cars for the Peoria Country Club, where luncheon was served and where the afternoon program was given. There were about 150 bankers present at the meeting. Group Two has a large membership, as out of 168 banks in the group, 165 are members of the Illinois Bankers Association. One of the popular speakers on the program was President A. F. Dawson of the First National of Davenport, Iowa, who addressed the group upon the subject, "Some Remarks upon Currency Reform." Messrs. T. E. Burkholder and James I. Ennis, both of Chicago who have spoken at most of the Illinois group meetings this year, were on the program, the former addressing the bankers upon "Methods of Accounting for Country Banks," and the latter upon the topic, "Essentials of the Negotiable Instrument Law."

R. W. Kempshell, president of the Central National of Peoria, welcomed the visiting bankers to the city and dwelt at some length upon the very efficient work of the city's Association of Commerce. Charles H. Ireland, president of the Washburn Bank of Washburn, responded and William C. White, president of the Illinois National, gave his report and also read the report of the treasurer, C. P. Covington, cashier of the Havana National of Havana, who was unable to be present. Officers were elected as President J. D. Phillips of the Illinois Bankers Association was present, as were several St. Louis bankers and also the special car of Chicago bankers who as "a lively bunch" have made a host of friends among the down-state bankers at various group meetings within the past few weeks.

W. A. Heath Sees Son Graduate

W. A. Heath, president of the Live Stock Exchange National of Chicago, attended this week the commencement exercises of his Alma Mater, the University of Illinois, and witnessed the graduation of his son, Nathaniel P. Heath. Both the elder and the younger Heaths are members of the Sigma Chi college fraternity and the young man finished the course in electrical engineering. W. A. Heath is quite at home about the campus, as he spent twenty years in the service of the Champaign National Bank and was for a number of years its cashier. He was at one time treasurer of the Athletic Association of the University of Illinois and aided in placing that association upon its present sound financial basis.

Bank of Fithian in New Home

The First Bank of Fithian, Vermilion county, was "at home" in its elegant new banking room Saturday evening, June 8th, and hundreds of friends and patrons called during the evening. The officers of the bank were busy during the evening explaining the new safe and vault to the public and the visitors were made welcome in the new bank. Refreshments were served and cigars were passed to the men, while music and flowers were amply provided.

Adjoining the bank is one of the most complete garages in eastern Illinois and the crowd overflowed into the room. The bank and garage are one story in height, neat and complete in every respect, and with a large mercantile room upon the north, which is also new, makes a most attractive business building for a small town.

C. B. DeLong, president of the bank and owner of the garage, has been in Fithian for twenty-seven years and has built up a large and successful business. He also is in the grain business and for almost thirty years has operated a grain elevator. He also is engaged in selling farm implements and buggies and in handling fire and life insurance. The consolidation of a bank, garage, grain elevator, implement store and insurance office into one business naturally will make the ordinary city banker wonder, but many country bankers are engaged in widely different lines of business, which are, of course, impossible to the city banker. Many city bankers naturally will point out objections of business policy to such a plan as above outlined, but there are many cases of a similar nature in this and other states, where men who know country conditions and the methods of dealing with country people can, in some cases, build up a large business while the city bankers are, upon the contrary, living on a salaried basis. Mr. DeLong, with almost thirty years of experience in the one small town, has established a wide friendship and confidence, which was evidenced when the bank reception was held.

O. B. Wysong, the cashier, is another "live wire" in a small town. He is county treasurer of Virmilion county and is a most efficient county officer. He also is secretary and treasurer of the Peoria Life Insurance Company and is doing much to place that company upon a business basis. W. F. Spear is the assistant cashier.

This case is commented upon at some length because it affords interest in showing the possibilities of independent business life in the small towns where living expenses are at a minimum and where the opportunities, for some men, of making money are wide. Not every man, of course, could duplicate this example, as many would run into failure. Many bankers would object to the combination of a bank and grain elevator and with a garage added the business policy would be questioned by many. However, Messrs. DeLong and Wysong are men of integrity, ability and knowledge of country conditions and are able to handle successfully large enterprises. They merit the wide confidence which they enjoy. The bank's correspondents are the Corn Exchange National of Chicago and the First National of Danville.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

The time of the Wisconsin bankers participating in the annual convention aboard boat this year will be well filled during the three days of the trip, June 21st-24th, according to the preliminary program issued by Secretary George D. Bartlett of the W. B. A. this week. The executive council will meet at association headquarters, 307 Pabst building, Saturday, June 21st, previous to going aboard to take up proposed amendments to the constitution. But with this single exception all business of the meeting will be transacted aboard. The steamer will leave the dock adjoining the Wisconsin National building on Wisconsin Street at 9:30 Saturday morning. Sunday will be given over to religious services conducted by Rev. Paul B. Jenkins, who will speak on "The Great Lakes and the Welfare of the West." Landing will be made at Mackinack Island Sunday afternoon for two hours, the boat proceeding on to Sault Ste. Marie, where it is planned to arrive early Monday afternoon. The next stopping point, Sturgeon Bay, will be reached Tuesday morning, where the bankers will inspect the orchard belt of the state. The boat will dock at Milwaukee Tuesday night. Reservations for practically the entire capacity of the boat already have been made, a large percentage being made for the ladies.

Resume Work on First National Building

Construction work on the new First National Bank building was resumed Monday morning after an interruption of seven weeks, during which all work was stopped as the result of a strike arising over the open shop policy of the Sterling Engineering Company, which held the contract for the foundation and masonry, the largest individual contract in the building. The contract has been taken over by the Lindquist & Ilsley Construction Company of Chicago, with a clause stipulating union labor. There were 200 men employed on the building when the sympathetic strike was declared and all walked out, including iron workers, masons, electricians, plumbers, hoisting engineers, and tile layers.

Alleged Forgers Arrested

Three men accused of forgery were arrested and one convicted in Milwaukee this week. Richard P. Dickson, sentenced to Waupun for eighten months, made a unique address to fellow inmates of the county jail before he was taken to the state institution. "Whatever you do, leave bad checks alone," said Dickson. "I got $200 out of it and also eighteen months." The "evangelist" entered upon his term Tuesday.

Sends in False Alarm

The elaborate burglar alarm system in the new Marshall & Ilsley Bank misbehaved Monday and a patrol wagon full of patrolmen and plain clothes men responded with ardor from the central police station. Cashier John H. Puelicher arose at the first symptom of a "pinch," and wondered what law had been violated in the peaceful conduct of the bank's affairs. Investigation revealed that one of the tellers had accidentally pushed one of the numerous buttons operating the alarm device surrounding the vault.

Wisconsin Banks Get Federal Funds

Would Establish Rural Credit Association

The O'Connor land mortgage bill, now before the state assembly, proposes to establish in Wisconsin rural credit associations similar to the Landschaftbanker or the Raiffausenkassen in Germany. It outlines an association of men whose working capital the members will furnish at the outset, the capital to be converted later into forest land first mortgage

The Bankers Trust has increased its capital stock from $1,250,000 to $2,500,000. Most of the increase is a bonus received on the extension of a railroad it financed in Texas. The increase was authorized by stockholders about a month ago.

E. M. Hutchins has been appointed assistant publicity manager of the Mississippi Valley Trust. He has been connected with the trust company for about eleven years, spending the greater part of this time in the real estate department.

Continental Trust Opens Doors

The Continental Trust formally opened its doors recently. It is capitalized at $100,000 and is chartered to do a general banking, real estate and trust company business. J. D. Buchananne is president and Van L. Runyan is secretary and treasurer.

East St. Louis Bank Opens

The Drovers National of East St. Louis opened formally on Monday morning. Many commission men are stockholders in this new institution and it is probable that an interpreter will be employed, in this way making a strong bid for savings accounts from workmen in the packing plant. The Drovers National is capitalized at $200,000. A. J. Williford, formerly a Nokomis banker, is president; M. A. Bright and Tos. G. Landers, vice-presidents, and G. W. Doerr, cashier.

Clearing House Elects

At the annual meeting of the St. Joseph Clearing House Association E. H. Zimmerman, cashier of the Tootle-Lemon National, was named as president; W. S. McLucas, vice-president of the First National, vice-president; and W. A. P. McDonald, secretary and manager. Mr. McDonald has served six years as secretary and four years as manager of the association.

May Contest New Law

Among the laws which will become effective June 23d are the "Blue Sky" law and the act requiring all corporations to register annually with the secretary of state and pay a registry fee of $5. The "Blue Sky" law invests the state bank commissioner with power to regulate the issue and sale of stocks or bonds by investment companies, while the other gives to the secretary of state power to inquire into the inside affairs of corporations newly chartered. The bank commissioner is given power by the "Blue Sky" law to pass upon the solvency of a proposed investment company. It can sell neither stock nor bonds nor transact any business until permission is obtained. The corporation registration act gives to the secretary of state power to revoke the license of any corporation which fails to register annually and pay the $5 fee. This act requires the company to report intimate details of its business. For this reason the act is likely to be attacked in the courts. The question has been raised by Senator Carter that this bill was not regularly passed by the senate, and it was protested by Senators Greene and Carter before it was signed by the lieutenant-governor. It authorizes the appointment of an assistant supervisor of corporations at a salary of $2,400 a year. The act makes the secretary of state ex officio supervisor of corporations.

Elected Cashier of Leeton Bank

Joseph O. Reynolds has been chosen to take the place of H. F. Finks, who recently resigned as cashier of the Farmers Bank of Leeton, and Henley Stacy, Sr., was chosen assistant cashier, the change to take place June 1st.

Trust Company to Take Over Defunct Bank

The affairs of the defunct Pemiscot County Bank, Caruthersville, Mo., which closed its doors last Wednesday, when the cashier, A. C. Tindle, was shown to be approximately $204,000 short, will be adjusted without loss to stockholders or depositors. There will be no criminal prosecution. The Citizens Trust Company has been organized to take over the affairs of the defunct bank. The capital is $100,000, all of which is subscribed. Frank Cunningham is president of the new institution. It opened for business in the building formerly occupied by the Pemiscot County Bank on Wednesday. Tindle has turned over to the bank examiners about $200,000 of his real and personal property, and this, it is thought, will be enough to cover the shortage. There appears to be no ill-feeling against him or any of his associates. The Pemiscot County Bank had a capital and surplus of over $100,000 and was one of the oldest and richest institutions in this part of the state. It did an enormous business with planters and business men. It also was a county depository and carried over $400,000 of the county's funds, which are secured. The last report showed it to be in fine condition. The officers of the defunct institution were: J. A. Cunningham, president; Frank Cunningham, vice-president, and W. H. Johnson, assistant cashier.

KILLING LEGISLATION IN COMMITTEE

Hundreds of desirable bills have been killed in committee in every state legislature and in congress. It is a favorite method at Springfield and the Ettelson bill, mildly regulative of private banks, with a view solely to protecting the careless depositor, is a victim in point. It is an old system, a favorite ally of the jackpot. Once "convince" Col. Jackpot that a certain bill is "undesirable" and he plans with his willing confederates to bury it in committee. If there is any embarrassment to the committee when a report is demanded, a further subterfuge is employed. The committee sends it to a subcommittee for deeper burial. The subcommittee members are known as "The Embalmers and Undertakers Union." Up to date this is the story of the Ettelson bill to put private banks under state supervision in Illinois.

In England none but private bills are sent to committees. Bills for the general welfare are never sent. This is one point where parliament scores in effectiveness upon congress and upon the state legislatures.

James Bryce, the great English commoner, until recently ambassador to the United States, in his work, "The American Commonwealth," published in 1889, goes exhaustively into the "American lobby." He points out that under our legislative methods either a public or private bill, to secure a fair chance of passing, must receive a favorable report from the committees to which it is referred. In England interests involved in private bills—the only kind referred to committees by the house of commons—are represented by "professional agents and barristers."

Mr. Bryce also brings out a fact which has been emphasized in the present congressional investigation, that the most dangerous kind of lobbyists are ex-members, who know how things are to be managed." The Kenyon bill recognizes this evil and in it ex-members are to be denied the floor privileges, now so much abused. It might give some relief if all lobbyists should be compelled to register and schedule the interests employing them. Also it might help further if none but "private bills" were sent to committees. At least it would put a decided crimp in jackpot methods of killing off legislation in committee rooms.

BANKING REFORM ESSENTIALS

Chairman Carter Glass of the house subcommittee on banking and currency has given much of his time for the past two years to study of the problems involved in procuring banking and currency reform for the country. As a result of his investigation and of the countless suggestions made by other students, Chairman Glass, in his own mind, has decided convictions as to the following four essentials:

1. Provision for rediscounts or sale of commercial paper in a way and to an extent that will enable banks to get fluid resources whenever they or their customers may require.
2. The issue of a sound, safe and elastic paper currency ultimately taking the place of the present bond-secured bank notes.
3. Arrangements for depositing with the banks of the country the current funds of the government.
4. More stringent oversight and inspection of national banks.

Bankers will note the order of importance attached to the various provisions. He recognizes that almost every worker in the field has his own "favorite plan" and this is one of the chief causes of delay. Conferences and hearings only aggravate the differences, hence the caucus method of elimination, so effective in the tariff measure, has been adopted. Mr. Glass is concerned also to protect the values of the bonds which the national banks were "forced to buy" at high prices and which, if denuded of special value, would cause a capital loss to many banks.

TO RESTRICT ORGANIZATION OF SMALL BANKS

Suburbs of big cities in future will be unable to organize small national banks with a capital of $25,000 or $50,000. Attorney-General McReynolds has rendered an opinion to the treasury department holding that it is not lawful under the national bank act to consider suburbs as separate places from the cities within whose corporate boundaries they lie and that if a city has a population of more than 50,000 people the minimum capital for its national banks whether in the city proper or in the suburbs must be $200,000.

This will result in a complete reversal of the policy of the government, and, it is stated, likely will cause suburban towns of big cities to organize only state banks. The question arose over applications for the organization of three national banks of $25,000 capital in the suburbs of Chicago.

The law provides that $25,000 banks may be organized in "places" of less than 3,000 population; $50,000 in places less than 6,000; $100,000 in places less than 50,000, and $200,000 in places of more than 50,000 population. It is not expected that the treasury department will make the opinion retroactive and disturb the charters of established institutions.

INCREASING NUMBER OF AGRICULTURAL GRADUATES

A great increase in the enrollment has marked the progress of the College of Agriculture of the University of Illinois during the past few years. In 1895-96 there was a total enrollment of 14 students; in 1900-01, 159 students; in 1909-10, 660 students, and in the present year, 1912-13, there was a total number of 905.

The College of Agriculture is graduating an ever increasing number of men. The larger percentage of these graduates are now engaged in practical agriculture. This is shown by statistics being gathered at the present time. Out of ninety-three men graduating this year, forty-four expect to go into actual farming operations; ten into experimental work at the University of Illinois; ten expect to teach; eleven will do graduate work; five are going to work for large implement companies, and the rest will be employed in work more or less connected with agriculture.

In the general college 681 degrees were conferred.

BANKERS RETURN FROM PANAMA

The Texas bankers who made a trip to Panama recently have returned and were delighted with their excursion. Hoskins Foster, who had charge of the bankers, said:

"The party being composed of financial men, naturally the business side of the canal and country was made the object of inquiry and investigation. We found that Panama imports $10,000,000 in products annually, while her exports are only $3,000,000. At present the banana and other tropical fruit trade is the chief export commodity. However, there are opportunities for developing both the imports and exports. That section of Central America is in the spotlight now and thousands of people are pouring into the zone.

"Our party boosted Galveston and we met with many happy surprises and were extended courtesies not only by the United Fruit Company, but the canal officials, including Colonel Goethals. The congressional delegation was in the zone making an inspection and a part of the membership returned with us. They are putting on the finishing touches and expect to let water into the canal next October or November, when the first ship will pass from ocean to ocean. I believe Galveston will not only reap great benefits in the Latin-American countries, but will be enabled to extend her arm of commerce across the Pacific and pluck a rich portion of the Oriental trade, which now enters this country mainly through San Francisco and Seattle. After all, it is more a matter of going after the business than anything else, allowing for natural advantages and position, both of which we have."

Defects in National Bank Act and Proposed Amendment

By C. H. CHURCH, Muncie, Ind.

Today the American people are living in a remarkable period of commercial and business prosperity with an abundance of everything essential to future progress, provided the financial problem is quickly and permanently solved. They have adopted and are practicing financial methods which had best be preserved and safeguarded, as they are an important factor in the business world.

This refers to the exchange of credits with the twenty-five thousand financial institutions of this country and is the practical basis of our trade and commerce requirements; therefore, this is the most essential part of the bankers' service to the public and supplies at least twenty-five billions of the twenty-nine billions of deposits, shown by our financial institutions, as held in trust to the credit of the American people.

That this trust may be safely perpetuated should be the first aim of all financial legislation, yet more than two-thirds of this enormous sum is held under state charters and practically out of reach of national legislation.

Here is the situation we are confronted with. Some seventeen thousand state financial institutions have on deposit of the trust fund mentioned twice the amount of the national banks. They are sound, well established and serving the public along the same lines as the nationals, apparently with satisfaction, the people generally, evidently, having equal confidence in their system and state supervision.

Here is positive evidence of lost prestige, as the word "National" was formerly very popular and valuable to the banking business, but the several states having financial laws practically uniform and with liberal features, it must be plainly evident their system is to-day in popular favor.

These conditions exist and should be considered as a prominent factor in future monetary legislation, as it would be desirable to have all the banks transacting business under one system, preferably the national control and supervision, which is possible to accomplish by the adoption of a bank act having equally as liberal provisions. We can all agree on the many advantages to this country by all using one financial system, and the development of the present situation has resulted from neglect to modify materially or change the national laws for a period of fifty years, during which time the several states have been active along this line and presented banking laws with liberal provisions conforming to the desires and methods of the people giving satisfactory results, as indicated by their popularity and general use by the people, making it possibly probable that unless a favorable banking act is enacted there may be a rapid exodus from the national to what seems a more popular system.

It is claimed the state laws on banking are unscientific. However that may be, it seems many of the defects of our national system have been discovered and quietly abandoned. For instance, our mythical reserve proposition received no recognition from the 17,000 state banks excepting their published statements show reserves practically equal to the nationals and are under full control of the banks on the theory that if competent to care for 85 per cent of their deposits they are equally competent to care for the so-called 15 per cent reserve.

The facts are that banking, as now developed and practiced, is a plain business proposition, depending principally on a general knowledge of credits, that the resources of the bank may be kept sound, which is essential to success.

There is nothing intricate requiring scientific methods unless the proposed plan of the financial scientist is adopted, to direct and concentrate the funds of interior banks to a central bank or several regional banks under

NEW YORK CONVENTION

The twentieth annual convention of the New York Bankers Association was held on Thursday and Friday of this week at Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, the city which has been aptly characterized as "Ottawa, the Beautiful." The invitation to meet at the Dominion capital came from the bankers of Ottawa, the civic authorities and the Dominion government. The occasion was the celebration of one hundred years of peace between the English-speaking peoples.

An attractive program of prominent American and Canadian speakers was provided for the gatherings. This included such well-known names as James J. Hill, Congressman Andrew Jackson Montague, ex-governor of Virginia; the Hon. George E. Roberts, director of the mint, U. S. treasury, Washington, D. C.; George Grafton Wilson, Ph. D., professor of international law at Harvard; Senator Robert L. Owen, chairman of the finance committee of the senate at Washington; Prof. L. H. Bailey, director of the New York State School of Agriculture at Cornell; Congressman Lemuel P. Badgett, chairman of the naval affairs committee, Washington, and the Hon. R. Lemieux. The mornings of June 12th and 13th were devoted to the business sessions of the convention.

A debate was arranged for between New York and Syracuse Chapters of the American Institute of Banking, the subject being: "Resolved, That It Is for the Best Interests of the State of New York that Some New Form of Financial Institution Be Established in Order to Properly Finance the Business of Agriculture in Said State." The affirmative was taken by New York Chapter, whose team was composed of Messrs. E. G. McWilliam and Raymond B. Cox. The debaters for Syracuse were A. W. Loasby and W. H. Kniffin.

The Canadian bankers outlined a program of entertainment both individual and unique. It provided for the entertainment of delegates and guests, both ladies and gentlemen, during the entire period when the association was not in business session.

The first day there was a trip for the ladies to the mint and parliament buildings; "Shanty" lunch at 1:30 and banquet at the "Chateau" in the evening. The "Shanty" lunch or "lumbermen's" picnic at Rockcliffe Park proved a novel and interesting experience to the delegates. They were treated to real woods cooking on this occasion and had offered them, among other things, some of the famous "Shanty" beans cooked in the sand, together with bread baked in the same manner, and other delicacies which are peculiar to life in the woods. They saw the camps of lumbermen and the various processes by which logs are floated to market, including expert exhibition of log rolling and driving; and the work of the lumbermen themselves, using bark canoes in daring exhibitions in the water.

The second day, the morning of the 13th, the ladies were taken to the Victoria Museum; there was a garden party in the afternoon and a reception and dance in the evening.

The banquet on the evening of the 12th was the notable event of the convention. Invitations were issued by the Dominion government and many notables were included among those present.

The reception and dance planned for the evening of the 13th was held in the ballroom of the Chateau Laurier.

Those interested in fishing and camping were invited to visit Algonquin National Park, with its immense area of two million acres of wholly wild land. The park is situated 169 miles west of Ottawa. It is notable for its high altitude, pure air, unspoiled forest, beautiful lakes, splendid fishing, and much wild game and hotel and camp life. Attention was directed to "Nomingan Camp," the new camp hotel in the park, on Smoke Lake. There is a large central lodge or meeting place, and nearby a series of individual log cabins built of cedar logs, comfortably furnished and equipped with modern conveniences, with bathrooms and hot and cold water.

Other Speakers

The Hon. George E. Roberts, director of the mint, Washington, talked on "Common Interests," telling of the advantages of peace to any nation.

Prof. George Grafton Wilson, Ph. D., professor of international law at Harvard, told of some recent international readjustments.

BANKERS TRUST COMPANY

Bankers Trust Company of New York has capital of ten millions; surplus and profits in excess of $16,257,000 and deposits of approximately 124 millions.

The officers are as follows: E. C. Converse, president; B. Strong, Jr., W. C. Poillon, D. E. Pomeroy, W. N. Duane, F. I. Kent, Harold B. Thorne and F. N. B. Close, vice-presidents; Geo. G. Thompson, secretary; Geo. Benton, treasurer; Guy Richards, assistant secretary; H. W. Donovan, assistant treasurer; Bethune W. Jones and H. F. Wilson, Jr., assistant secretaries; R. H. Giles, Perry D. Bogue and H. N. Dunham, assistant treasurers; I. Michaels, trust officer.

WOMAN BANKER RESIGNS

Miss Henrietta M. Schoech, assistant cashier of the Tri-City Bank at Madison, has resigned her position with that institution, after having been connected with the bank for six years. She sailed from New York on June 12th for an extended tour of Europe.

GOOD ROADS BILL PASSED

The good roads bill was passed by the house at Springfield on Thursday of last week by a vote of 111 to 33. It has not been acted upon by the senate. The bill provides for a state highway commission to be appointed by the governor and provides for a system of state aid for the building of roads by counties. The automobile license fund, with additional appropriations, is to be used for the roads.

E. L. Lane caused the arrest of a "bank" robber at his home near Marshalltown. He noticed a man leaving the house and acting suspiciously. He summoned an officer and the fellow when arrested was found to have with him two banks belonging to the children. The contents totaled $1.88.

Des Moines, June 12th.—Perhaps the famous Iowa "Blue Sky" law may be invalid after all. This piece of legislation has been having an up-down time of it since it was passed in the closing session of the Iowa legislature and the latest is the discovery that it was improperly enrolled. It seems that when the bill was passed some of the proposed sections were knocked out by amendment. Now it develops that in enrolling the bill these knocked-out sections were included. Whether this is a serious defect is a question that the attorney-general's office has not yet answered. Friends of the bill say it will make no difference, while those bent upon the destruction of the measure say that the enrollment of the killed sections destroys the validity of the act. It is probable that when the law takes effect, the first of July, a test case will be started, and at that time the enrollment proposition will be taken under consideration.

Davenport Bankers Have Outing

The Davenport bankers held their annual outing a few days ago with the most satisfactory results yet recorded. There were 150 present and the evening was a delightful one. The party chartered the Morning Star and sailed out of harbor at 4 o'clock. An hour later the bankers were holding down the bleachers at Linwood while the single and married men played a game of baseball, which the latter won by a score of 5 to 3. It was a mighty struggle and had not Dick Lane knocked a two-bagger with the bases full the score might have been different. The supper which followed the game was a most enjoyable affair and the bankers reached Davenport shortly after 10 o'clock. The Davenport bankers are a live delegation. The committee on arrangements was composed of Worral Dow, George Gensley and John Misfeldt.

Sees Relief in Money Situation

Frank B. Yetter, cashier of the Iowa National at Davenport and one of the best-known financiers in Iowa, opines that three weeks or a month will see a relief in the money market. That the latter has been tight since the first of March is well known. Mr. Yetter believes that farm and crop conditions are largely responsible for this situation. He reasons that farmers this spring were not offered the prices for their corn that they anticipated, consequently they did not sell it. Instead of having money to deposit in the banks they have the grain in the crib. Furthermore in many instances, the farmers bought cattle to which to feed the corn. In the country districts the money for the cattle was borrowed from the banks, which in turn drew upon the city institutions. However, the outlook for small grain and hay is very good and on this account the farmers, Mr. Yetter believes, will soon unload their corn. The feeders of cattle will unload also and by the first of July money should be rolling back into the banks. Many Iowans will be pleased to read this optimistic opinion from Cashier Yetter.

Looks for Adoption of "Blue Sky" Laws

A. O. Wolever of the Iowa state insurance department attended the meeting of commissioners at St. Paul as Iowa's representative. Mr. Wolever is confident that other states are going to adopt "Blue Sky" laws. He says also that congress will be asked to enact a general statute which will include all states, thus making it impossible for "Blue Sky" agents, when driven out of one state, to go across the line into another state to peddle wildcat stocks and paper of little value.

Iowa Notes

Two men, well-known in Iowa politics, are being talked of as successor to State Auditor Bleakly, whose term expires next year and who will not be a candidate for re-election. Joe Byrnes, head deputy under Bleakly, is one of the prospectives, and C. B. Ellis, chief clerk in the state banking department, is the other. Both are good men and favorably known throughout the state.

Charles R. Brenton, cashier of the Bank of Dallas Center, is an alive and alert agricultural booster. Mr. Brenton recently acted as host to a party of specialists from Ames College. He took them to see a half dozen Dallas county farms and got expert opinions as to how to improve them, thus conducting a school of education for the farmers of that prosperous county.

G. W. Marquardt, pioneer Des Moines banker and founder of the institution which formerly was known as the Marquardt Savings, has been suing S. G. Sedgewick, an inventor from Indianola, for $2,620. Sedgewick is an inventor and Marquardt claims he was inveigled into taking stock in a company organized to exploit the invention and declared by Marquardt to have been of little value.

Visiting bankers in Des Moines have been few since the big convention. Among those noted were President John McCarley of the First National, Williams; President J. W. Likens, Truro Savings; President T. T. Henryson, First National, Story City; President R. F. Graeber, Sheldon Savings; Cashier H. L. Hackthorne, Exchange State of Stuart;

President S. S. Dilenbeck, Citizens State of Perry; Assistant Cashier W. F. Busley, Farmers and Merchants, Creston; Vice-President J. C. O'Malley and Cashier E. D. Carter, Peoples National, Perry; Cashier Sumner Davis, Farmers at Carlisle; Assistant Cashier R. F. Smith, Dundee Savings; Cashier R. D. Aitchison, First National, Colfax; President L. O. Shaffer, Citizens National, Altoona; B. Curley of Idaho Falls, Ida. Mr. McCarley of Williams was en route to Ireland, which he left as a poor boy thirty years ago.

Mrs. George H. Gibson, wife of the cashier of the bank at Peyton, died at her home after a long illness.

The Alta Vista Savings has increased its capital stock from $15,000 to $30,000.

The American Trust and Savings of Cedar Rapids has let the contract for its fine new ten-story building to a Des Moines contractor. The building will be 60 by 78 on the ground, fireproof, and will cost $200,000. It will be one of the finest structures in Iowa. E. R. Moore, well known over Iowa from his connection with the state legislature, is head of the bank.

A girl forger, pretty and 17, according to the newspapers, is furnishing some little trouble for the Des Moines police. The amounts of her checks were small.

The Farmers Savings of Clermont is a new institution which is now a certainty. Nearly one hundred stockholders met recently to take the final steps of organization.

Francis Bergman, youngest son of President W. C. Bergman of the First National at Newton, was injured when the machine in which he was riding broke an axle and turned turtle.

The Security Savings at Perry proposes to increase its capital stock to $50,000.

The Citizens Savings at Royal has become the Citizens National. The capital stock is $25,000.

The Fremont County Savings has succeeded the Sidney Banking Company at Sidney.

South Dakota Notes

Rosebud county bankers are back of a movement to secure an extension of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha from Wynott, Neb., to Niobrara, thereby giving that county more convenient access to the markets at Sioux City and Omaha.

The Bank of Capa has decided to go out of business.

Aberdeen bankers are hard after the next year convention of the South Dakota Bankers Association. The latter meets this year at Watertown, June 25th and 26th.

RICHMOND CHAPTER

By John S. Haw

"There is only one way to secure tax reform from the next legislature," said Hill Montague. addressing the Richmond Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, at the Jefferson Hotel. "When the general assembly meets, call together ten or twelve representative delegates from widely separated points in the state and let them frame a tax reform bill, to which they will give their united support through the session. I believe that is the most practical way to secure the passage of a remedial measure."

Mr. Montague, who has been one of Richmond's representatives in the lower house for several terms, detailed the difficulties that have so far beset every attempt to transfer the taxing authority from the county commissioners of the revenue, where it now resides, to a central state body. The same opposition, he said, will develop anew. A sweeping tax reform bill, he said, will be doomed from the start. The practical thing to do is to secure the passage of a mild reform measure and to improve upon it at succeeding sessions.

The speaker departed from his announced subject, "Legislation Affecting Banks," to discuss what, he said, might be regarded as a digression, but what was, in reality, the same thing—equalization of taxes. Under the present system, he said, bank stocks in the hands of shareholders are the only tangible personal property in Virginia that is taxed at its full value. Reforms are needed, he said, which shall remove the discrimination against this form of investment. Mr. Montague designated the present taxing system as abominable, and thought the time was ripe for reform. It was time, he said, for Virginia to stop boasting of its glorious past and its achievements in history, and to give attention to a tax situation which is among the four worst of the Union.

The remedy, he thought, lies in the creation of a state commission or commissioner vested with power to supervise and amend assessment rolls returned by the county commissioners of revenue, with the idea of equalizing, as far as possible, the assessment on the same subject.

President H. N. Phillips, of the Broadway National Bank, subscribed to the general indictment of the Virginia tax laws. The only hope of relief, he thought, was continuous agitation. Stockholders and officers of country banks, he said, representing as they do the most influential and progressive people of the county, could do a valuable service in this respect by impressing upon their delegates to the general Assembly the injustice of the present system and the need for reform.

George Bryan, attorney for the Virginia Bankers Association, addressed the meeting on the law governing negotiable instruments. His lecture was on the law as it relates to the protest of paper and was a concluding lecture of a series given during the past winter.

Keesee Is President

The speaking program was followed by the annual election, the balloting resulting as follows: Geo. H. Keesee, president; Warren M. Goddard, vice-president; Jesse Wood, secretary; G. S. Barnard, treasurer. The four major officers just named, with the following who were elected last night, constitute the new board of governors: H. G. Proctor, H. C. Cofer, L. V. Terrell, J. M. Ball Jr., and Clinton L. Williams. Balloting for nine delegates to the national convention of the American Institute of Banking, which will be held in Richmond next September, resulted in the election of H. G. Proctor, C. L. Williams, R. L. Gordon, D. E. Mountcastle, E. L. Word, J. C. White, H. K. Parker, W. W. Dillard and N. R. Watt. George H. Keesee will be delegate at large. H. N. Phillips, C. V. Blackburn and H. F. Talbott were elected alternates.

MARYLAND CONVENTION

Secretary Charles Hann of the Maryland Bankers Association announces the program for the eighteenth annual convention to be held at the Blue Mountain House, Blue Mountain, June 24th, 25th and 26th. Blue Mountain House is 2,500 feet above the sea level. The entertainment will include a trip over the mountains to Chambersburg, Pa., Wednesday afternoon; Tuesday evening the "Merry Dance," and Wednesday evening "a splendid entertainment; something new." Thursday evening the annual banquet will be given. The Hon. Ferdinand Williams, judge of the Fourth judicial district of Maryland, will preside.

The convention program includes report of the committee on bank stock taxation, which will be discussed. Speakers include the Hon. John Skelton Williams, assistant secretary of the treasury; the Hon. Phillips Lee Goldsborough, governor of Maryland; George B. Caldwell of Chicago, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, and William G. Edens, Central Trust Company of Illinois, J. H. Arnold of the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., will give an illustrated lecture.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

New activity in business circles in Spokane is effectively demonstrated by the big increase in building permits issued for the first five months of 1913 over the same period last year. The total figures of the period this year practically double those of the corresponding period last year. The amount is $1,776,066, the biggest month being May, when the permits reached a total of $1,344,990. There were 108 permits, as against 91 in the same month last year. The total figure for the first five months of 1912 is $892,660. City Building Inspector George Mackie reports a steady tone of improvement in building. The permit for the new Davenport hotel furnished the bulk of the May, 1913, total with $1,100,000, the freight-house for the Milwaukee railroad coming next with $104,000 and the Whittier school third with $60,000.

Spokane sent a good-sized delegation of bankers to the annual convention of the Idaho State Bankers Association at Weiser, Idaho, this week. In the party were E. T. Coman, president, and O. M. Green, assistant to the president, of the Exchange National; W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National; J. J. Rouse, cashier of the Fidelity National; W. T. Triplett, assistant cashier of the Traders National, and W. L. Clark, auditor of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company. The delegation was increased by the addition of the following Washington and Idaho bankers: H. D. Merritt, assistant cashier of the Dexter-Horton National, Seattle; C. M. Hemphill, assistant cashier of the Northwestern National, Portland; L. N. Swift, president of the Farmers State of Orofino, Ida.; R. L. Shepard, secretary of the Idaho Trust Company, Lewiston; F. N. Shepard, cashier of the Empire National, Lewiston, Ida.; R. M. Walker, vice-president of the Wallace National, Wallace, Ida.; C. M. Kraemer, cashier of the State Bank of Plummer, Ida.; A. L. Thiele, cashier of the Bank of Orofino, and H. Melgard, president of the First Trust and Savings, Moscow, Ida.

Among out-of-town bankers in Spokane this week were F. C. Luce, national bank examiner for eastern Washington; E. E. Noble, cashier of the Farmers State of Reardan, and George Donald, president of the Yakima National of North Yakima.

The Industrial Development Company of Spokane, which holds 1,000 acres of valuable factory sites just east of the city, has established an agency at Indianapolis for the comprehensive exploitation of Spokane's industrial possibilities. Mr. Walker also made tentative arrangements for the establishment of similar agencies at New York and Boston. This is the initial step in a nation-wide campaign planned by the Industrial Development Company, which is offering 200 acres of free factory sites to new factories. The Indianapolis agency is established with the W. T. Mahan Company. Mr. Mahan plans to visit Spokane in the near future, bringing with him a party of Indianapolis investors, who will look over the Industrial Development Company's proposition, and also the Country Homes Development project north of the city. The creation of these agencies throughout the East means much to Spokane and the Inland Empire, as they will serve for centers for the dissemination of information as to industrial opportunities of this section and will direct the attention of investors to Spokane.

June 10th is the date set for the twenty-fifth regular quarterly dividend distribution among unit holders of the Trustee Company, owner of five business buildings in Spokane. The dividend amounts to $25,625, bringing the total distributions thus far this year up to $51,250, and the total since organization to $511,959.47. Each holder of a $1,000 unit receives a preferred dividend of $12.50 on the tenth days of Mareh, June, September and December, and at the end of the year, after all expenses are paid, two-thirds of the surplus money earned during the year over and above the preferred dividend also is distributed among the unit holders. This surplus for 1912 amounted to $35,025.50.

The formation of the $100,000 San Poil Sheep Land Company by a group of Spokane men is an instance of the increased attention being paid to stock-growing in this section. The stock field is practically a virgin one as yet, much money going east each year for butter, cheese and other dairy products. Sheep raising on an extensive scale is the ultimate plan of the new concern. The company has secured the first sheep grazing permit ever issued for the Colville Indian reservation, and within a few years expects to have 40,000 or 50,000 sheep feeding within its limits. Spokane is well located for the development of woolen manufacture owing to its proximity to several of the sheep raising districts of the Northwest. Officers of the new company are H. J. LeFevre, president; W. W. Neely, vice-president, and Lester P. Edge, secretary-treasurer. Mr. LeFevre, Mr. Edge and J. F. Dealy are the incorporators.

Edward J. Armstrong, paying teller of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, who for the last month has been acting as temporary manager of the Commercial Bank of Okanogan, Wash., has returned to the city and has resumed his regular position with the local company. Mr. Armstrong has been in the employ of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company for seventeen years. He will be succeeded at Okanogan by C. C. Richardson, formerly of Cheney, Wash.

CURRENCY HEARINGS MAY BE PUBLIC

There is a possibility that currency reform hearings of the house committee may be made public. A resolution to that effect was introduced by Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota. After a lively discussion a subcommittee was appointed to investigate the matter.

There are fourteen more state banks in Illinois at the present time than there were two months ago. At the April 4th call there were 646 and at the June 4th call 660.

pretense of segregating a reserve fund, but the theory is an accumulation of funds in some locality for manipulative purposes, called scientific banking.

We have had experience with a high priced scientific commission, endeavoring to produce a scientific practical system, resulting in a dismal failure, yet the theory is still advocated.

We certainly ought to get together on a proposition fair and equitable to all and that might be an incentive for the state banks to come under our banner, for the interior banks both national and state, 20,000 in round numbers, who are in daily contact with the people, who provide two-thirds of this enormous aggregate deposit, and fully understanding their methods of business could easily provide a practical plan, if the scientists would not interfere in the interest of the money power.

Proposed Amendments

1st. Provide that the government issue and control all the circulating mediums, gold, silver and a uniform currency, making it all a legal tender and attaching thereto a penalty for any attempt at demonetization.

2nd. Provision for the government to retire the national bank circulation and substitute legal tenders in lieu thereof, purchasing the bonds now held to secure circulation; to hold same in trust against an equal amount of legal tenders issued.

3rd. Provide for a central clearing association at Washington under government control, to issue emergency currency when desired to local clearing associations, consisting of groups of banks, both national and state, having aggregate capital of not less than five million dollars, under such restrictions as may be provided and the combined capital be made responsible for the issue.

4th. Provide that national banks may be authorized to make real estate loans in the aggregate not to exceed their capital and surplus. No loan to any person on real estate or personal in excess of one-tenth of combined capital and surplus.

5th. Provide that national banks may act as trustee or executor of estates through an officer appointed for that purpose, continuing the provision now in force as to capital and surplus requirements, eliminating the reserve requirement.

6th. Provide for the guaranty of deposits in all national banks that make application under supervision and control of the central clearing association, the government to be protected by a tax of one-twentieth of one per cent levied on the average deposit of each bank for the previous year. The fund thus accumulated to be deposited with the central clearing association. Each bank may have the privilege, with consent of the association, of depositing in lieu of cash one-half of the assessment in bonds acceptable to the association. It is understood the guaranty is not obligatory, but gives national banks the privilege.

The national banks have in round numbers eight billions of deposits and a tax of one-twentieth of one per cent produces four million, a sum sufficient to pay the average losses by failures for six years, as the average annual losses since 1865, a period of forty-eight years, are but $673,860 per year, as shown by the comptroller's statement of 1912. Even if necessary to make two assessments per year, it would be cheap insurance for all banks participating in the fact of increased deposits and earnings.

As the deposits of a bank earn its expenses and dividends, it is proper that a tax be placed on same to insure its permanency and a continuance of its full earning power, for the shareholders, and it is to be expected that this guaranty will be considered ample protection for the public funds of the country. As it is not obligatory on any national bank to participate, give us the privilege and see how many will embrace the opportunity. It is surmised that five or ten thousand state banks will be with us as soon as they can change their charters.

MICHIGAN CONVENTION

Headquarters of the 1913 convention of the Michigan Bankers Association, held June 10th, 11th and 12th in Lansing, were at the Hotel Downey and a record attendance was on hand to participate in the festivities.

Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock the convention was called to order and the president delivered his annual address, followed by reports from the secretary, treasurer and counsel. After addresses by Hal H. Smith and C. W. Mott the committee on agriculture reported, after which Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis talked on agricultural development and vocational education, being followed by S. M. Jordan of Missouri and Dr. Eben Mumford, who talked along similar lines.

Wednesday afternoon William T. Gage spoke to the bankers on life insurance as collateral and Fred W. Ellsworth of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York had for his topic "The Twentieth Century Banker."

Thursday morning reports were heard from the various committees. Members of the American Bankers Association assembled at the close of this session and nominated a member of the executive council, a vice-president for the state and a delegate to serve on the general nominating committee.

The social features of the convention were attractive and numerous. Tuesday the ladies visited the Industrial School for Boys. At four o'clock there was a reception and tea at the residence of Mrs. R. E. Olds and at eight o'clock a musicale at the home of President and Mrs. B. F. Davis. Wednesday morning automobile rides were provided for the ladies and visits made to the Michigan Agricultural College, with luncheon at noon for delegates and ladies at the agricultural college. A group picture was taken on the college campus at this time. Wednesday afternoon the ladies visited the state capitol and other state institutions. At 5:30 there was a parade and review of Industrial School boys and band on the capitol grounds. Wednesday evening there was a reception and grand ball at the Masonic Temple.

Officers of the Michigan Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, Benjamin F. Davis, president City National, Lansing; first vice-president, George E. Lawson, vice-president Peoples State, Detroit; second vice-president, James R. Wylie, president Grand Rapids National City; secretary, Mrs. H. M. Brown, Detroit; treasurer, James M. Rose, cashier Farmers and Merchants Bank, Benton Harbor; attorney, Hal. H. Smith, Detroit.

President's Address

President Davis told the bankers some of the advantages afforded by his state and touched upon some of Michigan's early history and also that of Lansing, telling of the first bank which was started in the state and of the progress and development made in the years which have followed. Bank supervision came in for its share of discussion and stress was laid upon the importance of divorcing bank supervision from politics. The disastrous bank failures which occurred during the early days of Lansing's existence were chronicled.

In commenting upon the tariff President Davis said there is more or less pessimistic talk about the conditions of trade throughout the country, but that it does not come from men of affairs who have an ear to the ground. "These men believe that the talk about recession in trade is but the natural result of business men marking time and thus forestalling possible disaster, but ready to advance the moment congress enacts into law tariff measures whereby they can readjust their affairs to meet the new conditions, whatever they may be, but nothing harmful is expected to result," said the speaker.

Currency reform and the necessity for employment of scientific, up-to-date methods by the farmer also were touched upon by President Davis in his address.

The group system which was in force at one time in Michigan is being revised and the work of organizing groups will begin this year.

Every effort is being made by the Michigan Bankers Association to interest bank clerks in the educational work of the American Institute of Banking.

Ellsworth Makes Address

F. W. Ellsworth of the Guaranty Trust, New York, contributed a good number on the "Twentieth Century Banker" and also discussed the work being done by the American Institute of Banking.

DETROIT BANKS UNITE

Two of Detroit's strongest savings banks have united their interests under the name of the Wayne County and Home Savings Bank, with capital $2,000,000, surplus and profits $2,400,000, and total resources $30,000,000. Julius H. Haass, former president of the Home Bank, fills that office in the new institution, and Charles F. Collins, former president of the Wayne Bank, is chairman of the board of directors, which comprises nineteen prominent men of Detroit. The bank has eight offices in the city equally equipped for commercial and savings business. The success of both the old banks in the past is a guaranty of continued progress, while the character of the management commends the consolidated bank to the confidence of the business public.

OLD NATIONAL OF GRAND RAPIDS

Old National of Grand Rapids, Mich., was established in 1853. Capitalized at $800,000, it has surplus and profits amounting to $775,000 and resources in excess of nine millions. The following serve the bank in an official capacity: William Barnhart, president; Clay H. Hollister, and William Judson, vice-presidents; Geo. F. Mackenzie, cashier; and H. A. Woodruff, assistant cashier. Mr. Hollister enjoys an extensive banking acquaintance, having been prominent in affairs of the American Bankers Association. He has done effective work as chairman of the bills of lading committee of that organization.

CITY NATIONAL OF LANSING

City National of Lansing, Mich., is capitalized at $100,000, has surplus of a like amount and deposits of $2,396,727. The officers are as follows: Benjamin F. Davis, president; E. F. Cooley, vice-president; F. J. Hopkins, cashier.

At the afternoon session United States Treasurer John Burke addressed the bankers, after which there was general discussion of the following subjects: The urgent need of an active protective committee; the group system, its scope and usefulness; banking legislation; suggestions as to future work and contracts for supplies and equipment. After the reports of group chairmen adjournment was taken until ten o'clock Thursday morning.

The second day B. W. Peterson, president of the Dollar Savings and Trust Company, Wheeling, talked on the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of West Virginia and C. B. At the afternoon session there was an address by the Hon. Edwin Warfield, president Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland, Baltimore, on corporate suretyship and its relation to the banking interests of the country. After reports of committees, unfinished business, new business, selection of place for next meeting and the election of officers for the ensuing year, adjournment was taken. Headquarters of the association were at the Hotel Randolph and the meetings were held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium. The officers of the West Virginia bankers the past year were as follows: President, Mason Mathews, president Bank of Lewisburg; vice-president, Glenn F. President's Address

President Mason Mathews reported membership in the association as numbering 231. He deprecated the lack of currency reform up to the present time and expressed the hope that legislation of such a character will be enacted by congress in the near future. President Mathews stated that he is opposed to any currency except that issued by the government. Every officer and member of the West Virginia Bankers Association was urged to spread the gospel of banking reform. that will develop and not fetter trade," said the speaker.

The question of interest on deposits was next taken up and the opinion expressed that the payment of interest on deposits should be abolished, or at least the bankers should get together and agree on a uniform rate.

President Mathews also urged that some steps be taken toward the establishment of credit departments in clearing house cities, and where there are no clearing houses in group districts, and thus reduce to a minimum the risk and loss where large lines of accommodation are extended by a number of banks to the same borrower. This idea was advanced by ex-President W. D. Irvine in his annual address at Huntington, June 23, 1910.

Craig B. Hazlewood on Program

Craig B. Hazlewood of the Union Trust, Chicago, contributed to the excellence of the program with an able talk on commercial paper as a secondary reserve for West Virginia banks.

NEW YORK COUNTY NATIONAL

New York County National of New York City was incorporated in 1855 and is among the landmarks of old-fashioned Greenwich village. It was among the first to take out a federal charter after the passage of the National Bank act. It has been under the management of its present president, Col. Francis L. Leland, and his father, during his existence. Capital stock is $500,000; surplus, $2,015,028; deposits amount to $9,787,458. Other officers are Christian F. Tietjen and James C. Brower, vice-presidents; Thomas A. Painter, cashier, and Lawrence J. Grinnon, assistant cashier.

STUDYING MARKETING

The action of the Texas Bankers Association in appointing a commission to study methods of marketing seems to be meeting with approval. Peter Radford, president of the Farmers Educational and Co-operative Union of Texas, says that he believes the commission's report will be of much value to the farmers of the state if they carry out the program outlined at the recent convention held in Galveston. The committee named by the Texas association expects to confer with the farmers of the state to ascertain the best methods of properly marketing whatever surplus crops the farmer may have to sell.

MAKES MONEY PANIC IMPOSSIBLE

Washington, D. C., June 11th.—Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo gave impressive evidence to-night of the administration's willingness to do everything possible to relieve any feeling of uncertainty in the business world that may exist on account of present conditions or fear of the tariff legislation.

He announced that he "would not hesitate" to issue $500,000,000 of new national bank notes under the Aldrich-Vreeland emergency currency act, if the banks desire them.

NEED HARVEST HANDS

The call from Kansas for 19,000 harvest hands, issued by Labor Commissioner W. L. O'Brien of that state, to gather in the gigantic wheat crop the next three weeks, will be filled so far as possible by the free employment bureaus of Missouri in St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph.

Commissioner John T. Fitzpatrick of the Missouri Bureau of Labor Statistics has notified commissioner O'Brien of Kansas that he will co-operate with him in his effort to secure this large army of workers.

Orders were immediately issued by Commissioner Fitzpatrick to the superintendents of three Missouri state free employment bureaus to get in touch with men willing to go to Kansas and work as harvesters.

TEXAS BANKS WILL AID FARMERS

About 800 banks of Texas will aid the farmers of that state in marketing their 1913 cotton crop. The banks will advance money on warehouse receipts for stored cotton at the rate of 6 per cent per annum for six months or longer. The loan will be made to the farmer on depositing his warehouse receipt and signing a note negotiable in any part of the country, and a bond signed by a warehouse manager, specifying the number of bales owned by the farmer desiring the loan. President Radford of the Farmers Union will urge that the farmers borrow at the rate of $35 per bale, or 70 per cent of the market value of the cotton at the time of the loan.

Only 160 banks offered their assistance in holding the cotton in 1912 and the greater number this year is attributed to a more thorough study of this problem by the bankers, according to Mr. Radford.

RESIGNS AS VICE-PRESIDENT

M. M. Valentine has resigned as vice-president of the Public Bank of New York City because of poor health.

GOOD ROADS BILL PASSED

The Illinois senate this week passed the Tice good roads bill by a vote of 42 to 3; the bill was passed by the house two weeks ago by a vote of 111 to 33. It provides for a non-partisan state highway commission of three members to be appointed by the governor, and plans for a system of state aid for the building of hard roads by counties. Funds derived from automobile licenses are to be used for the roads and additional appropriations are to be made. Each county is to have a county superintendent of highways. A referendum is provided by which each township and road district may vote whether it will continue the present system of three highway commissioners or come under a one-man system. Forty feet is to be the standard width of all highways in the state.

Bills also were passed providing for $300,000 for the next two years for state aid roads from the general fund and $400,000 of the road fund already accumulated from automobile licenses for 1913 and a similar amount for 1914. The total amount of automobile license accumulations is now more than $800,000.

MICHIGAN BANKERS ELECT

At the annual convention of the Michigan Bankers Association held in Lansing last week George E. Lawson, vice-president Peoples State, of Detroit, was elected president; James R. Wylie, president of the Grand Rapids National, is the first vice-president. Other officers were elected as follows: Second vice-president, Arthur G. Bishop, president Genesee County Savings, Flint; treasurer, G. L. Taylor, cashier Citizens Savings of Owosso; secretary, Mrs. H. M. Brown, Detroit; counsel, Hal. H. Smith, Detroit. President Lawson was chosen as Michigan's member of the A. B. A. executive council; B. F. Davis, the retiring president, was elected vice-president for the state and Henry H. Sanger, of Detroit, chosen as delegate on the A. B. A. nominating committee.

"BLUE SKY" HEAD APPOINTED

Horace B. Clay has been appointed by Bank Commissioner Mitchell of Missouri to be head of the new department in his office which will be created when the "Blue Sky" law becomes effective June 23rd. Mr. Clay has served for several years as assistant prosecutor for Lewis county. The last two years he has been revenue clerk in the office of the state auditor. The new department will have nothing to do with the banking business. It will have exclusive control of investment companies and supervision of the business of such concerns.

CURRENCY ANSWERS TO BE MADE PUBLIC

At the meeting of the currency committee of the A. B. A. held in Atlantic City this week answers to the thirty-three questions submitted by the senate finance committee were compiled. It is expected that these answers will be made public shortly.

It is said that the committee objects to the reserve feature of the administration's currency measure, it being contended that under the proposed plan the smaller banks still will be compelled to keep large amounts in central reserve banks for business reasons, and that instead of affording a remedy for the present evil resulting from tying up the funds, the trouble will become more pronounced.

IDAHO OFFICERS

The new officers of the Idaho Bankers Association are as follows: President, William Thomson, president Lewiston National, Lewiston; vice-president, F. H. Parsons, cashier Pacific National, Boise; treasurer, J. C. Blackwell, cashier Parma State, Parma; secretary, J. W. Robinson, Union Savings and Trust Company, Boise; executive committee, M. J. Flohr, president First National, Wallace; H. D. Curtis, cashier Hailey National; Walter E. Miller, cashier First National, Nampa; J. M. Maxwell, chairman.

The next convention will be held at Twin Falls.

GOES TO EUROPE

August Blum, vice-president of the First National of Chicago, has left for his annual vacation trip to Europe.

North Dakota Officials at State Convention

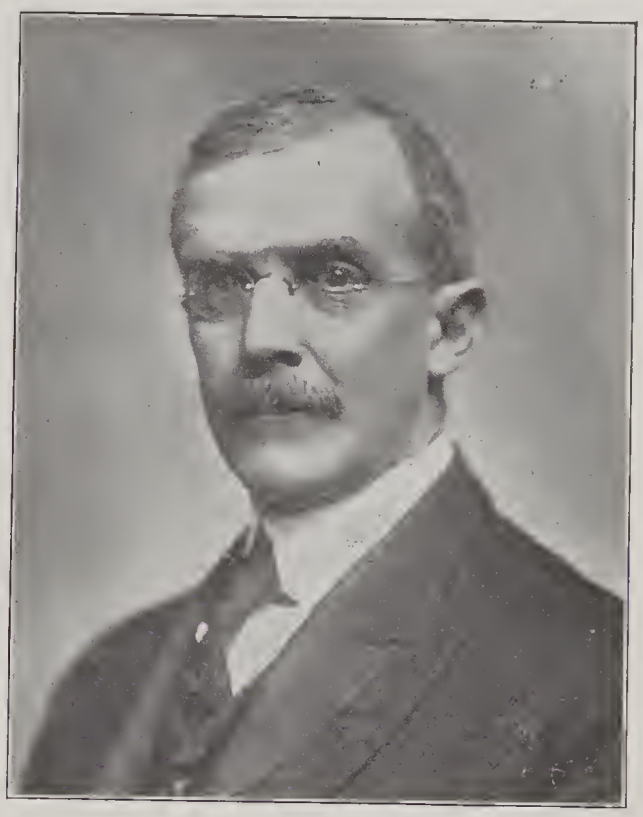
LISBON



W. C. MACFADDEN
FARGO

R. S. Adams, president of the First National of Lisbon, served the North Dakota bankers the past year as their president. In his annual address this week he told of the interest taken by the bankers of his state in agriculture and in the welfare of the farmer. The North Dakota Bankers Association has enjoyed a prosperous year under his guidance as its head.

W. C. Macfadden, vice-president of the Commercial Bank of Fargo, is a top-notcher among the state secretaries. He reported a membership of 688 as against a total of 662 a year ago and 624 two years ago. Mr. Macfadden is a popular member of the banking fraternity and enjoys an extensive acquaintance.

SEES NO STRINGENCY AHEAD

John McHugh, president of the First National of Sioux City, Iowa, said that absolutely no apprehension need exist of a financial stringency in the United States this fall similar to that of 1907, and that fears of a shortage of currency to move the crops of the West this year are without foundation.

DALLAS BANKERS PLAN TO SECURE CONVENTION

At the meeting of the Dallas Chapter of the American Institute of Banking last week several addresses were heard and support was pledged for securing the national meeting for Dallas in 1914. The principal addresses were delivered by Hon. W. T. Henry and Edwin Hobby.

A banquet is to be given Thursday night of June 26th, for the city commissioners and bankers of the city when plans for the securing of the convention will be made.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THE University of Illinois graduated twenty-five law students this year. Four of the number already are licensed to practice, and the remainder plan to take the bar examinations in July. Most of them expect to open offices for practice in Illinois.

ONE of the notable successes in this year's class is W. D. Farthing, who in spite of blindness has completed a three-year course in the law school. Mr. Farthing is a graduate of McKendree College, and with the aid of his brother, who reads for him, he has made an excellent record as a student. The brothers will open an office and practice law together in southern Illinois.

NATHANIEL P. HEATH, son of President Wm. A. Heath, of the Live Stock Exchange National, came out an electrical engineer. Heath, Senior, is a graduate of the university, also.

OUT of ninety-three "agriculturists" graduating this year, forty-four expect to go into actual farming operations; ten into experimental work at the University of Illinois; ten expect to teach; eleven will do graduate work; five are going to work for large implement companies, and the rest will be employed in work more or less connected with agriculture.

LOOKS like a fine future for the agricultural department.

OF the one hundred and seventy-nine graduates of the College of Engineering, all but about ten had signed contracts with various companies months before the date of graduation for work in their chosen line, the salaries ranging from sixty to eighty dollars per month.

THE demand for mechanical, electrical and railway engineers has been excessive. Fourteen large companies, such as the American Locomotive Works, the Peerless Motor Car Company, the Bell Telephone Company, and the General Electric Company, sent representatives to the university during the last months of the school year to secure graduates for the apprentice courses in their works.

THE report of the comptroller of the currency for 1908 shows that during the panic of 1907 the total amount of clearing-house certificates issued was $248,279,700.

THERE is a natural rise and fall in the prices of stock every year. The "high" generally occurs during the first three months of the year and the "low" figure from about this date onward. This fluctuation has not been due to variation in the security which the stock affords, or to the amount of dividends paid by it, but rather has been ascribable to the varying needs for cash.

THESE conditions should govern in making stock purchases for investment, and have much to do with the speculative rise and fall of the market. Here is the way one man decides when standard dividend paying shares are cheap:

ACCEPTING 6 per cent as a normal rate for a permanent loan such as a real estate mortgage, a reliable stock which pays a dividend of 7 per cent would be worth at least 1.16. Considering the bond interest rate paid by corporations, municipal or private, the value of a 7 per cent stock would be more than 1.30. If taxes on bonds and mortgages are taken into consideration the stock paying 7 per cent will have a value of 1.40 and upwards, according as it has prospects for increased dividends or privileges from a growth of the business owing to increase of the population of the city or increased usage of service.

THE SOUTHERN BANKER, published at Atlanta, has "taken over" the Gulf States Banker, formerly published at New Orleans. Assistant Secretary Yopp will be in charge of the New Orleans office.

SEATTLE NATIONAL will send you a finely printed "Trade and Crop Bulletin" covering Pacific Northwest conditions, which is complete and reliable.

THE Savings Bank of Kewanee, Ill., is in its new building, one of the neatest in the state. The immense vaults are within sight of all who enter the bank. This feature has been an advertising hit.

CITIZENS BANK of Wyoming, Iowa, has incorporated as the "Citizens State Bank," P. S. Jensen, who owned the private bank, having sold to the incorporators. The new bank will have $50,000 capital, and $5,000 surplus.

JOHN THOMSEN is president; C. J. Ingwersen is cashier, and rumor has it that Halstead Carpenter, younger son of Henry M. Carpenter, of Monticello, will be the assistant cashier.

THE Colonial Trust and Savings Bank, of Chicago, denies the statement attributed to Attorney Rogan that the Realty Realization Company owed the bank $200,000. The officials say the balance due from the Realty Realization Company is about $40,000, which is amply secured.

NEWSPAPER editors very often view daily events with a partisan eyepiece on an otherwise "universal" instrument.

OLD-TIME republican, pro-tariff organs are greatly concerned about the present low prices of securities, which they declare is due to the election of President Wilson and the pending revision of the tariff.

ON a recent "low" day Great Northern preferred closed at $122, Union Pacific at $143⅜, United States Steel common at $54⅛. On other days the market "broke" slightly lower.

ON October 24, 1907, when the tariff had not been touched for years, and no one was expecting it to be touched for years to come, when Theodore Roosevelt in the White House was running the United States government to suit "the great Morgan interests, which are so friendly to us," the same stock registered at the following prices: Great Northern preferred, $108; Union Pacific, $100; United States Steel common, $21¾.

MR. Roosevelt's standpatism seems to have been worse for stocks than President Wilson's tariff revision—and certainly brought fewer compensations to the country at large.

BANKER FRANK HIXON of La Crosse, Wis., has given his home town a $100,000 manual training school. He has done much for humanity.

WHY couldn't Carnegie be induced to switch from his monumental library building to the building of manual training schools? The latter is an open and a productive field.

WISCONSIN has up for passage what is called a model "Blue Sky" law. It is a composite of a half-dozen bills introduced earlier in the session.

grown. The water-route convention will sail from Milwaukee this (Saturday) evening and the first official session will be on board steamer on Monday. Clever plan!

THAT Minnesota rate case is like a certain brand of "sinker" which comes with your coffee; easy to swallow but hard to digest. Its nourishing qualities also are in doubt.

GEORGE WOODRUFF was up at the North Dakota convention on Tuesday (cooling off) talking on his hobby of farm finance.

KNAUTH, NACHOD & KÜHNE, New York, say that "the investment situation the world over is still controlled largely by an excessive demand for capital. That is really at the bottom of most of the ills from which the markets are now suffering, and while the situation in some respects is troublesome there is no doubt but that it will work out all right in the end."

MR. OXNARD has admitted that three-fourths of the Beet Sugar Trust stock is water. With the duty off they still should be able to earn dividends on the one-fourth of real capital. See the point?

CONTRACTION of business in the East is disclosed by the first reports on the condition of national banks on June 4th last, which were made public by the comptroller of the currency this week.

A GENERAL contraction of loans is noticeable in western cities as well, but nothing to compare with New York and other Eastern centers.

STATE'S ATTORNEY HOYNE has filed suits to discover the water in Chicago's elevated road stocks. What next?

A CHICAGO business man tells us that one brewery in this city "owns" 2,000 city licenses, which it rents out at $1,500 each per year, thus making a clear "velvet" of $1,000,000 per year. He says "the man" told him the firm could spend half a million putting that department of the business in permanent form.

PERHAPS the undesirable notoriety which has come to a lot of Goops who have been buying "rare" and "de luxe" volumes may help some.

JUST like the Missouri bankers who gave C. D.'s for fake insurance company stocks, the book buyers were on the "make."

THE agent first reveals a find and discloses a prospective customer, but he hasn't the money to nail the "find" until the customer gets back from Europe.

THE Goop puts up the coin and holds the books until the real buyer comes back from abroad, which never happens.

IT'S the old, old story of the buying of the long, green currency which cannot be detected. Private hope for gain is at the bottom of the swindle.

MAUSOLEUM

The above is one of our classic four column front mausoleums. We have erected many hundreds of mausoleums, ranging in price from $2,000 to $100,000. The private mausoleum is the least heartrending method of caring for the deceased.

WE note that eight Milwaukee lawyers have indorsed fake purchase money drafts that they might get a 10 per cent fee for simply drawing a deed of sale to real estate. Cupidity gets the sucker in all lines of endeavor.

IRVING NATIONAL, New York, has been made reserve agent for the old Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., one of the famous financial institutions of the nation.

WASHINGTON dopesters continue to predict that "Mr. Keller of Chicago will be the next comptroller of the currency."

THE dope is based upon the personal support of Vice-President Marshall and the reputed support of Roger Sullivan, whom the Chicago Tribune loves to describe as "our prominent gas and biscuit manufacturer."

OTHER stories put Mr. Sullivan behind Edward N. Hurley, president of a bank at Wheaton and a captain of industry in Chicago.

IT is said that certain large and leading lights in the Chicago financial district when asked, "Who is the best man in Chicago for the job?" named William A. Heath.

SECRETARY McADOO may be waiting to see what the status of the office will be under the new banking law, now on the fire?

EDGAR LOUIS SPECK is a lucky dog! He has married the beautiful, talented and some-time editor of the Texas Record—Miss M. Lena Riddle. Happened at Dallas—June 12th. At home after this week in Hyde Park, Austin.

J. F. SARTORI'S big Security Trust and Savings, at Los Angeles, has taken over the Central National, after increasing its capital from $300,000 to one million.

HARRY B. EVANS, assistant cashier of the First National of Lincoln, Neb., has gone west to grow up with the country as cashier of the new trust company at Portland.

R. S. HAWES of St. Louis has gone out upon the raging Gulf at Galveston to "fish" for tarpon. He took his own witnesses along.

"FRED" HOOPES is to cut bait. The plan of campaign to land the Aurora Crowned Texan in the A. B. A. treasurership at Boston will be used in case the other breezes fail.

LIQUIDATORS of the Union National at Columbus have been asked by the state to cough up $65,000 back interest on public funds.

LANSING bankers are being applauded yet for the fine style in which they entertained the Michigan convention.

THE reception and dance at President Davis' house brought out the best society in the pretty city, a city noted for its beautiful women.

GEORGE E. LAWSON cracked the record at Lansing by being elected president of the state association and also a member of the A. B. A. executive council.

EVEN then Detroit wasn't satisfied, for Harry H. Sanger, vice-president and cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, was put on the nominating committee for Boston.

ALPENA will get the convention next year. The boat trip style of assembly will be resumed. The Michiganders are "ducks" on the water.

THE failure of a big private bank at Bunker Hill, Ill., was quite a joke in a way. It was located right in the geographical center of Senator Canaday's district.

THE senator was sexton-in-chief when the private bank supervision bill was buried in the Subcommittee Cemetery of the house at Springfield.

OTHERWISE the failure is serious. There were only $247 in cash reserve against $75,000 in deposits. Fine chance!

THE visible assets are real estate holdings, some of it as far away as Seattle. Their cash value is problematical. Of the "notes and bonds" little is known as to collectibility.

BELT BROTHERS AND COMPANY were the owners of the failed bank. The firm dodged when the poll of the banks on supervision was taken.

A PRIVATE bank right in Chicago went into the hands of a receiver the same day. It was the "Home Security Savings" at Thirty-first and State streets. No assets found as yet, not even the fixtures were left.

THE only evidences of "capital" are the individual notes of the partners. Nothing was paid in in cash, if the evidence in hand is good for anything.

YES, it all happened in Illinois! The proprietor was an ex-convict from Sing Sing, the second ex-Sing Singer to "fail" a private bank in Chicago within a fortnight. The good private bankers are in bad company.

OHIO Bankers Association group meeting dates have been set as follows: No. 6, Mt. Vernon, O., June 25th; No. 9, Akron, O., June 27th; No. 4, Greenfield, July 16th, and No. 2, Ottawa, O., August 5th.

McCOY AND COMPANY, 105 South La Salle Street, Chicago, announce the election of John F. Bacon as secretary and sales manager. Mr. Bacon formerly was with N. W. Harris and Company and earlier with E. H. Rollins and Sons, and is well and favorably known in Wisconsin and Minnesota.

"THERE goes a good bank put out of business by advertising."

"Impossible! How?"

"It let the bank which has just absorbed it do it all."

NORTH Dakota bankers were welcomed to Grand Forks by an "Uxtry Extra" of "The Bankers Gazoot," prepared by local talent. It was a daisy.

THE advertisements were "funnier" than the jokes and are charged up to Messrs. Macfadden and Beckwith of Fargo. Here are the samples:

"YOUR wife may be strong, but our safe is stronger. She can frisk your clothes while you sleep, but she can't get by us. She works while you sleep—so do we, and so does the interest."

"WANTED—A hatchet-faced lady stenographer, one that we can keep. The lovely little broilers get grabbed off the roost as soon as they learn the business. Apply First National Bank of Any Town."

"WANTED—Lady stenographer that dresses for the job and not for evening parties. These 'One-more-shake-and-I shall-be-free' costumes disorganize the force. Stone Face Bank."

"VISITORS who are victims of the Golf or Dude Shinny habit are invited to bring their sticks with them and make use of the excellent nine-hole course at Lincoln Park. Ross, of the Northern State, will chaperon golf parties in preference to his regular work. He learned the game in Chicago and knows where all the bottles are hidden in the club house. Bring a crowbar to get into lockers that are carelessly left locked. Play may begin at daylight. Club house may be locked but fence is open at all times."

EDWARD E. CRABTREE was up from Jacksonville on Wednesday, with his good right arm still in a sling, but "getting well."

HE came to meet Mrs. Crabtree, who is returning from Boston, where she went direct from Briarcliff to be present at her niece's graduation.

MR. CRABTREE says no rain in his section of the state in two months. Oats burned up but still a chance for the corn. Some farm loans probably will have to be carried over again. CASHIER.

Provisions of the Glass-Owen New Currency Bill

Rigid regulation for banks and the fixing of weekly discount rate prominent features. Federal board will have control over every business function. Will change the future prospects of many cities and industries as well as of banking institutions

A summary of the Glass-Owen bill for a reform of currency and banking is here presented. It likely will be changed but little in either branch of congress and the expectation in Washington is that it will be enacted into law at the present session. It has the approval of President Wilson and of such banking and financial experts as were called in consultation. President Wilson plans to read his currency measure to congress next Monday, and the Glass-Owen bill, carrying the administration's ideas as currency reform, will be introduced soon thereafter. By postponing presentation of the bill a few days the president hopes to secure absolute harmony.

Summary of Provisions

Summarized, the bill is as follows:

The secretary of the treasury, the attorney-general, and the comptroller of the currency are formed into an organization committee for the purpose of dividing the United States into not less than twelve districts, each district to contain a federal reserve city.

In each federal reserve city the organization committee will organize a federal reserve bank.

Every national bank within a reserve district must subscribe 20 per cent of its unimpaired capital to the capital stock of the federal reserve bank of that district, the capital stock to be not less than $5,000,000.

Limit on Branch Houses

Each federal reserve bank may establish branch offices, the number of which must not exceed one for each $500,000 of the capital stock of such federal reserve bank.

Every federal reserve bank shall be incorporated and shall have succession for a period of twenty years from its organization.

Every federal reserve bank shall be controlled by a board of nine directors holding office for three years, three of whom shall be chosen by the stockholding banks, three representing the general public interests of the reserve district, and three designated by the federal reserve board. Shareholders in a federal reserve bank shall be entitled to an annual dividend of 5 per cent on the paid up capital.

Raising of Surplus Fund

One-half of the net earnings shall be paid into the surplus fund until that fund amounts to 20 per cent of the bank's capital, and the remaining half shall be paid to the United States.

When the surplus fund amounts to 20 per cent of the capital and the shareholders have received their 5 per cent dividends, all excess earnings shall be paid to the United States.

Any state bank, banking association, or trust company may subscribe to the stock of a federal reserve bank.

A federal reserve board is created consisting of nine members—the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of agriculture, and the comptroller of the currency, three members chosen by the president of the United States by and with the advice and consent of the senate, for a term of six years, one of whom is to be the governor, another the vice-governor, and the third the secretary; and three members chosen by the electors of the federal reserve banks.

Powers of Federal Board

The federal reserve board is empowered:

To examine accounts and books of federal reserve banks.

To require or permit a federal reserve bank to rediscount the paper of any of the federal reserve banks.

To establish each week or oftener a rate of discount which shall be mandatory upon each federal reserve bank for each class of paper.

To supervise and regulate the issue of treasury notes to federal reserve banks.

To require the removal of federal reserve bank officers for incompetency, dereliction of duty, fraud or deceit.

To require the writing off of doubtful or worthless assets upon the books and balance sheets of federal reserve banks.

To suspend the further operations of any federal reserve bank and appoint a receiver therefor.

Limit on Banks' Business

A federal reserve bank may receive from any of its stockholders deposits of current funds, national bank notes, federal reserve notes or checks and drafts upon solvent banks.

Upon the endorsement of any member bank it may discount notes and bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions.

Such notes or bills, however, shall not be discounted for speculating purposes.

Various restrictions are imposed in reference to the extent of the loaning power of a federal reserve bank.

The federal reserve board may authorize the reserve bank of a district to discount the direct obligations of member banks.

Certain open market operations are permitted to reserve banks.

Fiscal Agents of Government

All moneys now held in the general fund of the treasury will be deposited in federal reserve banks, which shall act as fiscal agents of the government.

All revenues of the government shall be deposited in such banks and disbursements drawn against such deposits.

The federal reserve banks may be required to pay interest on government deposits, but shall not pay interest on any other.

The government and state banks depositing in the federal reserve banks shall be the only depositors in the reserve banks.

An issue of $500,000,000, plus an amount equal to the amount of national bank notes which may be retired, is authorized.

This issue shall be made at the discretion of the federal reserve board.

Division of Treasury Notes

Any federal reserve bank may make application to the federal reserve board for such amount of treasury notes as it may desire, such application to be accompanied with an offer of collateral security to protect the notes, equal in amount to the sum applied for.

Whenever any federal reserve bank shall disburse federal reserve treasury notes, it must hold in its own vaults gold or lawful money equal in amount to 33⅓ per cent of the treasury notes so paid out by it.

Federal reserve banks may be required to deposit in the treasury a sum in gold of lawful money equal to 5 per cent of whatever amount of federal reserve treasury notes is issued to it.

Exchange of collateral put up for notes is provided for.

Service as Clearing House

The federal reserve board may act as a clearing house for federal reserve banks, and may also require each such bank to exercise the functions of a clearing house for its shareholding banks.

Provision is made for the reduction and wiping out of liability by federal reserve banks.

The secretary of the treasury is directed to exchange United States 2 per cent bonds, bearing the circulation privilege of 3 per cent bonds without the circulating privilege. When the outstanding 2 per cents shall be exchanged or refunded the power of national banks to issue circulating notes secured by United States bonds will cease.

Every national bank may receive circulating notes under the conditions prescribed by the bill, but no national banks shall be permitted to issue circulating notes or any substitute therefor. After twenty years national bank notes remaining outstanding shall be recalled.

Demand for Bank Reserves

Within sixty days after the establishment of a federal reserve bank every national banking association shall establish with the federal reserve bank of its district a credit balance on the books of the latter institution, equal to not less than 3 per cent of its own total demand liabilities, exclusive of circulating notes, and at the end of fourteen months this amount shall be increased to 5 per cent.

National banking associations classified as country banks and situated outside of central reserve and reserve cities must maintain a reserve equal to 15 per cent of the aggregate amount of their deposits. National banks in reserve cities must maintain a reserve of 25 per cent of their outstanding deposits for twenty-six months after the passage of the bill and for twelve months thereafter 22½ per cent, and at the end of thirty-eight months permanently a reserve of 20 per cent of their standing deposits.

Every federal reserve bank must at all times have in its vaults in gold or lawful money a sum equal to not less than 33⅓ per cent of its outstanding demand liabilities.

Drastic Examination Provided

Drastic and frequent examinations of national banking associations are provided for.

Each federal reserve bank is authorized to arrange for the examination of member banks within its district.

Any national bank making a loan or gratuity to an examiner is subject to a fine of $1,000 and the officer or officers of the bank authorizing it to an additional fine of $500. Any examiner accepting the loan or gratuity is fined $500 and disqualified from office.

No officer or director of a national bank may be a beneficiary of any transaction made on behalf of his bank. Should he violate this provision he will be punished by a fine of not less than $5,000 or by a penitentiary sentence of three years, or both.

Responsibility of Persons

The stockholders of every national banking association will be held individually responsible for all obligations of such association.

Any national banking association not situated in a reserve city may make farm loans equal to 25 per cent of its capital and surplus or 50 per cent of its time deposits.

Any national banking association capitalized at $1,000,000 or more may, through the federal reserve board, establish branches in foreign countries.

Details of Provisions

The bill describes itself as "a bill to provide for the establishment of federal reserve banks for furnishing an elastic currency affording means for rediscounting commercial paper and to establish a more effective supervision of banking in the United States, and for other purposes."

It prescribes that the short title of the act shall be the "federal reserve act." The second section, which relates to "federal reserve districts," requires that within sixty days after passage of the bill the secretary of the treasury, the attorney-general, and the comptroller of the currency, acting as a reserve bank organization committee, shall designate from among the reserve cities now authorized by law a number of such cities, not less than twelve, to be known as federal reserve cities, and shall divide the continental United States into districts, each district to contain one of such federal reserve cities.

Seek Aid to Convenience

The districts are to be appointed with due regard to the convenience and business of the community and will not necessarily coincide with the area of the states. The districts created may be readjusted and new districts created by the federal reserve board, acting upon a joint application of not less than ten national banks situated within one of the existing districts.

The organization committee, in accordance with regulations to be established by itself, will organize in each of the reserve cities a federal reserve bank.

Such bank shall include in its title the name of the city in which it is situated, as "Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago."

Capital Must Be $5,000,000

No federal reserve bank shall be organized with a paid up and unimpaired capital at the time of beginning business less in amount than $5,000,000. To make up this capital every national bank located within a given district shall be required to subscribe to the capital stock of the federal reserve bank of that district a sum equal to 20 per cent of its unimpaired capital. An appropriation of $50,000 is named to pay all expenses in connection with the organization of federal reserve banks.

Section 36 prescribes that the capital stock of each federal reserve bank shall be divided into shares of $100. The capital stock will be increased as subscribing banks increase their capital, or its additional banks become subscribers, and decreased as subscribing banks reduce their capital or leave the organization.

Federal reserve banks may establish branches, the total number of which shall not exceed one for each $500,000 of the capital stock of said federal reserve bank.

Nine Directors to Control

Section 4 requires federal reserve banks to become bodies corporate and provides they shall have succession for a period of twenty years from their organization.

Every federal reserve bank shall be controlled by a board of nine directors holding office for three years. Three of these members will be chosen by and be representative of the stockholding banks, three shall be "fairly representative of the commercial, agricultural, or industrial interests of their respective districts," and three members shall be designated by the federal reserve board.

The stockholding banks will be classified in each federal reserve district into three general groups, each containing one-third of the aggregate banking capital of the banks holding stock in the federal reserve bank of the district, and consisting of banks of similar capitalization.

In the same fashion will be chosen the representatives of commercial, agricultural, or industrial interests, with the condition that they shall in no case be connected with any bank or banking association. If it should appear at any time that a director does not fairly represent the commercial, agricultural, or industrial interests of his district he may be removed by the federal reserve board.

One of the three directors chosen directly by the federal reserve board shall be designated as "federal reserve agent." It will be his duty to make regular reports to the board and to act as its official representative.

Forbids Transfer of Stock

Section 5 forbids the transfer or hypothecation of the capital stock of federal reserve banks.

Section 6 prescribes that if any shareholder of a federal reserve bank shall become insolvent and a receiver be appointed, the stock held by it in said federal reserve bank shall be canceled and the balance of its value, after paying all debts due by such insolvent bank to said federal reserve bank, shall be paid to the receiver of the insolvent bank.

Disposal of Earnings

Under section 7 the earnings of each federal reserve bank shall be disposed of as follows:

"After the payment of all expenses and taxes the shareholders shall be entitled to receive an annual dividend of 5 per centum on the paid in capital, which dividend shall be cumulative. One-half the net earnings shall be paid into the surplus fund until said fund shall amount to 20 per centum of the paid in capital of such bank, and the remaining one-half shall be paid to the United States; and whenever and so long as the surplus fund of such federal reserve bank amounts to 20 per centum of the paid in capital and the shareholders shall have received the dividends at the rate of 5 per centum per annum herein provided for, all excess earnings shall be paid to the United States.

"Every federal reserve bank incorporated under the terms of this act shall be exempt from federal, state, and local taxation, except in respect to taxes upon real estate."

Other Associations Admitted

Section 8 provides that any national banking association heretofore organized may, within one year from the passage of this act and with the approval of the comptroller of the currency, be granted all the rights and be subject to all the liabilities of national banking associations organized subsequent to the passage of the act. Any national banking association failing to comply with any of the provisions of this act will be dissolved.

Under section 9 any bank or banking association incorporated by any state and having an unimpaired capital sufficient to entitle it to become a national banking association under the provisions of the act may become a national banking association.

Section 10 prescribes that any bank or banking association or trust company of state incorporation or organization may, with the approval of the federal reserve board, become a stockholder in the federal reserve bank of the district in which it is located. In such case the state bank will be subject to the rules and regulations provided for national banks. Failure of the state institution to comply with the provisions of the act will lead to a demand by the federal reserve board for the surrender of its stock in the federal reserve bank and the cancellation and retirement of its shares.

Selection of Federal Board

Section 11 creates a federal reserve board consisting of nine members, including the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of agriculture, and the comptroller of the currency, who shall be members ex-officio; three members chosen by the president, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, for a term of six years each, one such member to be designated as governor, one as vice-governor, and one as secretary of the federal reserve board, and three members chosen by electors of the federal reserve banks.

The directors of each federal reserve bank shall choose one such elector at a meeting to be called for that purpose. The electors shall, upon call of the secretary of the treasury, choose by ballot the three members of the federal reserve board aforesaid, no two of such members to be residents of the same federal reserve district.

Terms of Board Members

Of the members first chosen one shall be elected for a term of two years, one for four years, and one for six years. Thereafter each such member shall be chosen for a term of six years.

The governor of the federal reserve board, subject to the supervision of the secretary of the treasury and of the board, shall be the active managing officer of the federal reserve board. He shall be subject to removal by the president upon a statement of reasons for such removal.

The first meeting of the federal reserve board shall be held in Washington immediately after the organization of federal reserve banks. No member of the board shall have any banking connections. The office of comptroller of the currency is continued.

Details of Board's Power

Section 12 empowers the federal reserve board—

"[A]—To examine at its discretion the accounts and books of each federal reserve bank and to require such statements and reports as it deems necessary.

"[B]—To require an application to permit a federal reserve bank to rediscount the paper of any other federal reserve bank.

"[C]—To establish each week, or as much oftener as required, a rate of discount, which shall be mandatory upon each federal reserve bank and for each class of paper; provided, that the said rate of discount need not be uniform for all federal reserve banks, but shall

Limits on Deposits

Section 13 permits any federal reserve bank to receive from any of its stockholders deposits of current funds in lawful money, national bank notes, federal reserve notes, or checks and drafts upon solvent banks, domestic or foreign. It says:

"Upon the indorsement of any member bank any federal reserve bank may discount notes and bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions; that is, notes and bills of exchange issued or drawn for agricultural, industrial, or commercial purposes, the federal reserve board to have the right to determine or define the character of the paper thus eligible for discount within the meaning of this act; but such definition shall not include notes or bills issued or drawn for the purpose of carrying or trading in stocks, bonds, or other investment securities, except notes or bills having a maturity of not exceeding four months, secured by United States bonds or bonds issued by any state, county, or municipality of the United States.

"Notes and bills admitted to discount under the terms of this paragraph must have a maturity of not more than twenty-five days.

Limit on Outside Notes

"Upon the indorsement of any member bank any federal reserve bank may discount the paper of the classes hereintofore described having a maturity of more than forty-five and not more than 120 days when its own cash reserve exceeds 33⅓ per cent of its total outstanding demand liabilities, but not more than 50 per cent of the total paper so discounted for any depositing bank shall have a maturity of more than sixty days.

"Upon the indorsement of any bank having a deposit with it any federal reserve bank may discount acceptances of depositing banks which are based on the importation or exportation of goods or on travelers' credit, and which mature in not more than ninety days and bear the signature of at least one member bank in addition to that of the acceptor. The amount so discounted shall at no time exceed one-half the capital of the bank for which the rediscounts are made. The aggregate of such notes and bills bearing the signature or indorsement of any one person, company, firm or corporation rediscounted for any one bank shall at no time exceed 10 per centum of the unimpaired capital and surplus of said bank.

"Any national bank may, at its discretion, accept drafts or bills of exchange drawn upon it having not more than four months to run, and growing out of the transactions involving the importation or exportation of goods, or the issue of travelers' letters of credit; but no bank shall accept such bills to an amount in the aggregate to more than one-half the face value of its paid up and unimpaired capital."

May Discount for Members

Under section 14 the federal reserve board, on the application of not less than ten national banks in one district, may authorize the reserve bank of the district to discount the direct obligations of member banks, secured by the pledge and deposit of satisfactory securities; but in no case shall the amount so loaned exceed three-fourths of the actual value of the securities so pledged or one-half the amount of the paid up capital of the member bank.

Under section 15 any federal reserve bank may, under regulations prescribed by the federal reserve board, purchase in the open market bankers' bills and bills of exchange of the kinds and maturities made eligible for rediscount.

Every federal reserve bank shall have power to deal in gold coin and bullion, to make loans thereon and to contract for loans of gold coin or bullion, giving therefor when necessary acceptable security, including United States bonds; to invest in United States bonds and short-time obligations of the United States or its dependencies, or of any state or foreign government; to purchase from member banks and to sell checks or bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions payable in foreign countries, and, with the consent of the federal reserve board, to open and maintain banking accounts with foreign countries and establish agencies in such countries for the purpose of purchasing, selling, and collecting foreign bills of exchange, and to buy and sell checks or prime foreign bills of exchange arising out of commercial transactions which have not exceeding ninety days to run and which bear the signatures of two or more responsible parties.

Deposits of Treasury Money

Under section 16 all moneys in the general fund of the treasury shall be deposited in federal reserve banks, which shall act as fiscal agents of the United States, and thereafter the revenues of the government shall regularly be deposited in such banks and disbursements shall be made by checks drawn against such deposit.

The secretary of the treasury may charge interest on the deposits, but no federal reserve banks shall pay interest on any deposits except those of the United States. The government and the banks shall be the only depositors in reserve banks.

Section 17 authorizes an issue of federal reserve treasury notes not to exceed $500,000,000 plus an amount equal to the amount of national bank notes which may from time to time be retired under the provisions of the act. The notes shall purport on their faces to be the obligations of the United States and shall be issued at the discretion of the federal reserve board and solely for the purpose of making advances to federal reserve banks.

Apply Through Reserve Agent

"Any federal reserve bank," the bill continues, "upon vote of its directors may make application to the federal reserve board through the local federal reserve agent for such amount of the treasury notes as it may deem best. Such application shall be accompanied with a tender to the local reserve agent of collateral security to protect the notes for which application is made equal in amount to the sum of the notes thus applied for.

"The collateral security thus offered shall be notes and bills accepted for rediscount and the federal reserve board shall be authorized at any time to call upon a federal reserve bank for additional deposits of security.

"Whenever any federal reserve bank shall disburse federal reserve treasury notes, it shall hold in its own vaults gold or lawful money equal in amount to 33⅓ per centum of the treasury notes so paid out by it. The federal reserve board may require federal reserve banks to deposit in the government treasury a sum in gold or lawful money equal to 5 per cent of whatever amounts of federal reserve notes may be issued to them. The federal reserve board may grant in whole or in part or reject entirely the application of any federal reserve bank for federal reserve notes.

Notes Become First Lien

"The notes issued to any bank shall become a first and paramount lien on all the assets of such bank.

"Any federal reserve bank may at any time reduce its liabilities for outstanding federal reserve notes by the deposit of federal reserve notes whether issued to such bank or to some other member bank, or other lawful money of the United States or gold bullion, and such reduction shall be accompanied by a corresponding reduction in reserve fund of lawful money set apart for the redemption of said notes and by the release of a corresponding amount of the collateral security deposited with the local federal reserve agent."

Provision is made for an exchange of collateral of equal value to that deposited originally for the protection of federal reserve notes.

Covers Handling of Checks

"It shall be the duty of every federal reserve bank," the bill continues, "to receive on deposit at par and without charge for exchange or collection, checks and drafts drawn by any of its depositors upon any other depositor and checks and drafts drawn by any depositor in any other federal reserve bank upon funds to the credit of said depositor in said reserve bank last mentioned.

"The federal reserve board shall promulgate regulations governing the transfer of funds at par among federal reserve banks, and may exercise the functions of a clearing house for such federal reserve banks, and may also require each such bank to exercise the functions of a clearing house for its shareholding banks."

Limit on Issue of Notes

Section 18 provides that no national banking association shall receive or issue circulating notes in excess of the total amount of such notes which such bank may have outstanding at the time of passage of this act, and no national banking association which may reduce its outstanding circulating notes shall issue circulating notes in excess of the sum to which its outstanding notes shall have been reduced by such withdrawal.

Section 19 provides for the repeal of the law requiring national banking associations before commencing banking business to deliver to the treasurer of the United States certain amounts of United States registered bonds.

Section 20 provides for the repeal of the 2 per cent bonds of the United States bearing the circulation privilege for 3 per cent bonds of the United States without the circulation privilege.

At the expiration of twenty years every 2 per cent bond then outstanding shall be exchanged for 3 per cent bonds without the circulation privilege and all national bank notes then outstanding shall be recalled and redeemed.

Details of Reserve Provisions

Under section 21 every national banking association shall establish with the federal reserve bank in its district a credit balance on the books of the latter institution equal to not less than 3 per cent of its own total demand liability, exclusive of circulating notes, and at the end of fourteen months this amount must be increased to not less than 5 per cent.

After a date fixed by the secretary of the treasury national banking association banks now classified as country banks and situated outside of central reserve cities must maintain a reserve equal to 15 per cent of the aggregate amount of their deposits.

After the date fixed by the secretary of the treasury for the incorporation of federal reserve banks, national banks in such reserve cities shall maintain for a period of twenty-six months a reserve of 25 per cent of their outstanding deposits, and for twelve months thereafter a reserve of 22½ per cent and permanently at the end of thirty-eight months a reserve of 20 per cent of their outstanding funds.

Repeals One Present Law

Section 22 repeals the law providing that the fund deposited by international banking associations for the redemption of its notes shall be counted as part of its lawful reserve.

Section 23 requires every federal reserve bank at all times to have on hand in gold or lawful money not less than 33⅓ per cent of its outstanding demand liabilities, which at the same time shall not be less than 33⅓ per cent of its outstanding federal reserve notes.

Section 24 requires an examination of every national banking association at least twice in each calendar year, and as much oftener as the federal reserve board shall consider necessary. Directors must state under oath to the examiner the character and circumstances of its loans and discounts. In addition to the examination made by the comptroller of the currency every federal reserve bank may arrange for examination of the member banks within its district. Every federal reserve bank shall be bound to furnish to the federal reserve board information concerning the condition of any national banking association. National banking associations in reserve cities shall be examined not less than four times each year.

By C. C. Burford

Crop conditions in most of the counties of the central and southern parts of the state must be reported as generally unsatisfactory. The oats are struggling for existence in the heat and dust of an almost torrid June sun and unless there is an abundant amount of moisture within the next few days (June 18th) it is feared that the wheat and the early oats and to a large extent the late oats and the corn will be sadly deficient. Pastures afford live stock about as much nourishment as an average city pavement and hay and all "roughness" will be scarce and expensive. Dairymen are beginning to feel anxious about feeding conditions and difficult problems confront the raisers of all kinds of live stock. Garden produce has been in most localities a failure and the advocates of a lower cost of living cannot feel encouraged over the prospects of cheap foodstuffs in the southern two-thirds of the state.

Conditions this year are in sharp contrast to the abundant yields of last year, when the oats, wheat and hay were almost fence high and the corn fields flourishing like green bay trees. Corn, a hardy plant and capable of withstanding prolonged drought, soon will begin to feel the effects of the long, hot "spell". Farmers in the southern two-thirds of the state will need large accommodations from bankers and merchants and credit must be largely used. Country bankers are guarding their reserves with care and are advising conservatism and caution for their customers.

Every cloud has a silver lining and should rain-clouds hover over southern and central Illinois during the next few days and spill their contents over the fields the fertile soil of our great agricultural state will rally to the stimulus of abundant moisture and marked crop improvement would soon be noted, especially in the corn crop. There is yet time for a good corn crop with plenty of rains. Should rain be greatly postponed the financial condition of many of the counties in Illinois will be serious.

General Trade Good This Spring

During May and early June merchants in the smaller cities and country towns enjoyed good trade and business was generally brisk. Building and repair lines were fully employed and are yet. The sale of automobiles and other comforts of life was marked and there has been manifested a tendency to enjoy life, which is one of the most wholesome aspects of country life, for when the home in the small town and upon the farm is made attractive then the call to the city will not be heeded. The country roads, one of the real problems of country life in Illinois, have been good for the most of the spring and early summer and travel in automobiles has been easy, making good trade coditions possible. With the coming of the prolonged drought, there has been a marked tendency to decreased expenditures and country merchants now are complaining of "dull" trade.

Crops Better in Northern Illinois

Northern Illinois happily has fared much better than has the lower two-thirds of the state. North of a line drawn east and west roughly about Bloomington there has been, in most localities, plenty of rain with correspondingly better crops. Showers have fallen at frequent intervals and in some places too much rain has been experienced. Good reports, with exceptions, of course, here and there, come from the northern part of the state and this part of Illinois will aid in bringing up the average production for the entire commonwealth. We wish that we might be able to present as good a report from the central and southern parts of Illinois but candor forbids. Good rains will be needed even in northern Illinois, with the heat wave which soon dries the soil now raging, to maintain the good crops started there.

Illinois Notes

R. B. Kessler has accepted a position as teller in the First National of Robinson.

The Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Decatur, a new institution for that city, has opened for business.

Roy C. Bishop, agricultural agent for Livingston county, planned an automobile tour of the central and southern portions of the county with a view of visiting the best farms, some of which are being managed according to the Illinois system of permanent agriculture. Great interest was taken in the work and Mr. Bishop interested hundreds of farmers in his work. B. F. Harris, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, was one of the speakers.

Henry J. Cole, president of the First National of Ridge Farm, Vermilion county, is dead.

It is not believed that drought conditions will affect land values, as such conditions are only temporary and next year doubtless will bring large crops.

The H. N. Schuyler State Bank of Pana pays boys and girls under sixteen years of age six per cent upon savings deposits, sums not to exceed fifty dollars. The bank carries total deposits of $1,319,372.

Willard Wall, formerly with the Pana National, has entered the service of the State Bank of Chicago. He seems to have liked his "boss", L. A. Goddard, who is president of both institutions, and continues to be associated with him.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bruington of Cameron have celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Mr. Bruington is president of the State Bank of Cameron and is said to be "seventy-three years young." Many presents appropriate to the celebration were presented to the worthy couple, the directors of the bank being among the donors.

D. R. Gooch, president and founder of the bank of Gooch Bros. and Company, of Belleflower, McLean county, who spent the past winter in Florida, remembered two of his old-time friends in that town with walking canes made of Florida orange tree wood.

F. D. Marquis, president of the Peoples Bank of Bloomington, has been chosen treasurer of the state board of education, which has the custody of the state normal school at Normal, adjacent to Bloomington.

The Merchants and Farmers State Bank of Sullivan moved into its new quarters about June 15th. The new banking room is among the best in that part of the state and is modern and up-to-date in every respect. William A. Steele is the president and James A. Steele is cashier.

J. E. Reidheimer, soil expert for Kane county, who recently began his work, is preparing to interest the farmers of that county in alfalfa culture. There will be meetings in each township, as well as at Aurora and Elgin, in the interest of the alfalfa campaign. Sangamon county also is making a speciality of alfalfa and two weeks ago "an alfalfa tour" of the county was made in automobiles to interest the farmers in the work. Some of the best alfalfa authorities in the state spoke and at one small town, Williamsville, over one thousand people attended the meeting.

Some of the down-state banks reported deposits at the June 4th call as follows: Commercial-German National of Peoria, $1,988,000; Merchants National of Peoria, $1,988,000; Ridgeley National of Springfield, $1,874,780; State National of Springfield, $1,433,465; State National and State Trust and Savings Bank of Bloomington (allied institutions), $1,206,926.

C. R. Wheeler, president of the First Nationalal of Peoria, is one of the prominent business men of that city who has been good-naturedly cartooned by the Peoria Star.

Filled to its capacity with state bankers and members of their families, the steamer North American left Milwaukee at 9:30 to-night, bearing the members of the Wisconsin Bankers Association on the three-day boat trip that is to constitute the twenty-first annual convention. The entire cabin space was reserved long before the time of departure and the passenger list totaled on Friday night close to 500.

The trip is to include Mackinac Island, Georgian Bay, Sault Ste. Marie, Green Bay, and Sturgeon Bay. Mackinac Island will be reached on Sunday afternoon, the boat departing for Georgian Bay in the early evening and arriving Monday morning. The trip up the St. Mary's river will bring the bankers to the Soo about 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, giving them the opportunity to view the government locks at this point, while to the more daring is offered the chance to "shoot the rapids" in Indian canoes.

Returning through the beautiful waters of Green Bay, landing will be made at Sturgeon Bay at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, with a short interval for an inspection of the fruit district of Door county. The arrival at Milwaukee will be made early Tuesday evening.

Informal dances have been arranged for in the main dining salon on Saturday and Monday nights, and religious services under the direction of the Rev. Paul B. Jenkins, Immanuel Presbyterian church, Milwaukee, will be held in the main cabin Sunday morning. Dr. Jenkins will speak on "The Great Lakes and the Welfare of the West" Sunday afternoon.

The opening meeting of the convention was that of the "veterans" who dined aboard boat at 6 o'clock to-night, adjourning before the hour of sailing. All members in attendance at any of the first five conventions of the association or who have served as president of the association are eligible as veterans.

President E. A. Dow of Plymouth will open the first regular meeting of the convention Monday morning, the invocation being made by the Rev. Paul B. Jenkins. After the president's annual address and reports of Secretary George D. Bartlett, Milwaukee, and Treasurer H. G. Flieth, Wausau, Thomas B. Paton, New York, general counsel for the A. B. A., will speak on "Banking Practices versus Banking Laws." The session will conclude with discussion of taxation of banks and casualty insurance rates. At the last meeting of Group Five a special committee was appointed to consider the advisability of organizing a bankers' mutual casualty company to insure Wisconsin banks against burglary and holdup. This committee will report at this time.

The afternoon session will be occupied with discussion of the report of the committee on insurance of bank deposits, read by Chairman H. A. Moelenpah, Clinton. At last year's convention this committee was continued and authorized to request from the legislature certain amendments to the insurance and banking laws of the state which would overcome objectionable features to the insurance plan proposed. It is expected that some definite action toward the resumption of plans for the mutual insurance company will be made. "A Most Important Development Affecting Banking in Wisconsin" is the subject of a discussion to be led by J. R. Wheeler, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Union, Columbus, Wis., Monday night.

"A Business Man's Review of Business Conditions in Wisconsin," an address by George A. Buckstaff, president of the Buckstaff-Edwards Company, Oshkosh, Wis., will open the Tuesday morning session. Following will come the report of the resolutions committee, the report of the nominating committee, composed of representatives elected by each group, and the election of officers. This session will conclude the regular meetings, although the members of the A. B. A. will meet immediately afterward, as in former years, to elect a vice-president for Wisconsin and a member of the nominating committee to serve at the Boston national convention in October. A short meeting of the newly elected executive council will be held following that of the A. B. A. meeting to elect a secretary appoint committees, and outline plans for the year's work.

Good Crop Outlook

A good crop outlook is reported by the Wisconsin State Board of Agriculture in its June bulletin just issued. Winter wheat is reported 93.4 per cent normal; spring wheat, 95.1; winter rye, 95.14; spring rye, 93; barley, 95.1; oats, 97.3. An apple crop of 90 per cent and small fruits crop of 91 per cent are predicted. It is estimated that the corn acreage will be equal to that of 1912 regardless of the backward season, the percentage planted June 1st being 73 per cent of the total. An increase in the past year of 12 per cent is shown in cleared lands in the northern section.

First National of Erie, Pa., is the oldest bank in Erie county, having been chartered in May, 1863, probably the first day the National Bank Act became effective. Total net profits after deducting losses were $1,551,000 and the total sum given to the shareholders $999,000. This includes an extra dividend of 100 per cent payable in stock, no shareholder electing to take this dividend in cash. No original stockholder of the institution is living.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Several Minneapolis bankers left at the end of the other conventions of the week for Milwaukee to join the "North American." Among them were S. H. Bezoier, of the Security National; C. E. Klassey and John Greenman, of the Minnesota Loan and Trust; P. J. Leeman, First National; E. J. Grimes, Minneapolis Trust, and R. E. Macgregor, Northwestern National.

June atmospheric disturbances in the minds of the typical banker led some of them to trust their lives on the initial special train in a nineteen-mile gasoline car trip from Minneapolis to Anoka, over the Minneapolis and Northern. Besides this trustfulness regarding an unsettled roadbed the bankers permitted the car to be backed down to the Mississippi river, where the Byllesby people of Chicago are erecting a big dam at Coon Creek rapids, and walked over lofty concrete dam cores and open trestle work at dizzy heights, regardless of the future.

Headed by R. W. Akin, Anoka, the visiting bankers were, among others, E. H. Bailey, J. W. Lusk and Kenneth Clark, of St. Paul; from Minneapolis, F. A. Gross, E. M. Stevens, G. F. Orde, V. H. Van Slyke.

Supreme Court Decides Against Trust Company

The North Dakota supreme court has handed down a decision whereby the Northern Trust Company will have to pay the city of Dickinson $645.11, amount of the shortage of J. S. White, former city treasurer at Dickinson. White also was formerly auditor of Stark county and issued a fraudulent county warrant to cover a shortage on city accounts and had the same credited to his city account in the bank. Later it was found the county warrant had been issued fraudulently and it was charged off. Later White was found to be short some $15,000 in his accounts as county auditor and was sent to the penitentiary to serve five years. The surety company resisted payment of the shortage because the city had only offered tax receipts to establish its claim.

Second District Bankers Meet

One hundred bankers attended the second district bankers' meeting at Luverne, Minn., the eleventh annual. A special car carried the Twin City men to the scene, and another the Mankato men. C. H. Christopherson made the address of welcome, noting that represented there was a banking capital of $4,375,000. The district has 200 banks, with $26,000,000 deposits. W. A. Streator, the president, Winnebago City, responded. Officers were elected as follows: President, Emil G. Hage, New Ulm; vice-president, J. B. Ludlow, Rushmore; secretary, G. W. Sugden, Mankato; executive committee, D. O. Wade, Fairmont; M. O. Page, Beaver Creek.

Ingwersen Talks of Iowa Corn Crop

In Minneapolis, on his way to the North Dakota Bankers Association convention at Grand Forks, "Joe" H. Ingwersen, president of the Peoples Trust and Savings, Clinton, Iowa, had his ear to the ground all day. He said he could hear the corn growing back in his state. "Weather like this makes the corn jump, and that is the crop in our state," said Mr. Ingwersen. "Conditions were good when I left."

Montana Banker on the Outlook

The outlook never was better, said T. A. Marlow, president of the Bank of Montana, Helena, in St. Paul. "Our one disappointing feature this year," he said, "lies naturally in our wool growing. The lopping off of the tariff has given wool growing a jolt. There would have been a decrease on account of the ranges being drawn in. There is much more farming. Wool buyers are, of course, taking advantage of the situation and the prices that they would like to offer are so low that they are not offering and consequently are looking for consignments. It is very hard to arrive at an average price of wool for last year on account of the various grades. Say for instance that the average price last year was 19 cents. Well, I believe that by spring our growers who are able to hold on will be able to get around 17 and 18 cents, so that it will not be very bad after all. The true situation in Montana is one of great promise and one of absolute security. Farming is increasing and we will surmount our trouble with the wool business."

On the occasion of its centennial last year the bank issued a booklet showing various historical events occurring in its journey from 1812 to 1912. The business was carried on under the original agreement until 1814, when a charter was obtained from the state. In January, 1864, the bank was reorganized under the requirements of the National Bank Act with an authorized capital of $500,000 and a paid-up capital of $100,000, its present capital. Surplus and profits now amount to $195,000 and deposits to $1,136,500. The officers are as follows: Charles L. Snowden, president; W. A. Edmiston, vice-president and cashier, and T. A. LARGER PAID CIRCULATION IN THE MIDDLE WEST THAN ANY THREE OF ITS COMPETITORS COMBINED

THE NEW CURRENCY BILL

In the news columns of this issue will be found all that is vital in the new currency and banking bill prepared under the direct supervision of President Wilson and endorsed by the democratic caucus of both houses. It will be introduced simultaneously in both houses early next week and differs very materially from the commission plan, which put control absolutely in the hands of the bankers, with the big central bank behind it all. This bill gives governmental control and supervision to a very material degree.

Some of the strong points of the Wilson-Glass-Owen bill are these:

1. It will operate as a safeguard against panics and periods of extreme money stringency through the increase in the power of the banks both in the utilization of reserves and in the issuance of money.
2. By facilitating the securing of money by the banks it will be easier for the business interests of the country to obtain banking accommodation.
3. It gives recognition to commercial paper as the safest possible banking asset.
4. It provides for the re-establishment of the bill of exchange as a credit instrument.

Some of the chief objections raised in congress are:

1. It maintains the present banking system, including the practices and methods which have subjected it to such sharp criticism.
2. Without changing either the banks or the practices it provides for the establishment of an additional system of banks which under ineffective government control will protect the banks and prevent them from becoming involved in difficulties, no matter what their practices may be.

It long has been recognized that the important defect of the existing system, outside of its tendency to collapse at inopportune times, is that it controls the credit of the nation. Moreover, that control has been used to restrict and hamper legitimate business, while speculative schemes in which the banks are directly interested have been promoted.

Many Chicago bankers have been quoted on its merits and defects but one of the clearest visioned in the fraternity, President William A. Tilden of the Fort Dearborn, finds but limited objection. Mr. Tilden said:

"For the reason that it fails to provide a central reserve it is a poorer measure than the Aldrich bill, but it can be said for it that it gathers the reserves now scattered in individual banks into district reserve banks and to that degree it is an improvement over present conditions.

"The trouble with our present financial system has been that our bank reserves are scattered so thoroughly that they are unavailable in a crisis. The reserves are large enough to withstand any stringency if they could be used to advantage, but to be so used they must be concentrated in some central system. It is my belief that the establishment of one central reserve is the best plan that could be put into operation, but if we cannot have that a number of district reserves would be an advance that is needed."

Bankers in large majority are so pleased at the hope of reform in the broader sense that they are willing to concede detail. Objectionable features can be amended if the basic principle is right.

"PERILOUSLY NEAR LOBBYING"

Senator Gallinger having spent a lifetime in politics thought it to his own advantage when testifying in the senatorial lobby inquiry to assail the practices of President Wilson. Most senators of the Gallinger school of economy have been retired by their constituents. His statement that the president has come "perilously near lobbying" failed of the effectiveness intended largely for this reason. The senator appears to think that a sugar lobbyist has rights and prerogatives denied to the president in the constitution. "The president has a right to make his statement in messages to congress," Senator Gallinger declared to the lobby investigating committee, thereby implying that is the only way that the president is justified in communicating with members of congress concerning prospective or pending legislation. From this one would judge that the senator has not recently read the constitution. That document has nothing to say in regard to messages, and makes no distinction between written and oral communication. In Section 3 of Article II it is said that "he (the president) shall from time to time give to congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient." And this is just what President Wilson has been doing. There are vague charges of the use of patronage as a "big stick," but they are entirely too vague to go into details of names or places.

The Wilson platform called in trumpet tones for a revision of the tariff downwards and the people felt in voting for him that he would use his utmost influence in congress to that end. This he is doing to the discomfiture of Gallinger, et al, but to the great delight of the public at large.

Some one should wake the senator up. The old guard is dead and he doesn't know it. There is a new order of things at Washington. In the days of old such an announcement as Secretary McAdoo made about the half billion of emergency currency to move the crops couldn't have happened. It would have gone secretly to certain New York bankers by underground. They would have bought stocks on an almost panicky market to their own profit. McAdoo made it openly and prices began to soar. When the secretary cut the underground cable running out of the comptroller's office he took a hack at all the rest of them, and they'll stay cut. There is a new deal on, not thoroughly appreciated by the Gallinger type.

BRADY TO QUIZ ALL APPLICANTS

The policy of the state auditor's department in the future, according to State Auditor Brady, will be to investigate fully all applications for permission to organize state banks before the permission is issued.

The office in the past has been exercising discretion in the organization of banks only in the issuance of the charter and not in the permit to organize.

WOULD HAVE BANKING COMMISSION

Representative E. E. Miller introduced a resolution providing for the appointment of a joint legislative commission to investigate the subject of banks and banking and to report to the next session of the legislature. It was referred to the committee on municipal corporations. Three of the members of the commission are to be from the house and two from the senate.

BANKS BUY COMMERCIAL PAPER

New York banking institutions are taking on fair lines of commercial paper. The purchases are fairly well distributed over all the maturities, though the short-time paper is naturally given the preference. No concessions are being made from the 6 per cent rate for the best names of all maturities. It is expected that the country banks will follow suit in the near future and become better buyers than they have been for some little time.

SUES BANK

Newcastle, Ind., June 4th.—Clarence H. Beard, an attorney from Indianapolis, has brought suit against the Citizens State Bank of Newcastle, Ind., for $2,500 alleged to be due him for fees in the tax ferret in this city several years ago in which the city sued the bank for $27,000. Beard says he succeeded in compromising the suit for $5,000, but has as yet received no fee.

STATE OFFICIAL CLOSES BANK AT OSBORN, OHIO

Dayton, Ohio, June 18th.—State Bank Superintendent Lattaner to-day closed the Osborn bank at Osborn, Ohio. Deputy Superintendent J. A. Holmes was placed in charge. Lattaner announced that the bank had made bad loans and that the finances had been juggled. The bank was incorporated in 1889 for $30,000.

THE NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL BANK
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

FORECASTING the future, in 1872, the founders of this bank named it The Northwestern. ¶Starting with a capital of $200,000, its capital and surplus are now $5,000,000, and its resources are well over $31,000,000. Deposits nearly quadrupled in the last ten years. ¶It has justified its name: The Bank Has Kept Pace With Its Wonderful Territory. ¶And, having the largest volume of business in the Northwest, it is able to offer unexcelled facilities.

CAPITAL STOCK INCREASED

President Arthur D. Bissell of the Peoples Bank of Buffalo announced that the bank had increased its capital stock from $300,000 to $600,000, the certificate having been filed at Albany yesterday with the secretary of state. Announcement was made that the new stock will be issued at $200 a share and on June 30th a dividend of $50 a share to old stockholders will be declared.

The law requires that the new dividends be given the old stockholders. Mr. Bissell declared that he would be glad to discuss with business men or others who desire to become new stockholders in the bank. The certificate showing the increase in stock was signed by Mr. Bissell and Edward J. T. Newell, secretary.

SIGHT DRAFT CAUSES ARREST

Union, Mo., June 17th.—A man who gave his name as A. J. Johnson, of Kentucky, arrived in this city yesterday and announced his intention of buying a good farm for his son. He soon sought a real estate firm and was shown some farms to-day.

He bargained for a farm lying out from Union two miles, and agreed to pay $8,000 cash, and wrote to his wife to send him a check for the amount.

He gave it to one of the real estate men to mail and in the meantime he said that he was short of ready money and went to the Bank of Union to have a sight draft drawn on the Commercial Bank of Liberty, Ky., for $5.00.

As soon as he had signed the name "A. J. Johnson," P. W. Vitt, the cashier, recognized it as the name of a swindler for whom the State Bankers Association was offering a reward for his capture for getting money under similar conditions from the bank at St. Marys, Mo. He was arrested.

DEFUNCT BANK CASE GOES OVER

Washington, Pa., June 16th.—Following arguments here to-day the suits of John H. Strawn, receiver of the defunct Farmers and Drovers National Bank, of Waynesburg, against James L. Iams, now in the hands of an assignee, and George F. Auld, and the cases of Everly South, trustee, against the same defendants, were continued. They will be heard at a special term of court next September.

Agricultural Development of the Middle West

Address delivered at North Dakota convention by President Joseph H. Ingwersen of the Peoples Trust and Savings, Clinton, Iowa, in which he advocates the adoption of more scientific methods of farming. Points out importance of increasing fertility of the soil

I have been asked to speak briefly on the subject of the agricultural development of the Middle West. Why the honor came to me I do not know, unless some of my good friends thought I must be more or less of a farmer because I hail from one of the great agricultural states of this wonderful country of ours. Most everybody in Iowa was either raised on a farm, or in such close proximity to it, that we may all be fairly classed as farmers. And we are not ashamed of it either, for no state in the Union has made greater progress during the past forty years than the state of Iowa.

In 1870 land in Iowa was worth on the average $20 per acre, in 1880, $23, a very small increase. By 1890 the average value had advanced to $28 and from that time on the advance has been almost phenomenal. In 1900 the average value of Iowa land had reached $43 per acre, but it advanced 123 per cent in the next decade, reaching the almost unbelievable average of $96 per acre in 1910. It would seem as though the limit has been reached, but well informed authorities argue to the contrary.

Dr Curtiss, the dean of the Iowa College of Agriculture at Ames, made the statement in a recent public address that in his opinion the best Iowa farm lands would advance $100 per acre within the next ten years. It is hard for even the most enthusiastic Iowa booster to credit this statement, but in the face of the results that have so far been attained it would not be surprising if time should demonstrate that the doctor did not shoot wide of the mark.

The state of North Dakota is in many respects similar to Iowa. You are primarily an agricultural state and the probabilities are you always will be. Like Iowa you have no large cities, and the prospects for the building of a great city in your state are very remote indeed. It therefore behooves you to bend every effort to the development of your agricultural resources. The entire Middle West has only reached the infant class in the development of agriculture. In Iowa and Illinois our farmers are waking up to the fact that it is one thing to farm land worth $50 per acre and quite another thing to farm the same land when it has reached a value of $250 per acre. It did not require any special ability in Iowa and Illinois to make a success of farming when the best lands could be purchased at the lower figure, but if the farmer would continue to use the same methods after the land became five times as valuable, the bankruptcy court would be his inevitable fate. In the great agricultural state of North Dakota the farmers will have the same problem to contend with. Your lands are bound to double and treble in value, and the methods of farming now in vogue will have to give way to more enlightened and scientific methods. Diversified farming is one solution but more intensive farming is the real secret. We have in the United States as fine land as the sun shines upon, and a climate that is unsurpassed, yet we sometimes hear it stated that in this or that community the soil has become exhausted, the farms abandoned and that the former tillers have sought other employment, thus permitting an economic waste that would be almost criminal even if there were an excuse for it. As a matter of fact the theory that cropping necessarily will exhaust the soil is absurd. China has raised wheat for more than a thousand years on the same land and today produces an average per acre that makes our crop look like the proverbial thirty cents. In the year 1902 France produced 20.2 bushels of wheat per acre, and in 1911 20.1 bushels; Austria-Hungary raised 20.1 in 1902 and 20.5 in 1911; Germany 30.3 in 1902 and 30.6 in 1911; the United Kingdom produced 33.9 in 1902 and 34 bushels in 1911. Doubtless the uniformity of the figures will immediately attract your attention. In the United States, on the other hand, we raised 14.5 bushels in 1902, 12.5 in 1911 and 15.9 bushels in 1912. It certainly ought to be fair to assume that when we attain a reasonable degree of intensive farming, the 1912 yield may be regarded as under the average, notwithstanding the fact that last year was a record breaker in nearly every department of agriculture.

It is not my purpose in this paper to burden you with statistics, but rather to give you my impressions gleaned from the experience a person of ordinary intelligence ought to extract from a residence in an agricultural state covering the greater portion of his life. The pioneer residents of every farming community, when the country is first opened to settlement, instinctively turn to the production of such native crops as can be most easily produced. They are not disposed to make experiments until conditions resulting from the lack of rotation bring to their attention the fact that unless different methods are adopted the profits from agriculture eventually will become a minus quantity. When Iowa was first settled wheat was regarded as the principal crop, but it soon was found that while our soil could be made to produce wonderful yields of both spring and winter wheat, other grains would have to be raised if the fertility of the soil were to be maintained and the farms made as profitable as the increasing values demanded. Early experiments demonstrated that corn could be raised in at least a portion of the state, but it was not believed that it could be grown successfully in the northern third of the state of Iowa. That the calculations of our forefathers were quite incorrect is best proved by the statement that the corn belt now includes the southern third of Minnesota, and I am told that even in North Dakota the farmers who have made a study of it and have devoted the proper attention to seed, planting, and cultivation have been reasonably successful in the growing of corn.

When the Iowa farmer learned that soil and climatic conditions were especially favorable to the culture of corn, he soon discovered that to market the crop to the best advantage it was necessary to convert it into something fit for human consumption, and it followed as a natural sequence that pork and beef supplied the needed vehicle, for in that way he would get the benefit of the soil fertilization so much needed, and which otherwise would be wholly lost.

As a result thereof the state of Iowa has become one of the greatest producers of cattle and hogs in the Union. The pioneer farmer depended for his living on wheat, oats, barley and other small grains, but the evolution of modern farming methods has fully demonstrated the greater profit to be derived from the sale of beef and pork.

As time passed on, and our lands increased in value, it became evident that greater returns must be obtained from year to year, and that ushered in the era of intensive farming. It was found as the country became more thickly settled, and the population of our cities and towns, both in and out of the state, increased, that dairying could be made a successful adjunct of the farm. A few progressive farmers who had read of the benefits derived from silos in the eastern states erected them in Iowa, and while the gain in the number of that wonderful addition to the farm was slow at first, it is exceedingly gratifying to report to you that the manufacture of silos is getting to be one of the really big industries of our state. Factories are being established in cities and villages all over the state, and there is every indication that in the very near future a silo will be found on practically every farm in Iowa. The silo, it would seem to me, can be made of even greater value to the North Dakota farmer than it possibly can be to the farmers of Iowa, Illinois and other Central West states. In our section of the country corn is a sure crop. A failure in that cereal is almost unheard of. It is true that some years the crop is greater than in other seasons, but we never have anything like a complete failure. Furthermore, it is very rare indeed that frost comes early enough in the fall to endanger the partially matured corn crop. From my observations, I judge that Jack Frost is one of the greatest obstacles you have to contend with in your efforts to mature a crop of corn. However, frost never comes early enough, even in North Dakota, to affect the crop seriously before it is ready for the silo. It would seem, therefore, that the silo offers the farmers of North Dakota a wonderful opportunity to diversify their farming operations, and to get into the live stock industry on an extensive scale.

The maintenance of the fertility of our soil is one of the big problems we have to contend with. Our population is increasing at a rate exceeding one million souls per annum, while the available farming lands practically all have been taken up. It therefore is necessary to increase the production of the farms we now have, for we cannot hope to import foodstuffs to any extent from other countries. It is not many years since the United States exported great quantities of grain, cattle, hogs and sheep, but of late years we have had all we can do to produce sufficient to supply the home demand. In Iowa the average production of corn dropped from 41 bushels per acre in 1880 to 32.9 bushels in 1911. The year 1912 was a record breaker and showed a production of 45.8 bushels per acre, but the sixteen-year average preceding 1912 amounted to only 34.8 bushels per acre. Oats dropped from 35 bushels in 1880 to 25.7 bushels in 1911, with 30.1 bushels as the sixteen-year average. The wheat crop in our state makes a better average showing, ranging from 10.5 bushels in 1880 to 13.1 in 1911, with a sixteen-year average of 13.8. The fact that in the year 1912 we raised a crop of oats averaging 44.4 bushels per acre, and winter wheat averaging 24.3 bushels per acre proved conclusively to our farmers that if the proper scientific methods are applied to our farming operations, the crop of 1912 easily can be made the average for a period of years, instead of the phenomenal

J. H. Ingwersen, well-known Clinton banker, was on the program at the North Dakota state convention at Grank Forks this week. Mr. Ingwersen is another of the orators which Iowa can furnish at any time. For example, take Arthur Reynolds or J. A. S. Pollard. And there are others.

Des Moines, June 20th.—Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association will have some new "guests" when the council of administration of the I. B. A. meets in his office in this city next time. Recent group meetings have resulted in many changes in the group chairmen and the recent state convention added three new names to the list. The council of administration as it will remain for the coming year has been compiled by Secretary Hall as follows:

D. L. Heinsheimer, president, Glenwood.
Frank Epperson, vice-president, Eddyville.
H. G. Moore, treasurer, Wellman.
P. W. Hall, secretary, Des Moines.
F. E. Frisbee, Sheldon.

Escapes from Penitentiary

Harvey Lee, one of the worst of the bad men whom Secretary Hall and Detective Gust Patek ran to earth during the past year, escaped from the Fort Madison penitentiary last week when one of a force of men working on the cell-house left a ladder leaning against the wall. Lee was doing two terms of ten and thirty-five years following his conviction as one of the gang which tried to rob the Alburnett Savings Bank last winter and for attempted jail delivery at Marion. Lee, according to Secretary Hall, is a bad actor. The Cedar Rapids police reached the scene of the Alburnett affair within a few minutes after the attempted robbery and descriptions were secured which resulted in Lee's arrest a few hours later. When caught he was cleaning a revolver and a bottle of nitroglycerin was on the table beside him. After he had been jailed, he secured some nitro through the aid of a confederate and was engaged in blowing his way to liberty when the sheriff heard the noise and summoned the police from Cedar Rapids. It was found that the prisoners were armed and a battle took place in which Officer Gillen was shot. Lee was captured, however. Just who shot Gillen is not known. It is supposed that the same confederates who were waiting outside to assist Lee might have fired the fatal shot. Two of Lee's pals are believed by Detective Patek to be the men who tried to rob the Hudson Savings four days later. There was no money loss.

Alleged Forger Captured

G. C. Merritt, a collection agent in Des Moines, seems to have been possessed of more nerve than brains in his recent escapades with various banks at Des Moines, Boone and Ogden. Merritt was arrested by officers for the Iowa Bankers Association and now faces an indictment charging forgery. It is charged that Merritt forged a note for $1,000 and gave it to a bank at Ogden, using the signature of a well-known party there. He next forged one for $750, using the name of a Boone man and attempted to borrow money on it from a bank at Boone. In the meantime he had deposited a check for $200 on the Boone bank with the Central State at Des Moines and a check for $300 on the Capital City State of Des Moines with the bank at Boone. Cashier Grant McPherrin, of the Central State, detected something amiss and he turned the case over to Secretary Hall. The above rather involved system of check kiting was discovered and Merritt was arrested. He has a wife and child. Secretary Hall confesses he is unable to understand what Merritt had in view, but refers to him as a "damphool," which is an exceedingly strong statement coming from Mr. Hall.

New National for Ames

An important change at Ames is announced. The Ames Savings has secured a charter for a national bank which will be run in connection with the Savings. The capitalization of the latter has been reduced to $25,000 so that the combined capitalization will be $75,000. W. D. Meltzer is president; L. B. Spinney, vice-president; I. O. Hasbrouck, cashier. Iowa Notes

The Iowa State Savings at Fairfield has joined the large number of Iowa banks in the million dollar class. The total deposits as shown by late reports are $1,137,383.

The Farmers State Savings at Fairbank, which for a time was having trouble, is again doing business. The state insurance department was in charge of the institution for awhile, but it now is declared to be on a firm basis.

The First National at Remsen has increased its capital stock from $30,000 to $50,000.

Ames College is sending every banker in the state a beautiful birdseye view of the campus at that place, where the members of the Iowa

Bankers Association recently enjoyed a basket lunch during the state convention.

The banks and trust companies at Waterloo have voted to close their doors at noon each Saturday during June, July and August. There are over 100 bank employees in Waterloo who will thus be given a rest from the grind which only the banker appreciates.

The Farmers Savings at Harper has been sold to the State Bank of that place, according to reports received at Des Moines.

T. T. Henryson has succeeded H. T. Henryson as president of the First National at Story City. The latter retired. A. M. Henderson was elected cashier.

Claude Spicher has been chosen cashier of the First National at Swea City.

John Bissett has been elected vice-president of the Farmers Savings at Lacona, succeeding W. Carpenter. Ned McCauley was elected cashier.

Efforts to sell the now famous Atlantic North and South Railroad continue since former Secretary Shaw was unable to "come across" with the amount of his original bid. At the latest sale last week J. J. Hess, who had been associated with Shaw, bid $295,000. But he failed to put up the required forfeiture bond. There were two other bids, one for the north end of the line, $89,000, and the other for the south end of the line, $87,000.

South Dakota Notes

The First National at Clear Lake announces plans complete for a handsome, new two-story structure 50 by 65 feet on the ground.

The state banking department has closed the Citizens State at Fort Pierre. The bank seemed unable to make the financial progress expected of it.

The building of the State Bank at Manchester was destroyed by fire.

A new bank at Veblen, with a capital stock of $20,000, and another at Parker with a capital stock of $20,000 are in prospect. The former will be known as the Security State of Veblen, and the other as the Farmers State of Parker.

Cashier Sig O. Hanger, of the Dakota National at Yankton, has been named Norwegian vice-consul for the state of South Dakota.

The First National at Wessington Springs is being remodeled and when finished will be a thoroughly modern structure.

A dispatch from Pierre states that a charter has been issued to the South Dakota Bankers Association of Clark. Incorporators are F. C. Danforth, J. A. Danforth and F. L. Clisby, all of Parker, and J. AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT OF THE MIDDLE WEST crop yield we are supposed to have been blessed with by a bountiful nature. All this has tended to bring forcibly to the attention of our farmers the need of better farming methods, but it is doubtful if the farmers themselves would have given the subject serious consideration for some time to come had it not been for the work of the agricultural college, the bankers association, and the commercial clubs located in the various cities and towns, who saw the need of work along this line, long before the farmer himself gave it serious thought.

The county I live in, Clinton, was the pioneer Iowa county to undertake the work in a systematic manner. A crop expert was employed, the farmers of the county thoroughly organized into local units, and although the arrangement has been in existence less than a year, there is abundant evidence that a crop expert will be a permanent employee of the farmers of our county. To make the plan a permanent success it should be financed, in part at least, by the farmers themselves. In fact, the man employed by our county refused to consider the position offered him until assurance was received of the financial co-operation of enough farmers to guarantee the continuance of the work for not less than three years.

Our organization operates under the auspices of the Clinton Commercial Club, but is in effect an independent bureau thereof, the agricultural members having a voice in the management of the club, although they have absolute control, subject to the approval of the proper authorities in Washington, over the methods to be made use of in making the work effective. The finances are handled through the Commercial Club, but all money paid in by the farmer members is used for the promotion of the agricultural development work. A portion of the expense is borne by the United States government, and the work done by the crop expert must be approved by the department in Washington through the dean of the Iowa College of Agriculture. Sufficient experiments have been made to convince us that in many parts of the state we can successfully grow alfalfa and other forage crops heretofore considered wholly foreign to Iowa. The soil in different portions of the state needs treatment to adapt it to imported and unaccustomed grasses and grains, but that is what the crop expert is employed for. The state of Illinois has made considerable progress in soil analysis and we must take off our hats to her, but the Iowa legislature is keenly alive to the situation, and I am firmly of the opinion that within the next decade the soil of practically the entire state will be analyzed by the state authorities. It seems to me this movement is one the bankers can well afford to get back of. There appears to be an awakening all along the line, and the farmers, instead of being held up to ridicule as was so frequently the case a few years ago, now are looked upon as business men, or perhaps even more properly, as professional men. The great modern cry is back to the farm. Several agencies are contributing their share to the acceleration of the movement, among which may be mentioned the telephone, the rural free delivery, and last, but not least, the automobile. The telephone puts the farmer in close touch with the markets of the world, the rural free delivery gives him the benefit of the daily paper and the automobile is the advance agent of the good roads movement. The importance of good roads as a factor in the development of agriculture has in the past been minimized, but as the education of the people reaches a higher stage of perfection, attention is forcibly called to the fact that the improvement of our system of country roads is a prime requisite. This subject is even of greater importance in states located farther south where the rainfall is greater and the composition of the soil different than it is here in North Dakota, but even in your state the subject is an important one and merits the thought and energy of the best talent at your command. In Iowa we have been groping in the dark, but progress ever has been the watchword, and our roads, although they still lack much to make them perfect, show a most wonderful improvement over conditions as they existed as late as ten years ago.

The high cost of living is a favorite topic for discussion and most people have a remedy, but the politicians, with a few exceptions, seem to be of the opinion that legislation is the key that will solve the riddle. That it cannot be reduced in that manner is the settled conviction of the well informed, for they know the question is an economic one and must be solved by the application of a remedy that squares with the cause. So long as the present standard of living is maintained the cost will be high, and I doubt if anyone really wants it lowered if it must be done at the expense of the standard. Nowadays everybody wants a telephone in the house; the man who patronizes a hotel demands a room with a bath; the housewife insists that the purchase of a spool of thread carries with it the right to demand its delivery at the home; the laborer declines to work more than eight hours a day; all these things must be paid for, and the consumer is the fellow who ultimately settles the bill. The cost of living is tending towards a higher level, but we can aid in maintaining it at a reasonable equilibrium by the adoption of better and more scientific farming methods.

The great ranges of the West have been cut up to make farms and in that way one source of supply of feeding cattle has been eliminated. This means a revolution in our farming methods, but we will have to come to it. I refer to the necessity of each farmer raising the cattle he expects to fatten for the market, instead of purchasing the young stock from the rancher. If the North Dakota farmer will adapt himself to these changing conditions, he not only will be a positive factor in the maintenance of the cost of living at a reasonable figure, but will enrich himself. The raising of beef cattle will compel diversification in farming, and there is no good reason why the farmers of this great state should not become extensive producers of beef cattle.

You now are known chiefly as a wheat state and so long as you continue along that line it will be impossible to achieve the full measure of success that is the rightful heritage of every farming community, but if your farmers will take up the raising of cattle and hogs, build silos, farm intensively, and work industriously, the reward in a material way will be most bountiful, the increase in your land values far beyond the dreams of the most optimistic real estate agent and the prosperity and happiness of the people will go on steadily and uninterruptedly.

Loans of Spokane banks have increased $310,057.17 since a year ago and $501,462.97 in two months, according to statements issued June 4th at call of the comptroller of the currency. A strong demand for money for improvements, development work and investments is a significant phase of the present situation.

Rains that have been general throughout the Spokane country this week give further assurance of bumper grain crops. Both fall and spring-sown wheat is in excellent condition. The rain came at a time when it was needed most, and the Palouse and Big Bend wheat districts expect a crop fully as big as last year's, if not bigger. In many sections the winter wheat is beginning to head. Some of the finest winter wheat ever exhibited in Spokane was brought in this week by Orris Dorman, vice-president of the Fidelity National, who returned from a trip into Whitman county and eastern Oregon. "Winter wheat prospects in Whitman county are the best I have ever seen," said Mr. Dorman. "The farmer who farms right has prospects for the finest wheat crop he ever had. Much of the wheat stands four feet high. The years of good crops almost always are years of long straw, and a long, healthy growth of straw means a fine crop."

W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National, and a member of the agricultural committee of the American Bankers Association, said on his return from Boise, Idaho, that agricultural development of Idaho was the keynote of the recent convention of the Idaho Bankers Association. "From this standpoint it was one of the best conventions I have ever attended," he said. "The agricultural and industrial development of the state was emphasized throughout the convention. Idaho people realize that through the development of the stock and dairy industries they will be able to secure far greater returns for their alfalfa and other farm products. Miss Grace Shephard, Idaho superintendent of public instruction, the first woman to address a state bankers' convention in that state, told of the excellent progress being made in interesting the school children of the state in better farming. The bankers of Idaho are actively supporting this movement." To further the work of the department in promoting agricultural education, the bankers voted to assess all members and associate members of the association. Each bank with a capital of $50,000 or less will pay $5 a year and each with a capital of $100,000 or more will pay $10 a year. This will furnish a large fund for this work.

Frank C. Paine, secretary of the Union Trust and Savings, returned Monday from a month's trip through the East, visiting among other cities Chicago, New York, Boston, Washington and Philadelphia in the interests of his bank. "Industrial conditions in the East are in splendid shape," said Mr. Paine. "In the Middle Western and Western states indications are favorable for splendid crops. All the factories are running. It was especially gratifying to note the great interest easterners are displaying in the West. Even financial institutions that are not yet operating in the West show the utmost interest in western conditions generally and of the Spokane country in particular. They know Spokane in the East and when they know us better they will enter this field in preference to southwestern sections, where many are now operating."

OREGON CONVENTION

The 1913 convention of the Oregon Bankers Association, held in Corvallis June 16th and 17th, furnished a number of interesting addresses. Among the speakers whose names appeared on the program and their subjects were the following: H. A. Blodgett, president Harvey Blodgett Company, St. Paul, Minn., "The Banker's Opportunity as an Educator"; W. L. Clark, auditor Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, Spokane, who was billed to talk on the collection of out-of-town items; R. H. McMichael, bond manager of the Dexter Horton National of Seattle, discussed the American Institute of Banking and its relation to the bankers of Oregon; Lydell Baker, editor of the Pacific Banker, was down for "An Ideal Banker from Indiana," and E. H. Sensenich, cashier of the Northwestern National, Portland, treated of rediscounting as a necessity and as a possibility. E. G. Crawford, vice-president of the Lumbermens National of Portland, told of the relation of ocean commerce to the development of Oregon and Peter Hume, president of the Bank of Sellwood Portland, related some of the impressions of the country banker.

Officers of the Oregon Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, Leslie Butler, president Butler Banking Company, Hood River; vice-president, W. L. Thompson, president American National, Pendleton; secretary, J. L. Hartman, Hartman and Thompson, Bankers, Portland; treasurer, M. G. Hope, president United States National, Vale.

President's Address

President Leslie Butler, in his annual address, said: "We have met here to celebrate the eighth anniversary of our association. I am sure we can look back over the work that has been done with some degree of satisfaction. When our association was first organized we had practically no banking laws. Through our efforts we have to-day as good banking laws as any state and far better than most of the states. And we are fortunate in having a bank superintendent that knows the duties of a banker and has the courage to see that they are not trifled with; so that the true banker can do business without the annoyance of a novice or designing men as competitors.

General Conditions

"The condition of the banks of our association is good; the future prospects of our state are very good. With our varied resources, climatic conditions, mountain scenery, good water, and our enterprising people, I am sure there is no state in the Union that has a brighter future than the state of Oregon. I say this after a visit to nearly every state in the Union in the last five years. I have lived in this state thirty-one years and have no thought of ever making my home in any other.

American Institute of Banking

"We have one chapter of the American Institute of Banking in this state that we should be proud of. I recently attended their fourth annual meeting in Portland. The work they are doing certainly is to be commended. They have a membership of about two hundred and fifty. They hold regular meetings and receive instruction that will very materially aid them in their duties as bankers. I would advise that other chapters be organized wherever it is practical to do so.

Agriculture

"It is needless for me to give you statistics about the agricultural conditions of our country. The papers are full of them and we know there is a great work to be done. With the grain and live stock industries in their present condition, there is every reason why we should encourage the movement 'Back to the Farm.' And we should do all we can to help the efforts of others along that line. Our legislative committee is to be congratulated on their efforts with our lawmakers last winter and I think we our fortunate in having such a cable and energetic body of men as we have in our Agricultural College at Corvallis. Our college is recognized all over this country as one of the leading agricultural colleges. The possibilities for live-stock and grain industries in Oregon are not to be surpassed by any state in the Union.

Horticulture

"The advantages of horticulture in Oregon are not surpassed by any state and are equaled by but few. Our leading varieties of apples can be grown successfully in but few places. With the opening of the Panama Canal we shall be able to ship our fruit to the European markets at a much lower freight rate. So I would advise our fruit men to take good care of their orchards, and to those who are contemplating putting out new orchards I would caution great care in selecting the right locality. The chances for the fruit business are

Banking

"The general banking laws of our country certainly need overhauling. With private banks, national banks, state banks, savings banks, postal savings banks and trust companies, the general public have but little conception of the workings of any of our banks. It is not much wonder that there is a lack of confidence in the minds of many people as to the safety of the banks with $300,000,000 out of circulation at this time. We, as bankers, should realize that our banking system is in need of a change in its working machinery. We seem to be afraid to make a suggestion as to what should be done. In the readjustment of our currency system we could, at the same time, change our banking system so that there would be but one kind of bank, and only one kind of currency, and that issued only by the government. With a strict enforcement of law, we might look for the re-establishing of lost confidence.

"The remarks I have made with reference to changes in our banking system are made with the hope that we may have some discussion on the subject at this meeting that may be of benefit to all. I would like our association to go on record as favoring some plan that would tend to relieve the uncertain condition that now exists."

Bright Outlook for Northwest

E. G. Crawford, vice-president of the Lumbermens National, of Portland, Oregon, in speaking of the outlook for the Northwest, said:

"Our outlook for crops throughout the Pacific Northwest was never better and our lumber business is very satisfactory. The era of speculation has ceased. We are looking at things more rationally. Bankers and merchants are scanning their credits and watching their business as they have not done for several years, and a good healthy basis is being arrived at on which to base our business. This leads me to view the situation locally with equanimity, as I am a firm believer in the watched pot never boiling over! I was in Chicago a few weeks ago and one of the bankers said to me, 'Why is it you bankers from the Pacific Coast always come in here smiling? You are the third man from the coast in here to-day, and you all have a smile on your faces.' I said to him, 'Because we have the greatest country on earth—have confidence in it—and do not fear the future. We have good crops, plenty of roses and a climate that does not vary fifty degrees in temperature in twenty-four hours, like you have here. This makes you nervous—makes you see things. Out there we simply cannot have the blues for more than a few days at a time, because we believe in the country and in the people.'"

Rediscounting as a Necessity and as a Possibility

Edgar H. Sensenich, cashier of the Northwestern National, of Portland, had for his subject "Rediscounting as a Necessity and as a Possibility." He said in part:

"Our present system of banking will not be tolerated much longer. Since the panic of 1907 much thought and discussion have been spent upon the development of a new system under which panics will not occur, financial stringencies will become less marked and less frequent and the movement of crops and legitimate commercial activity can be financed readily and adequately. No system can be permanently satisfactory that does not provide the means by which the banker can readily adjust himself to the variable but proper demands of his customers. The banker should be provided with a system under which he can easily convert his good but unmatured bills receivable into a medium of exchange that will be acceptable to his customers. Rediscounting should be countenanced and a certain market made for the paper.

"Some institution with currency issuing powers should be provided the banker to which he can take in time of need his approved bills receivable and receive for them currency that will be accepted in settlement of the demands made upon him. Necessarily this institution must be so strong that its currency will be accepted unquestionably from one end of the country to the other at its face value. Only the government or some great institution under government supervision or control can issue such currency. With such an institution in operation ever prepared to buy or discount approved short-time notes or other evidences of credit based on commercial transactions, and issue therefor its currency, bankers would have no difficulty in financing the legitimate demands of commerce and trade, and panics could make no headway against prompt and persistent payment of deposits."

Lauds the Bankers

Peter Hume, president of the Bank of Sellwood, Portland, said: "In my opinion, in considering the various occupations that people engage in, bankers hold first place, they having in their care as custodians thereof the greatest thing in all the world—that wonderful thing called 'money.' By it the vicious may destroy the work of the virtuous and prudent and cause distress and misery where nature designed pleasure and happiness. By its possession the best and most desired things may be had and even the natural order of things may be changed and life to be where desolation held the right of way."

"The Banker's Opportunity as an Educator"

Harvey A. Blodgett, president of the Harvey Blodgett Company, St. Paul, spoke on the opportunity of the banker as an educator. He said in part: "The banker who gives purposeful consideration to the neglected side of education and in doing so touches human lives and directs them into safe and conservative channels, helps to cure one of the defects of our educational system. Not only that, he fixes a higher standard of morality in his neighborhood, for the serious-minded are not as a rule immoral and the money saver abhors the company of spendthrifts. And if that alone is not sufficient compensation for his efforts, he will see reflected in his own business and profits the splendid results of closer communion with the people who call him their banker."

NORTH DAKOTA CONVENTION

The 1913 convention of the North Dakota Bankers Association was held in Grand Forks June 17th and 18th. Meetings were held in the city hall. The convention was called to order Tuesday morning by President R. S. Adams of Lisbon, and the address of welcome delivered by Mayor M. F. Murphy, of Grand Forks, and responded to by Lewis F. Crawford, cashier of the Interstate Bank of Billings County, Sentinel Butte, vice-president of the state association. After the annual address of the president there were reports from Treasurer H. E. Sox, of Edgeley; Secretary W. C. Macfadden, of Fargo; Karl J. Farup, of Park River, chairman of the executive council, and standing committees of the association. After the appointment of committees by the president adjournment was taken.

Tuesday afternoon after discussion of the reports of the standing committees, George Woodruff, of Joliet, Ill., talked on farm finance and N. F. Hawley, treasurer of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings of Minneapolis, and chairman of the school savings bank committee of the American Bankers Association, spoke to the North Dakota bankers on the subject of the school savings bank. Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National of Minneapolis, was down on the program for an address on the good farming movement in the United States. During the recess which followed each group of the association held a meeting for the purpose of nominating a member of the executive council.

Wednesday morning Detective Burns, of the Burns National Detective Agency, talked on a "New Era in the Detection of Crime," and the Hon. L. E. Birdzell, chairman of the state tax commission, discussed bank taxation. J. L. Bell, of the First National of Bismarck, had for his subject "A Cross Section of Early American Finance," and Joseph H. Ingwersen, president of the Peoples Trust and Savings of Clinton, Iowa, told of "The Agricultural Development of the Middle West." Mr. Ingwersen's address will be found printed in full elsewhere in this issue.

Wednesday afternoon Dr. Franklin L. McVey, president North Dakota State University, spoke on capitalizing farming operations, and Dr. A. E. Winship, editor of the Journal of Education, Boston, Mass., delivered "The Banker's Vision." The new executive council met immediately after adjournment of the convention.

Tuesday evening the annual ball was held at the Auditorium. There also were music, moving pictures and vaudeville. Wednesday afternoon in Lincoln Park a splendid musical program was provided by the ladies of Grand Forks.

Officers of the North Dakota Bankers Association during the past year were: President, R. S. Adams, president First National of Lisbon; vice-president, L. F. Crawford, cashier Interstate Bank of Billings County, Sentinel Butte; secretary, W. C. Macfadden, cashier Commercial Bank of Fargo; treasurer, H. E. Sox, president Citizens State of Edgeley.

President's Address

President R. S. Adams in his annual address said the past year has been one of unusual prosperity, not only in North Dakota, but throughout the country at large. Membership of the association shows a gain of twenty-six as compared with a year ago. Referring to the committee on taxation, the speaker said that while perhaps not much in the way of direct results has been accomplished, much information has been placed before the taxation commission and the board of equalization, which it is hoped before long will result in the banks of North Dakota being placed on a just basis of taxation as compared with other moneyed interests of the state. President Adams said that at the present time the assessment of bank stock is out of all proportion to the assessment of moneyed capital otherwise employed and that this is a situation which has prevailed for some time.

In speaking of the work of the legislative committee, attention was called to the "Blue Sky" law, which, while not all that could be desired, is a long step in the right direction and will go far towards protecting the unsuspecting investor as well as the purchaser of farmers' paper. It is believed that after a few years of active operation this law undoubtedly can be improved by amendment. Laws were passed governing the amount which banks may invest in banking house furniture and fixtures and permitting the banks to hold 25 per cent of their loans and discounts in loans on real estate. The speaker said that the legislative committee of the association probably accomplished as much in the way of killing pernicious legislation as in being instrumental in having passed that which was beneficial. Regret was expressed that the measure introduced in the house and defeated there, which attempted to give to the banking board the power to control the multiplicity of banks and the location of banks where there is no necessity for banking facilities, should have met such a fate, for, said President Adams, "I am convinced that in many instances banks have been located where there is no necessity for them and in numerous instances two, or possibly three, banks have been located in small towns where there is scarcely room for one. While these numerous banks may be able to exist for the present, there is a day of reckoning coming when some must succumb and it will then become a case of the survival of the fittest."

Referring to the better farming movement in North Dakota, attention was called to a law enacted at the last session of the legislature, permitting counties by action of their commissioners to furnish money for this work, and some counties already have availed themselves of this privilege.

Speaking of currency reform, President Adams said that in his opinion one feature which has not been incorporated in any of the measures thus far presented to congress ought to be given some consideration. He believes that the bankers themselves should have a voice in their control or in the selection of the men who are to control them; that the control of both national and state banks should be in the hands of a banking board consisting of three members and that one member of these boards, either national or state, should be selected by the bankers themselves: the member of the national banking board to be elected by the American Bankers Association and the member of the state banking board to be elected by the state bankers association. "At the present time," said the speaker, "the billions of dollars invested in bank stocks are absolutely without representation in the matter of their control."

The School Savings System

N. F. Hawley, secretary and treasurer of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings of Minneapolis, in talking to the bankers on the operation of a school savings system, commented on the spirit of extravagance prevailing nowadays. He said: "The tendency of American life is to spend rather than to economize. It can be overcome only by persistent instruction of the children while young. Unfortunately the family does not always afford instruction in thrift. We are turning to the school for assistance. The teaching of thrift in order to overcome our thriftlessness, in saving, in order to meet the tendency to waste, in accumulating slowly rather than in getting rich quickly, is so necessary in America, and means so much to the happiness of the individual, the family and the prosperity of the community, that the schools will not be able to resist the demand for incorporating this instruction in their regular course."

The convention was called to order yesterday morning. Address of welcome was delivered by Robert Garland, chairman of the finance committee, city council of Pittsburgh. President Beymer then delivered his annual address as president of the association, after which reports were heard from Secretary D. S. Kloss and the council of administration, followed by reports of Treasurer A. D. Swift and the various committees of the association. H. P. Bope, vice-president of the Carnegie Steel Company, talked on banking and business and the Hon. E. A. Hayes, member of congress from California, spoke on changes that should be made in the American banking and currency system.

The trust company section will meet this morning and there will be an address on the preparation of wills by Daniel S. Remsen of New York City. E. E. Emerick is president of the section.

This morning Joseph Chapman, of Minneapolis will talk on agricultural development and vocational education. There also will be a debate on the subject, "Resolved, That National Banks be Given the Powers of Trust Companies," the affirmative being supported by Albert T. Eyler, of the Union National, and George Rankin, Jr., Central National, Wilkinsburg. The negative will be taken by William W. Allen, Jr., Philadelphia National, and Edmund Williams, Tradesmens National. Alternate for the affirmative is J. A. Price, Iron and Glass Dollar Savings, and for the negative, Charles B. Engle, Pennsylvania Company for Insurance. The men supporting the affirmative are members of the Pittsburgh Chapter, A. I. B., and those taking the negative belong to the Philadelphia Chapter.

After the election of officers for the ensuing year, selection of time and place for the next annual convention and installation of officers-elect, adjournment will be taken.

Friday afternoon the bankers witnessed a baseball game between New York and Pittsburgh and in the evening there was a vaudeville and smoker at the Pittsburgh Athletic Association. At the Hotel Schenley there was a concert by the Pittsburgh Festival Orchestra, followed by supper for members and their guests, and dancing.

This afternoon there will be a championship baseball game between the western and eastern Pennsylvania bankers and at 2:30 an automobile ride covering points of interest in and about Pittsburgh. At 7:30 a farewell dinner at the Hotel Schenley will be tendered the bankers.

Officers of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, A. S. Beymer, cashier Keystone National of Pittsburgh; vice-president, Montgomery Evans, president Norristown Trust; secretary, D. S. Kloss, cashier First National of Tyrone; treasurer, A. D. Swift, cashier Elk County National, Ridgway.

Address of Henry P. Bope

Henry P. Bope, vice-president of the Carnegie Steel Company, Pittsburgh, talked on banking and business, discussing the appalling extravagance prevailing nowadays, which, he said, is not confined to the individual, but exists also in the case of the government, and perhaps is more apparent there than anywhere else.

"It is conceded that the nation is growing," said Mr. Bope, "and in the nation the various state and municipal organizations. And it is further conceded that this growth brings in its train certain needed and additional costs of government; but it is a striking fact that while organizations are applying to their methods, and to their organizations themselves, the great principles of efficiency, but little attention has been paid by our officials and legislators to these same principles, recognized as so necessary in the conduct of their private business." As a result of the extravagance existing these demands require capital beyond the ability of the money-loaning institutions to care for, which he believes to be the bankers' view of the situation.

Speaking of developments and improvements which have been effected of recent years, Mr. Bope said: "We must find a way of increasing our liquid capital to take care from time to time of these developments, which are just as likely to arise in the future as they have in the past. The inventive genius of man must ever be reckoned with, and there will be constantly arising new demands which must be taken care of. This is the purpose of the bank and banker, and the wisest and most far-seeing of your cult are constantly preparing to reckon with such changing conditions."

Immigration must play an important part in the development and progress of the country, said the speaker, and he believes that we should not put any test upon immigration which will serve to keep out any class which is desirable to carry on the great works of this nation.

In concluding his talk to the bankers Mr. Bope said: "Standing at the threshold, as I believe we do, of another upward movement in national and world life—a movement, like its predecessors, for the uplift of the race in a higher regard for humanity itself, a broader plane of civilization and a more intelligent consideration of those great principles of government which insure life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness to the individual unit of the state—to whom shall we look if not to you for that conservative direction of the means to promote the end we all so greatly desire?"

GROUP EIGHT, OHIO

There was a meeting of the executive committee of Group Eight of the Ohio Bankers Association at the Canton Country Club, June 19th. There are eight counties in the group.

Gaffney, S. C.—At a recent meeting of the directors of the Insurance Trust Company, C. M. Smith was elected president, J. N. Lipscomb vice-president, and D. A. Brockenton treasurer and manager.

VIRGINIA CONVENTION

The twentieth annual convention of the Virginia Bankers Association was held Thursday and Friday of this week and is in session to-day (Saturday). Headquarters were at the Hotel Chamberlain, Old Point Comfort. Thursday morning the convention was called to order by the president of the association, Thomas B. McAdams, in the ball room of the Chamberlain. After the annual address of the president, Secretary Walker Scott, of Farmville, reported, being followed by reports from Treasurer Julien Harrison Hill of Richmond, Attorney George Bryan of Richmond, and Chairman of the Executive Council W. B. Vest, Newport News. After the committee reports the Hon. Robert L. Owen, chairman of the banking and currency committee of the United States senate, talked on improvement of the banking and currency system. The convention then listened to the reports of the various group chairmen and adjourned for lunch.

Thursday afternoon there were addresses by M. G. Field, cashier of the National Bank of Orange, on "Some Ups and Downs in the Banking Business"; Edward James Cattell, Philadelphia, "The Dawn of a Brighter Day"; Westwood Hutchison, cashier National Bank of Manassas, who told of some of the problems of a country banker, and H. G. Proctor, ex-president of the Richmond Chapter, A. I. B., on the young man in banking. Thursday evening at nine o'clock the committee on state bank legislation reported, after which adjournment was taken until Friday morning.

The next morning after the nomination of officers, B. F. Harris, of Champaign, Ill., ex-president of the Illinois Bankers Association, talked on "The Soil and the Man," being succeeded on the program by J. J. Scott, cashier of the Lynchburg Trust and Savings of Bedford City, whose subject was "The Relationship the Bank and Community Bear to Each Other," and the Hon. Cornelius A. Pugsley, ex-president of the New York Bankers Association.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the convention in 1910, Friday afternoon was used for the assembled bankers to bring up for discussion under the head of new business any matters pertaining to the banking business in Virginia. The afternoon program was opened with an address on banking and agriculture by Joseph M. Hurt, cashier of the Citizens Bank of Blackstone, after which the members participated in discussions germane to the business of banking. Immediately after the adjournment of this session the new executive council held a meeting.

One of the features of the delightful program of entertainment provided was a boat trip to Washington Friday. The association served a buffet supper and in addition there was music and other attractive entertainment. Judge Charles F. Moore of New York, the Hon. Edward James Cattell of Philadelphia, the Hon. Cornelius A. Pugsley, of Peekskill, N. Y.; Jos. C. Taylor, of Richmond, and other attractive speakers delivered short and humorous addresses. Arrangements were made to provide for the badge of the association to be recognized as a means of admission to the private galleries of the senate and house, which are in session. Arrangements also were made for choice seats for the baseball game at American League Park between Washington and Detroit.

The officers of the association during the past year were as follows: President, Thomas B. McAdams, cashier Merchants National, Richmond; vice-presidents, W. B. Vest, Newport News; W. M. Addison, Richmond; C. C. Tiffany, Warrentown; V. Vaiden, Farmville, and J. W. Bell, Abingdon; secretary, Walter Scott, cashier Planters Bank, Farmville; treasurer, Julien H. Hill, cashier National State and City Bank, Richmond; attorney, George Bryan, Richmond.

Banking and Agriculture

Jos. M. Hurt, cashier of the Citizens Bank of Blackstone, in speaking of the bankers' interest in agriculture, said:

"The more money there is in the state, the more there will be in the banks. It is very important that bankers should try to cultivate and increase the prosperity of the people, because banks cannot be rich unless the people are rich. Increase of material wealth among the people, of per capita wealth, means increased deposits in a very direct way." Mr. Hurt said this applies to the city as well as the country banks. "It is very plain," he said, "that in a country district a bank must depend upon the farmers for its deposits. This is no less true in the city, for the merchants in the city are dependent upon the farmers and the city banks are in part dependent upon the smaller country banks for deposits. Thus we see that a large part of our resources goes back to agriculture and in order to increase the one we have to foster the other."

Banking Legislation in Virginia

President Thomas B. McAdams, referring to the work of the legislative committee of the association in his annual address, said:

"The work of your committee on state bank legislation has indeed been painstaking and thorough and they submit for your consideration a bill redrafting all the banking laws of the state. Among a number of changes covered by the bill are the following:

"1st. Giving the commissioner of banking more discretion in the matter of granting new charters, thus preventing the organization of banks by persons who, as individuals, are unworthy of the confidence of the community.

"2d. Granting the commissioner more specific powers toward compelling banks to conform their actions to the law and providing a more simple and expeditious way of winding up the affairs of failed banks than is possible under the present statutes.

"3d. Limiting the establishment of branch banks and also the classes of business in which a bank of deposit may engage.

"4th. Clearing up doubtful questions as to the respective rights of the bank and its customers and prescribing certain safe limits within which loans of institutions must be made.

"While in a bill of this length there will naturally be some provision which will not be pleasing to every one, yet the general effect of its passage will be so beneficial to the banking and business interests at large, one can well afford to bury his personal objections to this or that limitation in the realization that the general good of all is being protected. As a matter of policy, it would seem advisable for separate bills to be drafted covering each of these suggestions, so that if for any reason the whole bill should not be adopted, a few at least of these changes which seem to be most desirable, if the interests of the depositors and stockholders of our state institutions are to be properly guarded, may be enacted into law."

Edward James Cattell, statistician, Philadelphia, had for his subject "Dawn of a Brighter Day." He told of the wastefulness of the American people, but believes that better times are coming. In concluding Mr. Cattell said: "When I talk of the dawn of a brighter day, I speak in the broadest sense of the word, because I think that new day will find a broader utilization and a more intelligent utilization of the natural resources of the country, coincident with a more intelligent and conscientious employment of the faculties and powers of the people resident within the limits of the republic."

Westwood Hutchinson, cashier of the National Bank of Manassas, said: "One of the problems which the country banker has to deal with is getting directors to take such interest in the bank as will make them a great factor in advancing the interests of the institution. Country banks are of necessity left largely to the management of the cashiers, and the examination of average committees appointed by the bank is much like a Mother Hubbard garment—it covers everything and touches nothing."

J. J. Scott, cashier of the Lynchburg Trust and Savings of Bedford City, said in part: "I would say as an evidence of the value of true relationship between a bank and the community, show me a place where it exists and I will show you a place of thrift and prosperity."

H. G. Proctor, cashier of the Commonwealth Bank, of Richmond, told of the opportunities afforded the young man in banking, of the increasing number of young men who are adopting that business as their profession and of the opportunities afforded by the American Institute of Banking in fitting young men to master the details of the banking business.

M. G. Field, cashier of the National Bank of Orange, talked on some of the ups and downs in the banking business, injecting a great deal of humor into his remarks, which was much enjoyed by those who listened to him. He related some of the experiences which have befallen him during his banking career.

HULBERT LIKES NEW CURRENCY BILL

Edmund D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust of Chicago, in reviewing the new currency bill, expressed himself as very well satisfied with it as a whole and said that there are few provisions contained therein which he cannot approve. He thinks one objectionable feature to it, however, is the limitation of $500,000,000 on the amount of currency that may be issued by the federal reserve banks, as the present bill seeks to provide currency for the ordinary business of the country, and the $500,000,000 limit seems to Mr Hulbert to be unreasonable.

'I am not the least disturbed because the present bond-secured notes of the national banks are to be left as they are," he said. "They have been called bunglesome and inelastic, but they are sound. Our bank notes are good anywhere in the country and men accept without question notes issued by banks in towns they never heard of. But more than that, it would be next to impossible to get rid of them. The big problem, of course, would lie in the disposition of the 2 per cent government bonds by which the bank notes are secured. Even the most ardent supporters of the Aldrich plan realized that difficulty.

"The proposition was to exchange the 2 per cents for bonds bearing 3 per cent, but so far as I have discovered neither republicans nor democrats want to go before the country with a proposition to increase the interest charge 1 per cent on some $750,000,000 of the government's indebtedness. It would be desirable, of course, to have one kind of circulating notes, but that does not seem possible."

Speaking of the reserve features of the bill, he said that he did not expect much disturbance from that source and that city banks in his opinion would not lose much in the way of country bank deposits. Any reduction in the amount of such deposits probably will be offset in a reduction in the amount of reserve required to be carried, which under the proposed law is 20 per cent, as compared with 25 per cent under the present law.

"One particularly pleasing feature of the bill to me," said Mr. Hulbert, "is that it guards against inflation in a way that the Aldrich plan did not. The notes that are to be issued by the federal reserve banks are to be counted a part of the reserves of the national banks, and the power to levy an interest charge on them will insure their prompt redemption when there is no need to keep them out."

ASKS APPOINTMENT OF COMPTROLLER FROM ILLINOIS

Senator Lewis this week presented to Secretary McAdoo the name of E. N. Hurley, president of the First National of Wheaton, Ill., as a candidate for comptroller of the currency. Senator Lewis introduced Mr. Hurley to the secretary of the treasury, and while he did not press the secretary for a declaration on the comptrollership, he gave Mr. Hurley a strong indorsement.

RETURNS FROM EUROPE

Byron L. Smith, president of the Northern Trust Company of Chicago, has returned from abroad. Mr. Smith said that general conditions there as affecting the average citizen never were better; that business is active everywhere and that apparently the people are saving money. "Berlin's money stringency," he said, "slackened trade somewhat and investors' confidence in American securities was hurt by the 'Frisco affair, for which Americans are entirely blamed, although French backers concerned are regarded as culpable as anybody. It will behoove American banking interests doing an international business to exercise the utmost care to see that no charge of bad faith can be made in the future."

SECRETARIES BOWMAN AND KEYSER continue to bat 1.000 in the matter of early choosing of convention dates.

BOWMAN'S 1914 Kansas aggregation will convene at Wichita, May 21st and 22d, and the Keyser three-rings will be held the two days preceding, May 19th and 20th, meeting-place to be determined.

ALL secretaries who care a dern will pick early dates and will keep away from the first full week in May, avoiding the A. B. A. Executive Council dates.

BANKER ANDREW J. GRAHAM has been found guilty of doing things over west, without the consent of one of the Chicago daily newspapers.

BANKER GRAHAM wants the new Pennsylvania depot near him rather than way down at 12th Street, and his "monumental bluff" merely is the using of his popular bank to give the people concerned and interested an opportunity to say by signing a petition what they want done about it.

THIS is too nearly akin to the I. & R. to suit the Chicago press, which never circulates petitions to find out the will of the people. The papers decide for the tax-payers as a shorter and quicker route.

"WE believe," Banker Graham's petition makes the people signing it say, "that the west side plan as proposed is the only concrete and practical plan capable of immediate development and construction." Banker Graham thinks he will get 100,000 persons to sign the petition.

IS there anything wrong in the wording or in the signing of it? The paper wants to know "who is paying expenses?" Banker Graham might ask embarrassing questions in return but he doesn't fight by innuendo. He pays his own freight and stands up for the "West Side" against all comers. That's why he's so strong over there.

"DICK" HAWES has given it out that his swollen ankle was injured in a tennis game. That's only to catch the tennis vote at Boston for "Treasurer" Hoopes. In reality he got it choking a big Gulf tarpon to make him give up the hook. Most everything you read in this column is true.

ANDREW JAY FRAME, of Waukesha, who made the hit of the Oklahoma convention, has had his notable address printed in pamphlet form. "Facts vs. Fallacies in Banking Reform" is the title.

THE press of Oklahoma and the Southwest went into raptures over it and the patent insides, down there, are full of it. Mr. Frame will send a copy on request.

HE analyzes the ten panics of United States financial history and proposes a simple remedy. Get his prescription.

OUR Iowa correspondent with the true news instinct has started the 1914 campaign with four candidates for the Iowa presidency. We should like to see the list grow.

JOHN McHUGH, president of the First at Sioux City, and ex-president of the Iowa association, has compiled his answers to the list of questions sent out by the U. S. senate committee on banking, for private circulation.

EVERY banker in Chicago and in Iowa, and contiguous territory, knows the answers are sound, intelligible and clothed in good English.

REALLY the McHugh answers should have extended circulation but the author is too modest. Perhaps a term on the Big Council will work a cure.

REPORT has it that "the Law resolution failed at the Idaho convention and wasn't mentioned at the Oregon meeting."

IDAHO and Oregon are a long way from Philadelphia; not so far from Minneapolis.

EDWARD TILDEN could have had a nice notice, right in this column, for his Delavan "come back" circus and picnic, by sending an invitation to the proper address.

WHEN as a youngster Edward carried water to the elephant for a pass to the circus he resolved that when he grew to be a man every boy in Delavan should go in free at least once a year to see the clowns.

HE started it this year and each year hereafter he will give one big blow-out for the Delavan people and the people roundabout for miles.

THE "drys" are not doing a thing to Speaker McKinley for throwing them down in the very hour of their expected triumph.

HIS pledges another time will be two-name paper, or have collateral attached before becoming a negotiable instrument.

E. J. BOWMAN of Anaconda, was in the city this week drinking in the dope on his new 1914 Winton Six. He says the boulevard tinklers are no good in this country. "It takes some car to take a five mile hill on high." Nothing less will suit Col. Bowman.

W. G. Edens received an invitation to "c'mon over" and be vice-president of a big Coast bank this week, as well as numerous congratulatory messages upon the new highway legislation in Illinois.

IF you smiled when Edens was elected president of the "Illinois Highway Improvement Association" you should apologize at once. He delivered the goods.

ONE enthusiastic member of the Big Council says: "If Farnsworth drops out, as some say he intends, I'm for Edens for secretary, yes, and for bringing the headquarters to Chicago."

COL. FARNSWORTH was over at Boston recently and the convention committee expressed the hope that "everybody will stay over all of Friday" which is to be an all-day's entertainment with lots doing.

SOME of those going on the big Chicago Special have said they'd rather be in Boston than anywhere else on that particular Friday. The train committee very likely will schedule a special return train for those who wish to remain for the fun.

WHEN Boston is doing so much for her guests it wouldn't be polite to leave when "the show is only half over."

THE very earliest of the "foreigners" to register at the Pittsburgh convention were: Fred A. Crandall, vice-president of the National City Bank of Chicago; Newton D. Alling, vice-president of the National Nassau Bank of New York, and Charles M. Prince, assistant cashier of the Bank of North America, Philadelphia.

H. R. ELDREDGE, the newest ex-president of the Texas association, has removed to New York to engage in the duties of vice-president in the National City Bank.

THERE are now three ex-Texans in the big bank, Talbert, Eldredge and James Stillman.

THE Texas convention unanimously indorsed Secretary J. W. Hoopes for treasurer of the A. B. A. and predictions of his election at Boston were numerous.

JOSEPH ROJESKI, a Pennsylvania private banker, tried to evade his liabilities by the bankruptcy route, but was arrested in Philadelphia and held for trial. The Italian laborers in his former location are short $75,000 hard-earned money.

A. D. GRAHAM of Baltimore was a busy man at the Maryland convention.

A. S. BEYMER of Pittsburgh, as president and host to the Pennsylvania bankers had a busy time of it the last two days of last week.

J. H. JOHNSON, president of the Peninsular State, at Detroit, stands up for the proposed new currency bill. He can see every emergency provided for.

WARE & LELAND say that some banking circles think the adoption of the new currency and banking bill may revive security trading from recent low levels. Not prices but trading.

THE HANCHETT BOND CO. quotes "Agricultural High School 5's" from Mississippi, which shows that the banker-farmer agitation for better schools in which to teach better farming is producing a crop.

PRESIDENT A. S. BEYMER of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association was chosen at the Pittsburgh convention to represent the state on the nominating committee at the Boston convention in October.

HENRY M. WELLS, president of the National City Bank of Brooklyn, will represent New York on the nominating committee.

MISSOURI bankers want the Mississippi and their own big river improved before the government embarks in the railroad building business in Alaska, Guam, Porto Rico or Honolulu.

AND they are right about it!

THE new Mexican cabinet, it is said, will be composed of expert gun-men.

THE HONORABLE SENATOR LODGE (the Colonel's friend, too) is in very Dutch for lending his mailing frank to the Sugar Trust. Whose frank did Bro. Perkins use?

THEY are to have a "Banker's Corporation" (born and bred in old Virginia), down in New York with $10,000,000 capital stock. It is to be a securities company. For real money invested there is a bonus of 40 per cent "common."

"THOSE girls with the slashed skirts must be regular cut-ups," said our friend Bowman as he boarded the Anaconda Flyer.

"The bill proposes to transfer reserves from national banks in the present reserve cities to federal reserve centers in which country banks later will have 15 per cent in reserve, divided in three directions. At the same time the central reserve city banks will have reserves of 20 per cent of the demand liabilities and divided in three directions also. This will require the city reserve banks to carry a larger amount of idle money. Under the present system a reserve in another bank is a working reserve and the bank owing it has the benefit of it. This law eliminates that feature, and in my mind is a handicap that should not be placed on the banking interests of the country if the greatest efficiency is to be secured from our currency."

E. A. Dow on Conditions in Wisconsin

President of the Badger association reviews activities of the bankers during the past year. Strongly condemns proposed guaranty of deposits law

On March 24, 1892, through the invitation of the Bankers Club of Milwaukee, a number of bankers assembled at the Plankinton House for the purpose of organizing a state bankers association. The registration list at that meeting showed one hundred and thirty-seven names of men present who were interested in forming such an organization. From this small beginning we have steadily grown year by year, until our membership at the present time numbers about eight hundred.

Many who were instrumental in perfecting the organization have retired from active duties, leaving their work to be assumed by younger men, while not a few have been called from their earthly labors to eternal rest.

We find in the proceedings of that first meeting the purposes for which the association was formed, viz.:

"To promote the general welfare and usefulness of the banks and banking institutions of this state, and to secure uniformity of action in the consideration of questions regarding the financial and commercial usages, customs and laws which affect such interests, and especially in order to secure the practical benefits to be derived from personal acquaintance, and from the discussion of subjects pertaining to financial and commercial affairs."

As we are now twenty-one years old it might be well at this time to look back over the past twenty-one years and consider whether the existence of our association has been justified or not. Has membership in the association been of any benefit to us? Has it been useful to us in obtaining a better understanding of banking conditions? Has it been instrumental in the upbuilding of conservative banking, so that it has been helpful in gaining for us the respect and confidence of the people of our respective communities? I believe all these questions can be answered in the affirmative.

The many benefits to be derived through membership in an organization like this must appeal to every one in the banking profession. It not only tends to broaden our ideas, but enables us to profit by the wisdom and experience of others and prevents us, in a measure, from being bound up solely in our own institutions, and helps us to have a higher ambition than the mere accumulation of wealth.

It always has been the aim of this association to disseminate, so far as possible, information upon such matters as would be useful to its members in obtaining a better understanding of existing conditions. It has been thoroughly demonstrated that this association has been one of the strong factors in the maintenance of conservative banking methods for which Wisconsin is noted. We have stood for wise legislation and for all measures that would strengthen the banking laws, and assist in the promotion of a more efficient banking system; thereby gaining for us the respect and confidence of the people. As in the past, so in the future, must we stand for all that is good in advancing not only the interests of our own individual institutions, but for the principles that will assure the welfare of the whole country.

The past year has been one of activity in the affairs of the association, and it has been the effort of your officers to make its influence felt in banking circles as well as by aiding and supporting all measures that would be advantageous to the state at large.

It has been my pleasure to attend all but two of the group meetings held during the year, and my only regret is that it was impossible for me to be present at all of them. The meetings have been well attended, and it is most gratifying to note the interest and enthusiasm displayed.

The different sections of the state have interests that concern, more or less, the banking institutions of each group, and it is at such meetings that we can discuss those things that relate more especially to our own individual needs. The interchange of ideas and opinions can not fail to be beneficial and of service to us in our daily business.

It is hard to understand why any bank in the state should refuse to become a member of this body, and who are unwilling to cooperate in a work that ought to be regarded not only as a privilege, but a duty as well. Yet there are a number who fail to realize this and are not even inclined to bear the expense of a representative to either the group or association meetings. They certainly are depriving themselves of the many advantages to be gained from sharing in the rich benefits they might obtain at so little cost.

While I believe these group meetings to be of inestimable value and that they are the backbone of the association, I would like to go further and see county organizations formed, which would enable the bankers of each county to meet regularly in a business and social way, to become better acquainted, to get a clearer understanding of each other's methods of doing business, and, by working along harmonious lines, be able to regulate the little things that so often come up and annoy us. Competition was never more keen in banking circles than it is to-day, and the mad rush for business at almost any cost makes it all the more advisable for us to get together in a spirit of friendliness and fellowship and make it possible to place competition on a more fair and equitable basis. Too many times in order to secure business and swell footings, inducements are offered at the cost of legitimate profits, and credit extended beyond safety. Much of this might be avoided if we were willing to advise with each other on matters of importance affecting, not only our own institutions, but business in general. The "get-together" proposition in my estimation can not be overdone.

The subject of agricultural development and vocational education has become one of the leading questions of the day, and is one which the state bankers' associations throughout the country have taken up and are working out with the agricultural colleges in their respective states. The desire is to co-operate with the farmer for the betterment of agricultural conditions, and to point out to him the advantages to be gained through the knowledge of more scientific methods of farming, and to demonstrate what can be accomplished by putting into practice these advanced ideas.

Realizing that the progress and the prosperity of our state can be greatly increased through the encouragement of farm production, and that better farming conditions certainly are possible, then it is the duty of the banking fraternity to do all within its power to render every assistance to the farmer and to the cause of improved farming.

The people of this country are beginning to realize more and more the necessity of increased production to meet the demand of the enormous consumption of our ever-increasing population.

The raising of good crops is one of the surest means of increasing the wealth of the nation, as well as to regulate materially the high cost of living. It can therefore be readily seen that the prosperity of the banker is, in a marked degree, dependent upon the success of the farmer, and by working in conjunction with him we are not only helping to improve his condition, but our own as well, and that of the community at large.

Our agricultural committee are entitled to much credit for the interest they have taken in this important work, and although they have had but a small amount of means at their disposal, nevertheless they have put enthusiasm into their work that must show good results in the future.

Dean Russell of our state agricultural department has on several occasions expressed his earnest appreciation of the valuable assistance rendered by our association along agricultural lines.

"Farming," says Roger W. Babson, "must be encouraged so as to be kept attractive, as we need more farmers. Teaching must be better paid, for we need stronger teachers. On the farms and in the school houses the future of America depends, and we should do everything possible to raise the efficiency of both."

For a long time our banks have been assessed as a rule on a much higher valuation than other personal property, and as a consequence we have been obliged to pay more than our just proportion of taxes, and although protests have been made through the legislative committee, as well as by individual banks, against such discrimination, we have not been able to secure recognition or get relief. The disposition seems to be to force us to bear this unfair burden for the privilege of doing a banking business. How to provide a remedy for our present method of taxation is a question in which we are all interested, and one that should receive our careful attention. I would suggest that a special committee on taxation be created at this convention for the purpose of investigating thoroughly the mode of taxation in other states, and to formulate by co-operating with the tax commission some plan that will place us on a more equal basis with other interests. At the several group meetings a similar committee was appointed to confer with any committee that might be appointed by the association, and through combined efforts make a strong appeal for the consideration of our rights.

It is unhappily true that our bankers have little influence in the halls of legislation, as we are considered as belonging to the so-called "special privilege" class. I trust the time will come when our motives will not be looked upon as purely selfish, but our advice sought in matters of legislation in which banking and commercial interests are affected.

Bank promotion seems to be the order of the day and charters are being applied for in large numbers. While I have no desire to suggest anything that would deprive a locality of banking facilities where needed, yet I believe that the banking laws should be amended, providing for some form of discrimination in the organization of banks; which should be done either through the banking department, or a state banking board, similar perhaps to the system adopted by some other states. My attention has been called to resolutions recently adopted by the state banking board of North Dakota on the prevention of unnecessary banks, which shows their attitude against allowing banks to start where the field is already covered, or where the population or business is insufficient to maintain a strong institution.

We are all aware that there is at the present time a bill before the legislature calling for the compulsory guaranty of bank deposits. It is known as the "Husting bill" and is similar to the one that was in the legislature two years ago and which failed to pass at that session. As I view the situation we must accept one of two things: either the compulsory guaranty of deposits, something that is extremely obnoxious and looked upon as a dangerous proposition by bankers, and one which I fear would be a great menace to the sound banking system under which we are now operating; or else, the organization of the mutual insurance company of which a tentative plan, you will remember, was presented at our last session for the approval of our members. After a thorough discussion of the plan at that time it was found it would not be feasible to adopt it, unless we could secure through the legislature amendments to both the insurance and banking laws. A resolution was presented and carried to ask for such an amendment at the next meeting of the legislature. This has been done and we are assured the request will be granted. In fact, the amendment to the insurance laws already has been enacted, and we are now in a position to perfect the organization if thought advisable.

The impression has gained credence among many members of the legislature that we were not acting in good faith with them, but were simply holding up the insurance proposition in order to delay or defeat the guaranty of deposits. At a recent hearing before the senate committee on corporations, on this subject, we endeavored to correct this impression, and to satisfy them that we were sincere in our actions in reference to the insurance plan. While we appreciated the fact that conditions do not warrant the necessity of adopting either of these measures, there being no apparent demand by the people for them, yet the fact remains that many members of the legislature are determined to make us accept one or the other. The insurance company appeals to me as the only solution of this problem, by which the bankers can have control and protect themselves from the unwise and unjust law of guaranty of deposits. This is a matter in which we are vitally interested, and I urge you to give it your earnest and thoughtful consideration and decide whether we prefer having this insurance company formed to be under the control of bankers, or accept the compulsory guaranty of deposits, to be controlled by state authorities and whicch always will be made a political issue.

In the report of the commissioner of banking for the year 1912, we find the following:

"It is gratifying to report at the outset that no bank failures occurred in Wisconsin in 1912, nor, indeed, have there been any failures of banks operating under our state laws since July, 1904. Thus a period of over eight years, embracing the panic of 1907, from which Wisconsin banks emerged scathless, has passed with a perfect score, a record unparalleled in the history of banking in this country. No better evidence can be given of the practicality and efficiency of our banking laws, and of the system of supervision established thereunder."

Also the commissioner says, "I state without exaggeration and without fear of contradiction that banks operating under the Wisconsin law never were in better condition than now."

Does it not seem inconceivable that after such a report as that made by the commissioner of banking, that the question of the guaranty of deposits should be made an issue at this time, and that anything should be proposed that would in the least reflect upon the efficiency of the banking department under whose supervision and watchful care we are operating?

MAKE CHANGES IN CURRENCY BILL

The administration banking and currency bill introduced in congress this week contained four important changes from the draft as published in these columns last week. The changes are:

1. Retention in the bill of the provisions for the gradual retirement of the present bond secured bank note currency, amounting to $712,000,000, and the substitution therefor of treasury notes based upon the proposed federal reserve banks.

2. Permission for country banks to deposit one-third of their reserves in other banks than reserve banks subject to the approval of the central board of control.

3. Permission for district reserve banks to initiate the rate at which they will discount for other banks, also subject to the approval of the central board of control.

4. Authority to federal reserve banks under regulations prescribed by the central board of control, not only to buy but to sell in the open market bankers' bills, cable transfers and bills of exchange.

P. F. McCarthy, former banker and real estate dealer, and Alfred Robyn, formerly his confidential clerk, have been named as defendants in an indictment returned by the June grand jury before Judge Kersten, charging embezzlement.

The complaining witness against them was Ellen Fennessy, who charges that she lost $2,100.

McCarthy, who was head of the banking and real estate firm of P. F. McCarthy & Co., with offices at 3857 South State Street, was tried about a year and a half ago before Judge McGoorty on a similar charge, in which Thomas White was the complaining witness, but the court, after hearing all the testimony, directed the jury to find the defendant not guilty, because the testimony did not sustain the charge in the indictment.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

John J. Flannagan, president of the Stockyards National, South St. Paul, who with associates has placed 25,000 head of Texas cattle for breeding in the Northwest, and who has spent four weeks analyzing the general situation, said: "An admirable plan has been adopted by the beet sugar buyers. A bad scheme has been worked out by the wool buyers from Boston.

"In Montana, when the beet sugar scare came up over the tariff buyers told the farmers to plant usual crops and that they would pay the same prices in 1913 as in 1912. This is a gigantic contract when one considers there are 30,000 acres growing 18 tons of beets at $6.50 a ton. Wool buyers have done what they can to depreciate wool values on account of the tariff. They have not viewed the matter in the same broad-minded manner. As a result millions of pounds of wool are lying in the warehouses. A man from Chicago, however, has bought several million pounds at 17 and 18 cents, the amount paid last year. I do not think the Boston people will get much wool at 11 cents. Aside from the fight on wool, which will turn out for the growers, the situation looks wonderfully prosperous."

Bankers Discuss Currency Legislation

Currency reform is discussed by Twin City bankers: F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, said: "I do not know enough about the proposed law to comment on it. It will undoubtedly be changed before it becomes a law. The United States has outgrown the present system and we should have something to take its place immediately. This should take precedence over any other matter with the possible exception of the tariff."

A. A. Crane, vice-president First National: "What we must have is a more satisfactory system of monetary regulation by which there will be a greater amount of liquid credits. I believe some law following the Aldrich currency bill's general lines would be acceptable. The policies are desirable if they can be had in some safe way."

J. A. Latta, vice-president Northwestern National: "Nothing could be more desirable than some more advanced system of banking that would meet the needs of the nation now that it has gone beyond the point where the present very good banking law can be extended to take care of its business. A more flexible form of banking credits is needed."

E. H. Bailey, president St. Paul First National: "I have seen only excerpts of the new bill. I do not think it would be just to express an opinion until I have read it. I am confident able men will try to work out the best kind of a law."

D. S. Culver, president Merchants National: "I do not think President Wilson intends to give the country a currency law it does not want. The present bill may be so amended as to make it a good one. I would want to read the bill before expressing an opinion."

G. H. Prince, chairman Merchants National: "I am inclined to believe the men in charge of the bill will see to it that the best possible measure is passed. Like others I want to read the bill before saying what I think about it."

James W. Lusk, former president of the National German American, said the bill in present form does not add to the Vreeland act and that it fails to answer the purpose for many things required and should cover more ground in its provisions.

New Bond Issues

Bonds and bond sales stick in the limelight in the Northwest. The Minneapolis city council has authorized sale of $100,000 waterworks bonds to the East Jersey Pipe Company, New York, 4 per cents, at 95. They run ten years. It approved purchase of 10,700 feet of pipe at about the same amount. The comptroller was authorized to advertise $927,000 bonds for July 10th, at 4 per cent, running from two to thirty years. The state investment board will take $15,000 educational building certificates of the state, but are not so sure about $200,000 prison certificates. No bids were received for the latter. L. C. Spooner, Morris, Minn., suggested that the farmers would finance the deal under the right conditions. He said: "There are thousands of farmers over the state with money on deposit in local banks, getting not to exceed 4 per cent interest and averaging only about 3, who do not know that they can get these prison certificates. Any one of these farmers would gladly take a $500 certificate at 4½ per cent, and some of them more than one, and be mighty glad to get them."

District Associations to Consolidate

The First and Second District Group Bankers Associations will be consolidated, the plan being proposed by the executive council of the First District association. The First, or Grand Forks group association, under the consolidation, will be the largest in the state, and will include Grand Forks, Pembina, Walsh, Cavalier, Nelson, Ramsey, Benson, Towner and Rolette counties. Under the consolidation plan all meetings will be held in Grand Forks.

Duluth's financial Commissioner (it has commission form of government) proposes to adopt the bargain counter sale of $100,000 in certificates of indebtedness for water and light improvements. The State of Bowman, N. D., has bought the Bowman County Bank, and has moved into the $28,000 brick building of the latter bank.

Fifty-seven Minnesota banks which own real estate outside of Minnesota aggregating $200,000 in value will have to pay Minnesota taxes on that amount, instead of deducting it from the value of their bank stocks, under an opinion given to the state tax commission by W. J. Stevenson, assistant attorney-general. The commission has the list of this property and will take steps immediately to place it on the tax rolls. The law regarding assessment of banks allows the value of their real estate holdings to be deducted from the value of the stock in fixing the personal property assessments, as the land is assessed separately. The opinion holds that as the state gets no tax revenue from real estate holdings of Minnesota banks outside the state, the banks cannot deduct the value of the outside real estate.

E. N. Saunders, president of the Northwestern Fuel Company, which was organized in 1875 with James J. Hill as president, is dead. He was director in the First National, Merchants National and Northwestern Trust Company, of St. Paul.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

By C. C. Burford

Since our last report of crop conditions the regions of the state which have been stricken with one of the most severe June droughts ever known in Illinois have been generously soaked with rain and there is great rejoicing among the bankers and farmers of the "dry" districts. How much good the rain has done can not be easily estimated in dollars and cents, yet suffice it to say that the corn crop, the great staple of this corn-producing state, virtually has been saved by the good rains of last Saturday, Sunday and following days. The entire drought regions of the state, especially the lower two-thirds of the state, have reported good rains and there is every evidence that the corn crop now will gather strength. Some land owners think that damage has been done to the corn, but with a favorable season from now on a fairly good crop may be expected. In many localities the stand of corn is poor, while much of the replanted corn is naturally very backward.

The early oats have been injured without a doubt and there are reports that many fields will not be cut, although it is believed by good judges that there will be some early oats harvested. Nevertheless, the oats have been injured to such a large extent that their loss will mean much to the financial condition of hundreds of farmers and to many bankers as well.

Some judges of crop conditions place the damage to the crops at one million dollars, while other optimistic persons place the value of the rains at one million dollars also. These may be very general figures but there is no denying that the crop damage in Illinois, especiallly in oats, has been great, while the beneficial effects of the general rains have been enormous as well. Hay, straw and other feeding items will be scarce and high, while garden vegetables will be rare and very expensive, thereby tending to increase rather than decrease the cost of living at a time when that question has become almost a national issue. Meat, butter and milk will have an upward tendency and fruits are likewise high. Some fruits, such as berries, were almost a total failure, although cherries and apples are abundant.

U. of I. Experts on Crop Situation

The agricultural department of the University of Illinois has given to the press a general statement of crop conditions throughout the state which bankers will find to be of interest. The greatest sufferers this year have been some of the richest counties in the state, where the lands are the highest in price, and from Danville west to Champaign, Decatur, Springfield, Jacksonville and Quincy and south over the lower half of the state the drought was severe. The University statement follows:

"Illinois crops, aided by recent rains, are fine in the northern and western parts of the state. The great corn belt of central Illinois has suffered, especially in the counties of Champaign, Douglas and Piatt. Southern Illinois has been dry, but at that the crops are ahead of last year."

Despite the fears occasioned by the drought University of Illinois experts, who gave the above report, are inclined to believe that the crops in general will pull out well, although oats and corn have suffered in central Illinois. Prof. O. S. Fisher, of the soil fertility department, has returned from a tour of the state. "Wheat in southern Illinois is the best I ever saw there," he said. "It is far ahead of last year. Conditions in the north and west were good, even before the rain. The corn belt has been the greatest sufferer, but the rainfall, nine-tenths of an inch on Saturday and Sunday, did much good in this section. The oats are gone. Farmers are writing in to ask advice. They are turning their cattle in the oat fields and also planting sow beans and cowpeas. Where clover was turned under in central Illinois corn stands are a failure. The damage would have been complete here in a short time had it not been for the rain, whose value cannot be estimated."

L. A. Goddard and D. R. Forgan at DeKalb

Leroy A. Goddard, president of the State Bank of Chicago, and president of the board of trustees of the Northern Illinois State Normal School, located at DeKalb, delivered the diplomas to the graduates at the recent commencement. The address of the day was delivered by David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank of Chicago. There were 125 graduates in the class. John W. Cook, formerly president of the Illinois State Normal University at Normal, a veteran of forty years in Illinois teaching and known to many bankers who have forsaken teaching for banking, is the head of the DeKalb Normal.

County Soil Expert Advises Alfalfa

Fifteen automobiles whirled through the southern section of Kane county on a week's campaign to "put alfalfa on every farm in Kane county." The campaign was under the direction of Professor P. G. Holden of Chicago, aided by J. E. Readhimer, newly retained soil expert of the county. Scientific farmers have agreed that, with the rising value of land, dairy farms of northern Illinois must reduce their pasturage and grow more substantial milk producing feed. It is the purpose of the

W. C. White Addresses Insurance Men

William C. White, president of the Illinois National of Peoria and vice-chairman of Group 2 of the Illinois Bankers Association, addressed the banquet of agents of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company which was served by Agent S. C. Rodenberg of Peoria at the Creve Coeur Club in that city. Mr. White emphasized the part which insurance plays in the making of a man's commercial standing. He began his address in a humorous way but soon changed to a serious discussion of the real importance of insurance in business and in public and private life and in the general organization of economic conditions.

New State Banks in Illinois

State Auditor Brady has issued a permit for the incorporation of the Oswego State Bank of Oswego, Kendall county, with capital stock of $30,000. The permit was given to C. L. Burkhart, J. V. Jessup, L. F. Burkhart, E. S. Todd and L. F. Shoger.

The Citizens Bank of Frankfort, Will county, has been given a permit to organize, F. L. Hasenjaeger, Frank Folkers, Charles Elsner, H. F. Stellwagen and John Kampe holding the permit. The capital will be $60,000.

State Banks in Prosperous Condition

Auditor of Public Accounts Brady has issued a statement of the condition of the 660 state banks in Illinois at the commencement of business on June 5th. The last statement issued was of April 5th. Since that time fourteen new state banks have been organized and are now transacting business.

The total capital, surplus, contingent fund and undivided profits of the 660 banks is shown to be $137,348,532, an increase since April 5th of $2,904, 789. The total deposits (including due to banks) is $714,232,782, an increase of $4,719,506. Cash and due from banks aggregate $180,102,485, an increase of $8,708,238. The per cent of reserve of deposits (including due to banks) is 25.21.

Savings deposits, subject to notice, is $292,933,683, an increase of $4,227,596. There is also an increase of $9,356,292 in demand deposits, subject to check, the total being $274,555,520.

There is a decrease of almost $7,000,000 in loans on collateral security, the total being $228,520,487.

Hotel Jefferson Adds Rooms

Bankers who attended the last convention of the Illinois Bankers Association and who are familiar with the Jefferson Hotel in Peoria, which house was the headquarters of that convention, will be interested in knowing that two additional stories will be built at a cost of $37,000. The Jefferson daily turns away patronage and the additional room is absolutely necessary. Peoria, being a large convention city and in many respects the cross-roads of the state, demands abundant hotel space and the Jefferson is striving to keep pace with the commercial development of the city.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

The organization of a mutual company for the insurance of bank deposits and of another and separate company to insure banks against burglary are the chief results of the twenty-first annual convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, held aboard the steamer North American during a three days' trip to Mackinac Island, Georgian Bay, and intervening points.

The definite organization of the mutual insurance company, which will be known as the Banks Deposit Limited Mutual Insurance Company, closes a question that has been before the Wisconsin bankers for several years and practically assures the dropping of the compulsory insurance plan by the state legislature if the agreement made at the recent hearings at Madison holds. There will be no further delay in putting the project on foot. An amendment to the original resolution to submit the question to a referendum vote of the state bankers was defeated and a committee consisting of S. M. Smith, Janesville; F. W. Humphrey, Shawano; and Secretary Geo. D. Bartlett, Milwaukee, was immediately appointed to perfect the organization.

Action was taken on the proposed insurance company at the Monday afternoon session, immediately after the reading of the report of the special insurance committee appointed last year, by the chairman, H. A. Moehlenpah, Clinton.

The report, in brief, informed the members of the committee's successful work in the last session of the legislature, resulting in the passage of amendment to existing laws by which the new mutual company will be made possible.

"Your committee," reads the report, "in conjunction with the legislative committee, have secured the passage of an amendment to the insurance law as per bill No. 277, laws 1913, which allows our company to write a maximum single risk as may be fixed and specified by our by-laws, thus doing away with the limitation of three times the average policy as presented in the tentative plan last year. We wish also to report that amendments have been offered to the banking laws which overcome some further objections, namely: the indiscriminate granting of charters for state banks which was so strenuously objected to by many of our members. Assembly bill No. 230 provides for the banking commissioner to refuse charters, if in his judgment the territory where bank charter is sought for is already covered by banking facilities, or because parties applying for same may be inexperienced or otherwise unfit to operate a bank. This bill has passed the assembly and we feel confident from assurances from Madison that it will be passed with very slight amendments, if any, by the senate."

The committee in charge of the preliminary organization of the insurance company also will take the necessary preliminary steps toward perfecting that of the Mutual Casualty Company, authorized at the same meeting, following the report of the special committee appointed at the last meeting of Group 5 to investigate the matter.

The plan for the insurance company, briefly outlined, contemplates the creation of a reserve fund by paying ½ of 1 per cent of deposits each year for a period of three years and in addition to this loan the mutual company ½ of 1 per cent for the first year. This reserve or surplus would be used in carrying out the guaranty proposed in the insurance policy. The bankers maintain that under this plan a fund seven times as great as that proposed in the Husting bill now before the legislature would be created. To be specific, it would be a book account, but every bank in the state, either state or national, that joins would be back of the guaranty in case of necessity. The plan contains a clause providing that six months' notice shall be given depositors if a bank intends to cancel its policy.

The members of the American Bankers Association, met at the close of the last session as in previous years, and elected H. A. Moelenpah vice-president for Wisconsin.

Owing to a delay in starting from Sturgeon Bay on the last leg of the journey, the North American did not reach Milwaukee until 3 o'clock Wednesday morning, although it was planned to dock at 7:30 Tuesday night to allow out-of-town bankers to make train connections.

This proved the only alteration in the original plans, however, and the returning bankers

The boat left as planned Saturday night, making the first stop at Mackinac Island Sunday afternoon. An hour's stop at Sault Ste. Marie gave the bankers opportunity to inspect the new government locks at that port Monday afternoon and Sturgeon Bay was reached Tuesday noon, the bankers spending the early afternoon inspecting the fruit orchards of the district.

Wireless service was at the disposal of the newspaper correspondents accompanying the bankers or anyone aboard wishing to use it. Dancing parties were held in the main cabin Saturday and Monday nights and religious services were conducted Sunday morning by the Rev. Paul B. Jenkins. Every facility of the big new passenger steamer was placed at the convenience of the members and their families, even to the playroom and sand pile for the children of the party, of which there were not a few.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

Bank clearings during the past week have been quite large and in excess of the corresponding period of last year. There has been a good demand for money from all general sources. Rates were firm at 5½ to 6 per cent on call and time loans, with the greater bulk of loans made at the latter figure. Commercial paper was in fair offerings and was discounted at 6 per cent. New York exchange was in fair offerings and demand and the premium rate was stiff at 25c per $1,000 between banks. The St. Louis bankers are following a very conservative policy and St. Louis financial institutions probably are in a stronger position than those of almost any other city in the country.

Tries Bad Check on Bank

St. Louis police are puzzled over a shabbily dressed man, describing himelf as John Adamson, 49, who has lived in St. Louis "off and on for forty years but has no settled place of abode." Adamson walked into the National Bank of Commerce Tuesday and presented a check made payable to bearer for $100 and bearing the purported signature of Tom Randolph, president of the bank. The teller saw the signature was not that of Mr. Randolph, and telling the man to wait a moment, called a policeman and notified the detectives. He was taken into custody but would say nothing except that he needed the money.

Sees New Bank Control

That the government will issue $2,250,000,000 of national treasury notes and adopt a new method of control for regional or subtreasury banks, is the belief of Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics-American National. Mr. Hill returned from the East recently. While in Washington he talked with public men on what they intend to do with reference to currency legislation. "The prevailing idea in Washington seems to be that gold currency amounting to $1.086,000,000, greenbacks for $346,000,000 and national bank notes totaling $750,000,000 will be retired," said Mr. Hill. "The $1,086,000,000 in gold behind the certificates, $150,000,000 in gold held to redeem the greenbacks, $386,000,000 in gold held by the treasury to pay different obligations of government, $170,000,000 which will be paid in gold by regional or subtreasury banks, and $200,000,000 in gold to be paid by members as reserve on deposits—gold amounting to $1,992,000,000—will be added to $750,000,000 in government bonds, now held as security behind national banks, to secure about $2,250,000,000 of national treasury notes which will be issued. There seems to be a determination to do something in reference to an emergency currency bill, although a great many persons think the Aldrich-Vreeland bill will take care of any emergency for this year."

Missouri Crops in Need of Rain

The general showers over central and eastern Missouri Sunday relieved crop conditions somewhat. The Missouri state board of agriculture reports that the wheat crop is practically made. There will be a bumper corn crop if rains come in time and the corn even under dry weather conditions will not be a failure because the stand never was better.

New Missouri Banks

Announcement has been made of the organization of the Ozark States Trust Company, Springfield, having a present paid up capital stock of $200,000 but which by a series of increases will have a total capital of $1,000,000. The Ozark States Trust is in reality the outgrowth of the Woodruff Trust, which was organized in Springfield in November, 1912, for the purpose of doing a trust company business in a limited way and to manage various properties. Its business was so satisfactory and profitable that it was decided to enlarge the field, resulting in the filing of a certificate announcing a change in the name of the Woodruff Trust to the Ozark States Trust and increasing the number of directors from five to nine. John T. Woodruff, the organizer of the Woodruff Trust, will be the president of the new institution. The other officers are: Lewis C. Gibbs, vice-president; Frank E. Miller, treasurer, and Roy Cox, secretary. The directors are as follows: Charles H. Cole, William L. Garrett, Joseph H. George, Lewis C. Gibbs, Edward D. Levy, Louis S. Meyer, Frank E. Miller, Edward J. Perry and John T. Woodruff.

New Corporation Law

The law making the secretary of state the supervisor of corporations with power to revoke the license of a corporation failing to register annually with that department and pay a $5 fee became effective June 23d. This law was fathered by the secretary of state, but was introduced by Senator Carter of Clark county. The bill was strongly opposed by Senator Greene of Kansas City and other senators upon the ground that it is unconstitutional. They held that the secretary of state is a clerical officer and could not be legally vested with what has always been a judicial function. This law creates the office of deputy supervisor of corporations.

Dividends Paid

Commissioner of Insurance and Banking Gill has announced that the state banking board has declared a dividend of 10 per cent, amounting to $2,176.22, on the Paige State Bank of Paige and a dividend of 50 per cent on the First State of Kopperl, amounting to $4,085.94. These two banks were taken over by the state department of insurance and banking, the Paige bank, February 10, 1912, and the Kopperl bank, December 5, 1911. These dividends were paid to the state banks which contributed to the guaranty fund to make up the losses sustained by the two banks. Commissioner Gill is of the opinion that the dividend thus declared will represent about all the banks will receive, as the remaining assets on hand practically are worthless.

JUDGING THE CURRENCY BILL

The readiness of President Wilson and his currency advisers to accept amendments and additions to the currency bill is one of the most encouraging signs of the times. Representative Stone of Illinois, proposed that no district be allowed double representation, not even by the ex-officio members, a system which has clung since the beginning in most governmental matters. The new A. B. A. constitution, up for adoption at Boston, has the same nut to crack. The president saw the statecraft in the Stone proposal and fell in with it without a moment's delay.

J B. Forgan of Chicago has punctured a few of the weaker spots in other directions. He comes to telephoto focus on anything political where banking is concerned. The first draft of the bill was not objectionable to Mr. Forgan but the so-called Bryan concessions, cutting out the refunding provisions for the two's and the enthronement of the federal reserve board, are not acceptable. Mr. Forgan fears that many nationals would not continue in the system, but would convert to state banks, if the provisions stand as outlined. He says that "it seems unlikely that any board of directors charged with the responsibility of representing in a fiduciary capacity their shareholders and their depositors would consent to place an amount aggregating approximately 50 per cent of their capital entirely beyond their own control. There are some inconsistencies in the bill which, of course, could be corrected. One is that although the privilege the banks in the reserve and central reserve cities now have of acting as legal reserve agents for outside banks is to be withdrawn from them they are to continue to be designated as reserve and central reserve cities."

In closing one of the ablest interviews of recent times the veteran financier fires this parting shot:

In view of the chaotic possibilities of such a measure I cannot conceive of its being enacted by congress. Unless it has the approval of the national banks to the extent that they will practically all be induced to continue in the system and is made sufficiently attractive to induce the state banks to participate in it, which they are permitted to do, it cannot possibly result in anything but a fiasco."

Banker E. D. Hulbert, also of Chicago, has been in the confidence of the administration forces from the very first. He approved the tentative draft and sees no signs of a colored gentleman lurking in the newly revised plan. Mr. Hulbert says of the federal board of control to which Mr. Forgan so strongly objects:

The board is given certain specified duties to perform, and I do not anticipate that there will be much disturbance in its performance of them. It will not have the actual management of the federal reserve banks. Those will be operated by boards of nine directors, of whom the member banks will select six. There is a list of nine or ten powers and duties assigned to the federal reserve board, and the only one in the lot I object to is that which permits the board to require the federal reserve bank in one district to discount the paper of any other federal reserve bank."

THE CHICAGO BANKER is pleased to submit these diverging views, coming from men eminent in banking and economics. Bankers must determine for themselves. When such sound reasoners as Hulbert and Forgan do not see the new bill alike the reader must decide his own viewpoint.

FIFTY YEARS OF BANKING

It will be fifty years on Tuesday next since the First National Bank of Chicago opened its doors to the public. Chicago at that time boasted a population of 150,000 and the total volume of circulation notes issued by private banks of that day did not exceed one dollar per capita. The utter insufficiency of such a sum to meet the business demands of the community was apparent. During the winter of 1862-3 the present national banking act was before Congress and was much discussed throughout the country just as the currency and banking bill before the present Congress is being discussed to-day. Edmund Aiken was conducting a private bank and among those with whom he conferred were Samuel M. Nickerson, then recently from England and engaged in the distilling business; Byron Rice, a capitalist; Samuel W. Allerton, a packer, and Benjamin P. Hutchinson, already famous on the board of trade. This group decided to take early advantage of the national currency act and the First National of Chicago was the result. The officers of the now famous bank have prepared for private circulation a history of the First National covering the fifty years which will have expired on Tuesday next. The book is splendidly written and printed on fine paper and traces the growth of the institution from the day of small things until the present time. The names of those who have been associated with the First National during its prosperous career will be familiar to every resident of this city. The bank began business at 22 La Salle Street and shortly afterwards moved into its own building at the corner of Clark and Lake streets. All told it has owned and occupied five buildings in succession, one of which was destroyed in the fire of 1871. Full page pictures of all these buildings are included in the history about to be issued. The bank has had just as many presidents as it has had new buildings, beginning with Aiken in 1863, who was succeeded by Nickerson in 1867, who served until 1891 when Lyman J. Gage was elected. Mr. Nickerson again served as president from 1897 to 1900 when he was succeeded by James B. Forgan, the present head of the institution. The capital of the First National in 1863 was $205,000. It was increased fifty per cent the first year and doubled in 1865. In 1866 it was made $1,000,000, remaining at that sum until 1883 when it was increased to $3,000,000, largely paid up out of surplus. The capital was not again increased until 1901 when it was advanced to $5,000,000, the surplus remaining as before at $2,000,000. Two years later the capital was increased to $8,000,000 and the surplus to $5,000,000. The surplus rapidly increased until in 1910 it was equal to the capital stock. In 1911 the capital was made $10,000,000 and the surplus $10,000,000, which are the figures for to-day. The undivided profits account, however, is nearly $2,000,000. The loans have advanced in like proportion from $150,000 in 1863 to $80,000,000 at the present time.

Perhaps the most successful undertaking under the guidance of Mr. Forgan was the establishment in 1904 of the First Trust and Savings. More than a thousand accounts were opened in the first week of its existence. Its earning capacity appeared to be equaled by its growing ability, and by the close of 1910 more than sixty thousand savings accounts were upon the books of the First Trust and Savings. The volume of business done in other departments was equally phenomenal. In 1911 the capital stock was increased to $5,000,000 by tranferring two and one-half millions from surplus account the last day of the year. Each shareholder in the First National was given a beneficiary interest of a half-share in the First Trust and Savings. The ratio remains unchanged at this time. There is much of value contained in this book which will appeal to every banker and financial man at this center. The text is presented without comment, reliance being made upon simple, historical statement. There is to be a wide distribution of the copies.

MODIFYING THE CURRENCY BILL

The currency commission in one act has justified its whole existence. Chosen for their ability the members have shown both tact and persistence in rare degree. The commission answers to the thirty-three cardinal questions proposed by the committees of congress are not those of carping criticism, but are able, suggestive and helpful. But this is a small part of what was done. Senator Owen came to New York and conferred for one

THE NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL BANK
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

FORECASTING the future, in 1872, the founders of this bank named it The Northwestern. ¶Starting with a capital of $200,000, its capital and surplus are now $5,000,000, and its resources are well over $31,000,000. Deposits nearly quadrupled in the last ten years. ¶It has justified its name: The Bank Has Kept Pace With Its Wonderful Territory. ¶And, having the largest volume of business in the Northwest, it is able to offer unexcelled facilities.

whole day in a heart-to-heart fashion which was promising.

Having been a banker, and living in a state where they need their money at home, he saw the danger of the regional reserves. It is likely that this feature will be compromised so that reserve accounts may be divided and only go in part to the regional bank. This is more important to the country bank than to the reserve center banks by far.

The commission as a body did not pull the red flag on the federal board of control to be appointed by the president. It did suggest that the appointments be made from twelve names submitted by the twelve regional boards, and that was the smart thing to do. On the subject of note issues and the redemption of the two's the representations of the commission were so fair that they were conceded.

Fresh from its long session with Senator Owen in New York, the bankers went to Washington and conferred with Chairman Glass and were given a full hearing by President Wilson, a most willing listener. Mr. Reynolds has told the press openly all that the bankers asked and why they asked it. It was a wonderful presentation of a difficult question and the bankers of the whole country are to be congratulated upon the character and ability of its final spokesmen, Festus J. Wade, John Perrin, Sol Wexler and George M. Reynolds. The citizens and business men are fortunate that the fate of the new currency bill so largely rests in the hands of such fearless and just public servants as Secretary McAdoo, Chairmen Glass and Owen and President Wilson.

McCORNICK & CO. OF SALT LAKE CITY

William S. McCornick of Salt Lake City, head of the big banking house of McCornick & Co., is one of the stalwart figures of the great state of Utah and one of the foremost and best known men in the intermountain country. In June of 1873 he established a banking business which has grown with the city, and which to-day, under the name of McCornick & Co., is without doubt the largest financial institution of its kind between the Missouri river and the Pacific ocean. The bank was incorporated by Mr. McCornick in 1910 and many of the best known and wealthiest men in the West have become associated with him in the business. In addition to being a banker Mr. McCornick also is a mining magnate, promoter of railroads and a builder of great enterprises. He is a large owner in some of the most valuable mining properties in the West and also is interested in the American Smelting and Refining Company and an officer and director in many of the most important industrial, mining and financial concerns in the intermountain country.

Mr. McCornick always has taken a deep interest in public affairs and has worked zealously to better conditions and to help the state. In 1888 he was elected to the common council of Salt Lake City. Some years later he was elected again and served the city as president of the council. For almost twenty years he was president of the board of trustees of the State Agricultural College.

A. S. BEYMER AT PITTSBURGH

President A. S. Beymer of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association in his annual address last week devoted a portion of his remarks to the general outlook for the country. He said in part:

"There has seldom been observed a more interesting conflict of opinion regarding our business future than is to be noticed to-day. The situation is full of possibilities, and although there are many uncertainties to be reckoned with, it can be said that conditions are not alarming. On the contrary, the outlook in many respects is very encouraging; more so than is usual at this time of the year. According to the United States Government estimate for May, and the unusual weather that has prevailed in the wheat belt, there is little to be asked for so far as the agricultural outlook is concerned. Were it not for the new tariff law, and the readjustment which a revision of the schedules would involve, general business would without doubt become a good deal more active. While there has undoubtedly been a slacking up of orders in the steel business, this may be attributed largely to a lack of orders from the railroads, and while these great arteries of commerce are always in the market, they are not at present undertaking anything but the most necessary improvements, due largely to their inability to finance themselves properly at reasonable rates, as well as to the restraining hand of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has taken away from them all reasonable regulation and control of their affairs, which every other business or corporation is privileged to enjoy.

"At no time in the past thirty years have we been better prepared to experiment with the lowering of tariff duties than we are to-day; underlying conditions being sound and vastly better than the last time we experimented in this direction. With the crop outlook, therefore, as satisfactory as it seems to be, the indications are that the business interests of the country will go through the ordeal with no great disturbance. There is one great question, however, that will have to be solved before we go much further, and that is the labor question; and the day is not far distant when a satisfactory solution must be found for this problem, caused on the one hand by the ever-increasing demands of labor for shorter hours, and at the same time for higher wages."

Thomas Durkin, in his anxiety to go back to Denmark, forged four checks at Rock Rapids for amounts from $7.50 to $20. The Lyon County National discovered the checks were bogus and notified Secretary P. W. Hall of the I. B. A. Warnings have been sent out to various bankers who may be visited by Durkin on his way to Denmark.

Des Moines, June 20th.—Just to stir up a little excitement during the heated term, a Des Moines newspaper prints a story to the effect that already there are four candidates in the field for president of the Iowa Bankers Association to succeed the present incumbent, D. L. Heinsheimer of Glenwood. The four candidates mentioned as aspirants are Gilger E. MacKinnon, president of the Mechanics Savings of Des Moines and one time vice-president of the association; W. A. Hopkins, president of the State Savings at Lamoni and an aspirant for the honor up to a short time before the recent convention, when he withdrew in favor of Mr. Heinsheimer; J. L. Edwards, president of the Merchants National at Burlington, and J. H. Ingwersen, president of the Peoples Trust and Savings, Clinton. This same newspaper has discovered "a deep, dark plot in the selection of Clinton for meeting place next year." This plot, says the newspaper, "lies in the fact that Ingwersen's friends propose to stampede the convention for their candidate for president when the roll is called at Clinton next spring." As a usual thing the real contest at the I. B. A. meeting is the fight for treasurer and if the presidential competition is to be so severe it is reasonable to suppose that the treasurership scrap next year may even come to blows.

Recover Grip for Banker

Score another for Percy Hall, secretary of the I. B. A., and his valiant assistant detective Gust Patek, of the Burns agency. After the Des Moines police had sought twenty-four hours in vain for a grip containing $13,000 in negotiable paper, Messrs. Hall and Patek stepped in and found it on an ashpile in an alley in less than two hours. The grip belonged to George Lewis, president of the First National at Dexter. Mr. Lewis came to Des Moines to dispose of some mortgages. He completed negotiations with a Des Moines trust company and betook himself to a café for refreshments. After he had left the table he discovered that his grip in which he had placed the $13,000 in papers was missing. He notified the police but the officers were unable to strike a clew, inasmuch as the waiters in the café united in declaring they "hadn't even seen it." Detective Patek lost little time when he once struck the case, and the grip, when opened after it had been tossed onto the ashpile, was found to have the papers intact. Detective Patek thinks the grip was stolen while Lewis was eating and that the culprit became scared and threw it away as the chase proceeded.

Des Moines Visitors

The hot weather has kept bankers away from the tall buildings the past few days but among the strangers noticed in Des Moines were Vice-President Charles Olinger, Peoples State at Maxwell; Cashier J. E. Walker, Truro Savings; President J. F. Johnson, St. Charles Bank; President Lafe Collins, Citizens National, Knoxville; President A. B. Crave, Kellogg Savings; Vice-President A. R. Thompson, German National, Hastings, Neb., en route East in automobile; Cashier E. E. Guthrie, Norwalk Savings; President C. H. McNider, First National, Mason City; Assistant Cashier Carrie E. Minister in Rôle of Life Saver

L. O. Shaffer, cashier of the Citizens Bank at Altoona, has discovered that his minister, Rev. E. J. Laird, of the Methodist church, can save lives as well as souls. For had not the Rev. Mr. Laird fished Cashier Shaffer and Mrs. Shaffer out of the Des Moines river it is probable that the Citizens would be looking for a new cashier. Ten couples, including Mr. and Mrs. Shaffer, were attending a church picnic when the party decided to go in wading. They started in abreast and all struck a hole in the river at the same time. In all the party, the sky pilot was the only swimmer. He fished out the waders one by one and not a death was recorded.

Girl Held for Forgeries

Eva Stream, a pretty 19 year old girl and faithful Sabbath School worker, has been bound to the grand jury by the courts of Des Moines on charges of securing some $250 by forging checks. The girl passed no less than 25 of them, she told the police, on various department stores. Each was for $8 to $10 and each was signed by the name of a well known Des Moines physician. The police were on the young woman's trail for several days before they arrested her with sufficient evidence to warrant the filing of charges. The Rev. Finis Idleman, one of the leading pastors of the city, expresses great confidence in the girl and has been interceding for her with the officers. He says she did not fully understand the seriousness of her offense.

Clever Swindler at Work and $2,000 at Brooklyn. He requested the bank to draw on them for that amount, as he had just purchased a farm. He next left an account for $1,000 for collection and took a receipt for it. This receipt he presented at a jewelry store, declared he had money at the First National and paid for a $100 diamond ring with a check drawn on the latter institution. Needless to say the check was no good and the stranger could not be found.

E. H. Rich, cashier of the First National at Fort Dodge, does not believe that there is any money in paying the government 2 per cent on its deposits secured by bonds. Consequently, Cashier Rich has not sought any further deposits under the new system, although it is a government depository.

The Des Moines school board has been trying for some time to sell $276,500 in bonds at 4.5 per cent. Cashier John Hogan of the German Savings, treasurer of the board, has even gone down to Wall Street to dispose of the bonds, but his trips were in vain. Either money was too tight or the percentage was not high enough, he reported. Accordingly the school board has authorized the sale of the bonds at 5 per cent.

Charles A. Isaacs, formerly banker at Forest City, was sentenced to five years in the Stillwater penitentiary by Judge Reed in federal court at Fort Dodge when he pleaded guilty to one of thirty-nine counts in an indictment charging him with making false entries in the books of the bank. The defense showed that Isaacs was trying to save the bank, that he did not realize any money from his action, that the depositors did not lose money and that the institution is still running. The mittimus will be withheld for sixty days, and in the meantime President Wilson will be asked to grant a pardon.

At last the famous Atlantic North and South Railroad has been sold. The north end of the line goes to the bondholders for $85,000. The south end goes to Robert Abels of St. Louis for $98,000.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane's first Pow Wow, or June carnival, which was held this week, exerted a most beneficent influence on business conditions in all lines. Every hotel in the city has been crowded to capacity throughout the week with the record-breaking number of visitors from all parts of the Pacific Northwest and from as far south as Oakland, Cal., which sent a delegation of 156 citizens. Merchants in practically ail lines report volume of business greater than in any week in the history of the city. The Pow Wow, which will become an annual playtime carnival of the Spokane country, is admirably timed for the convenience of the farming population, as it follows spring planting and precedes harvest.

Out-of-town bankers in Spokane during the week included: W. G. Shuram, cashier First National of Waitsburg; L. M. Knettle, Pomeroy; E. W. Anderson, cashier Security State of Newport; R. H. McCartney, cashier Security National of Cheny; E. O. Cathcart, assistant cashier Pullman State of Pullman; H. G. Jones, cashier First National of Clarkston, and W. A. Hart, former president Exchange National of Rathdrum, Ida.

In the list of 65 cities of the United States of which figures on building permits for May have been compiled by the American Contractor, a Chicago publication, Spokane ranks high, holding twelfth place for building activities during the month. Spokane shows a gain of 99 per cent over the same month last year, one of the biggest gains made by any city. For May, 1913, according to the table, building permits in Spokane reached a total of $1,776,066, as against $892,660 in May, 1912. Only four cities show a greater per cent gain than Spokane for the month.

Whitworth college, a Presbyterian institution of higher learning at Tacoma, Wash., may be removed to Spokane. When it was learned that the college was considering leaving Tacoma, prominent Spokane Presbyterians and the chamber of commerce urged the trustees to locate the institution in Spokane. This week a committee headed by President D. D. McKay of Whitworth spent some time here looking into the situation and viewing available sites. President McKay publicly expressed himself as highly pleased with conditions in Spokane from the standpoint of his college and said he would put the final disposition of the question up to the trustees of the institution. The trustees will meet in Tacoma within two weeks.

Farmers of the Palouse country are erecting silos and dairy barns in larger numbers than usual, an indication, says C. H. Farnsworth of Palouse, of the increasing interest in diversified farming, and especially in dairying. "There is three times as much corn as usual being raised in our section this year," said Mr. Farnsworth. "We are beginning to see the profits in diversified farming, and the corn and silage are being consumed at our farms, while our products, including milk, cream, butter and hogs, are going to market. The day of wheat farming in the Palouse, on a large scale at least, has about passed away. Some extra good dairy stock was shipped into Palouse a short time ago and disposed of quickly. We are going more and more heavily into this line and the product is being collected at various stations and shipped to Spokane over the Spokane and Inland Electric Railway."

W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National, and W. L. Clark, auditor of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, have returned from Corvallis, Ore., where they attended the annual convention of the Oregon Bankers Association. Both bankers speak in high terms of the convention, which was the best attended on record, and of their entertainment at the Oregon State Agricultural College, where the sessions were held. "One of the most important things done," said Mr. Vincent, "was the indorsing of the plan to capitalize the state's resources—in other words, approving the plan of putting the state lands on the market at from $10 to $25 an acre to encourage settlers of the right sort."

The Fidelity National of Spokane has been made a United States depository for the first time in the recent distribution of federal funds among the banks of the country. Thomas H. Brewer, president, announced that the bank had just received $20,000 of government funds. This is about one-fifth of the total amount distributed in the whole state at the last distribution. Eight banks of the state, four of them in Spokane, received in the aggregate $97,500. The Fidelity was given the lion's share in view of the fact that the amount was the first federal money deposited with it.

Latah county, Idaho, is to have bond election July 22d, when the voters are to decide the question of building a new courthouse, the cost not to exceed $110,000, including a jail and all furnishings. The special election last year on bonds to build a new courthouse resulted in failure by a few votes to secure a two-thirds majority.

Verne Rolfe, formerly in the remittance department of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, at present connected with the firm of Murphey, Favre & Company, has been named assistant cashier of the National Bank of Cheney and will enter upon his duties about July 15th.

WISCONSIN CONVENTION

A large number of bankers left the city of Milwaukee Saturday evening on the steamer "North America," where they held their twenty-first annual convention this week. Prior to the departure the executive council met at association headquarters in the Pabst building. The steamer left the dock adjoining the Wisconsin National Bank building. Religious services strictly non-denominational in character were held Sunday morning. Dr. Paul B. Jenkins, one of Milwaukee's leading pulpit orators, spoke on the subject of the "Great Lakes and the Welfare of the West."

Sunday a landing was made at Mackinac Island, enabling those who desired to view the attractive spots of the Island and affording an opportunity for carriage drives and sight-seeing. Monday the immense government locks at the Soo, both United States and Canadian, connecting Lakes Superior and Huron were visited. Some of the bankers derived enjoyment from shooting the rapids in canoes managed by Indians. Tuesday return was made through the waters of Green Bay and the fruit lands adjoining Sturgeon Bay inspected.

The convention was called to order Monday by President E. A. Dow of Plymouth. After the annual address of the president the executive council reported. The reports of Secretary Bartlett and Treasurer Flieth had been printed and distributed prior to the convention. After the appointment of committees there was an address on banking customs versus banking laws by Thomas B. Paton, general counsel for the American Bankers Association.

Monday afternoon, immediately after leaving the Soo, the committee on insurance of bank deposits which was continued at last year's convention, presented its report. Monday evening at eight o'clock there was a discussion entitled "A Most Important Development Affecting Banking in Wisconsin," led by J. R. Wheeler, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Union Bank, Columbus, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Wisconsin Bankers Association.

Tuesday afternoon the Hon. Geo. A. Buckstaff, president of the Buckstaff-Edwards Co., Oshkosh, talked on "A Business Man's Review of Business Conditions in Wisconsin." After the report of the resolutions committee, unfinished business, report of nominating committee and election of officers, the convention adjourned.

Officers of the Wisconsin Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, E. A. Dow, president State Bank of Plymouth; vice-president, H. A. Moehlenpah, cashier Citizens State, Clinton; treasurer, H. G. Flieth, cashier National German-American Bank, Wausau; secretary, George D. Bartlett, Milwaukee.

Address by Thomas B. Paton

Thomas B. Paton, general counsel for the American Bankers Association, talked to the Wisconsin bankers on banking customs and banking laws. He told of the progress which has been made in the endeavor to have enacted uniform laws relating to warehouse receipts, bills of lading, negotiable instruments and other matters in which bankers are vitally interested.

"There are hundreds of important practical questions which arise in the conduct of banking that would be desirable to touch upon, if time permitted," said Mr. Paton. "The law and custom on many of these points are more and more approaching certainty and uniformity, but there are still numerous doubtful questions, and much time will elapse before certainty and definiteness of rule is ultimately attained. In the long run the principle of codification, which has already been adopted as to bills and notes and other commercial instruments of credit, will be extended further to cover all phases of deposit and discount banking."

Mr. Paton's remarks consisted of a discussion and explanation of the rules of law governing the various transactions which arise daily in the banking business, and about which there is more or less doubt existing as to the legal status of the parties concerned therein.

Business Conditions in Wisconsin

George A. Buckstaff of the Buckstaff Company at Oshkosh discussed business conditions in his state. He expressed the belief that the employers and manufacturers are getting the worst end of it from a legislative standpoint, and that the government, instead of devoting so much money and energy toward alleviating the troubles of the farming element of the country, might profitably expend some of its energy on behalf of the manufacturers and employers. Mr. Buckstaff said in part:

"What the manufacturers and employers need to-day is to have the government take up the question of their needs as thoroughly as it has taken up the needs of the farmer. To furnish information founded on scientific research and experiment. The government has furnished information on the cost of cultivating every kind of soil in every state in the Union; the amount of its minimum and maximum crops, their values; the labor costs; soil exhaustion, etc., etc. Every farmer not only has a chance to get at all these facts, but they are crammed down his throat, if not into his brain, at every turn he makes. The manufacturer has to dig up all the information out of his own experience or filch the well guarded secrets of his competitor.

"If the government will spend a small fraction of what it spends on the farmer to teach the same economies and conservation to the manufacturer and employer, the cost of living will be reduced without the need of laws and there will be fewer disagreements between capital and labor. The business interests of the country should insist upon this service from the government and I think the department of commerce could render as much or greater service to the country than the department of justice with its prosecuting attorneys and marshals."

ATTRACTIVE DOHERTY OFFERING

Henry L. Doherty & Co. are offering at par and accrued interest $2,000,000, 7 per cent 5 year coupon convertible gold notes of the Cities Service Company, a part of which already have been placed with investors. This is a part of a total authorized issue of $10,000,000, of which $5,000,000 only are to be issued at this time and $3,000,000 of these already have been sold in London. They are callable at 102 and interest and are convertible into preferred stock of the company at any time prior to maturity at par. The safety of the issue as an investment is indicated by the fact that the preferred and common stocks following it on May 31st last had a market value of over $18,000,000 or more than three times the total issue of notes outstanding.

Earnings of the Cities Service Company have been unusually satisfactory since the company was organized, in 1910, and on May 31st last the profit and loss surplus stood at $835,031, while total assets on the same date were in excess of $34,000,000. On the basis of returns thus far in 1913, the company will earn over 12 per cent on its common stock this year, after payment of all expenses, including interest on the new issue of notes. Monthly dividends are paid on both the preferred and common stocks of the company at the rate of 6 and 5 per cent per annum, respectively.

TO PROMOTE RURAL CREDITS

Fort Worth, Tex., June 24th—The Farmers Union of Texas is going to ask the Texas legislature at the special session to appropriate $25,000 per annum to be expended under the direction of the State Department of Agriculture in promoting marketing and rural credits, according to Peter Radford, president of the Farmers Union.

"It is as properly a function of government to study and disseminate information and to put into execution plans for the sale of products as it is to teach production," declared President Radford in a recent interview. He said the Farmers Union stands ready to co-operate with the State Government in developing a warehouse system and facilities for the systematic marketing of cotton and to render assistance in marketing all products on a more intelligent and businesslike basis, as it would take the co-operation and combined efforts of all to handle the problem.

SOUTH DAKOTA CONVENTION

The twenty-second annual convention of the South Dakota Bankers Association, held in Watertown June 25th and 26th, was a huge success, both from the standpoint of the number in attendance and the attractive and interesting features afforded by the program.

The convention was called to order in the Metropolitan Opera House by President F. C. Danforth and the address of welcome to the visiting bankers delivered by Mayor H. A. Wagner. The Hon. E. L. Abel responded gracefully, after which President Danforth delivered his annual address. After committee appointments there were reports from the chairman of the executive council, agricultural committee, treasurer, secretary and group chairmen.

At the afternoon session the Hon. J. W. Parmley of Ipswich talked on silos and finance; Geo. Randall, president of the Merchants Loan and Trust of Rapid City, discussed guaranty of bank deposits and W. E. Briggs, cashier of the Live Stock National, South St. Paul, spoke on live stock. Secretary G. H. Richards of the Minnesota Bankers Association was down for an address and Governor A. O. Eberhardt of Minnesota talked to the bankers on central schools.

The second day Detective Burns of the Burns detective agency delivered one of his characteristic addresses and Col. Lee Stover of Watertown furnished a better farming number. Taxation was the subject of the remarks of C. M. Henry, chairman of the South Dakota tax commission. After the reports of committees and the selection of officers, the convention adjourned.

The entertainment program provided by the Watertown bankers for their guests was replete with interesting and attractive features. Wednesday evening a reception was given the visiting ladies in the Elks Lodge room, while the visiting bankers were given a smoker in the club rooms of the same building. The Fourth Regiment Band gave a concert and dancing, cards and a general good time were had. Thursday afternoon there was an auto trip to Lake Kampeska, conceded to be the finest lake in South Dakota.

Officers of the South Dakota Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, F. C. Danforth, president Citizens Bank, Parker; vice-president, A. L. Freelove, president Security State, Kennebec; treasurer, C. E. Olstad, cashier, First National, Madison; secretary, J. E. Platt, president Security Bank, Clark.

President's Address

President Danforth in his annual address pointed out the important part agriculture plays in the prosperity of the state. He said:

"This is an agricultural state, and though we have the best producing gold mine in the world, only a small portion of the state is given up to mining. Being an agricultural state and the bulk of our wealth derived from the soil, it behooves every bank or banker in the state to foster and encourage this industry; and I think there is no business man, or class of business men, who do as much to help the farmer as the banker, with money, advice and genuine interest. There are organizations of bankers all over the United States being formed to aid farmers and encourage them along the lines of agricultural development and education, and the different state associations are taking an active interest; among others our own state of South Dakota is continually sending out circulars and matter of an educational nature to bankers, trying to increase their interest in agriculture and agriculturists, and there has been some thought and discussion toward a systematic effort on the part of this association to do something toward the betterment of the farmer and his methods of farming. It certainly would be an effort along the right line, and no better class of men to push this work, unless it be the farmer himself."

In speaking of the progress of the South Dakota Bankers Association during the past year, President Danforth said:

"The association was never in better shape than at present and I think never accomplished so much as in the past year in legislative matters, and not altogether on account of the fact that our secretary spent the most of his time in Pierre during the session of the legislature looking after the interests of the association, but because we had an unusually good legislative body. The personnel of the present legislature is above the average and though at first it looked as though we might get some legislation of a very detrimental character, in the sifting out process, the worst of these were left out, notably the guaranty of deposits bills, of which there were several, in my opinion, all bad and many of them very bad; and I hope this association will give due credit not only to a good legislative body, but also to our worthy secretary, Mr. Platt, the indomitable, Bert Cummins and other members and friends of the association who were always at the job to keep out harmful legislation and encourage the passage of good and useful bills.

"The greatest advancement along this line is the negotiable instruments bill, which the public very much needed and on which this association had put forth much thought and effort during several terms of the legislature, but without avail until this winter. There are also some banker members of this legislature who deserve special praise for their attitude in trying to defeat legislation detrimental to the state and their readiness to aid and push anything plainly for its good.

"One of the important things accomplished by your executive council in the past year is the incorporation of the association under the laws of the state of South Dakota. It had never been a legal body, and hence not authorized to make contracts, to receive or enter into any legal obligations. Now our South Dakota Bankers Association is a legalized body, and under the certificate of the state authorized to do business as a corporation, and does not involve the personal liability of officers and members of the association.

"Last November the people of this country placed in authority a party which pledged itself in no uncertain terms to the downward revision of the tariff and they are going to fulfil this pledge, no matter how much it affects general business. 'Downward Revision' seems to be the watchword of the day. The great mass of our people believe they are entitled to a lower cost of living, and they are goin to have it, because, after all, 'The People' are 'the court of final resort.' But labor will have to stand its proportionate share in the necessary readjustment. The cost of living is an economic condition, and is not going to be affected either beneficially or adversely, to any great extent, by any reduction of the tariff that this country could stand. The wage earner is not so much concerned with the tariff and its several schedules as he is about the uncertainty, unrest, and the loss of wages consequent upon the perpetual shifting of conditions due to threatened tariff revision from time to time. It is high time that the tariff question be taken out of politics and placed in the hands of a commission, and we, as trustees of the financial interests of the country, should use our utmost endeavors to see that this is done.

MARSHALL AND ILSLEY BANK BUILDING

"While I do not look for any great increase of business in the near future, I think our country would be better off if we would adopt a more optimistic air. One sign of continued good times in this country has been the increasing number of immigrants that have arrived here since January 1st. From January 1st to May 1st over 268,000 immigrants have come to our country, 109,000 of which have come during the month of April. This shows an increase over the same four months of last year of more than 30 per cent, Many of these arrivals, no doubt, include a number of those who left our shores temporarily after the panic of 1907."

J. W. Parmley of Ipswich advocated the use of the silo. He said: "If the bankers of South Dakota will study the silo and act on their conclusions and the experience of states far less favored—not next year or in 1915, but this year—and will back this up with reasonable credit at reasonable rates to men who have the facilities and abilities to carry on stock raising and dairying, the deposits will increase one hundred per cent in five years, land values physical and financial will advance 50 per cent, taxes will be reduced and over the state, fulfilling life's grand mission, will be a contented and prosperous people."

W. E. Briggs, cashier of the Stock Yards National of South St. Paul, advocated an increase in live stock production on the farms and that the banker must help. He said in part:

"This subject is a big one and requires thought, judgment and action if the banker is to lead or to stand shoulder to shoulder with the farmer in promoting an industry of such vital importance to the entire country. If the farms of the Northwest are to be properly stocked the burden of financing for this purpose must of necessity fall most heavily on the banker. I contend it is his duty to lend his aid toward a thorough and intelligent campaign for the restoration of our live stock supply, and incidentally the perpetuation of our national prosperity. If the American farmer is, during the future, to supply food for the tables of American citizens, something must be done to increase live stock production on the farms to insure an increased food production commensurate with our rapidly increasing population."

ADDRESSES BOND MEN

E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan & Trust, addressed the Bond Men's Club this week. He said:

'Crooked bond men who sell securities in which they would not themselves invest are the cause of this widespread demand for state commissions to regulate the sale of bonds.

"Remove the causes for this demand and the bond business will greatly benefit.

"In this country the people are waking up and making investigations and demanding them to be made, so that the buyer may not be entirely at the mercy of the seller.

"The 'Blue Sky' laws which are proposed in many states, one of which was before the present Illinois legislature, should not be necessary.

"The seller knows more about his article than the buyer, in most cases, and the seller should recognize and assume the responsibility for his goods. If we want to escape the restrictions which will be imposed on us by the 'Blue Sky' law, we must so conduct ourselves that the demand for this law will be wiped out."

MARYLAND CONVENTION

Eighteenth annual convention of the Maryland Bankers Association was held June 24th, 25th and 26th at the Blue Mountain House, Blue Mountain. The convention was called to order Wednesday morning by President Daniel Annan, president of the Second National of Cumberland. Address of welcome was delivered by Mayor J. McPherson Scott of Hagerstown and the response by W. W. Cloud, president of the State Bank of Maryland, Baltimore. After the annual address of the president reports were heard from the committee of administration, treasurer, secretary, and other committees.

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, Chicago, delivered an address on the subject of rural credits. In concluding his remarks and discussing the important part which the farmer plays in the growth and development of the nation, Mr. Edens said:

"The American farmer is an important element in our society and a potential factor in increasing the wealth of the country. We must depend upon him to supply those things without which life would be impossible. The greater the efficiency of the farmer and the greater the facility with which he is able to produce those things necessary to life and to distribute them to the consumer, the better the condition of the latter. It will be seen, therefore, that in bettering the condition of the farmer and making his lot more attractive, not only the farmer, but everybody else as well will be the gainers thereby. Consequently it behooves this nation to devote serious thought and consideration to the welfare of its rural citizens; to endeavor to inaugurate some system whereby the farmer will be enabled to raise larger and better crops through the employment of scientific methods; to evolve some system of agricultural credits where the necessary money to finance the business shall be forthcoming at such rates and under such conditions as not to work upon the borrower any unnecessary hardships, and last, but not least, to provide such a system of highways as will be a credit and not a disgrace and which will permit the farmer to distribute his product readily and easily to the infinite benefit of all concerned.

"I don't think it is necessary for me to cite statistics to prove that the United States is not the foremost agricultural nation of the world. Especially is this true when we consider the permanence of soil improvement methods. The opportunities for agriculture in our country are practically unlimited and it is greatly to be deprecated that we should be content to occupy an inferior position among the nations of the world so far as that branch of endeavor is concerned. We Americans have a reputation of being leaders and we owe it to our patriotism and pride, not to mention our welfare, to bring about a radical change in the way in which agriculture is carried on and in the conditions surrounding the tiller of the soil."

Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House Association, and Andrew Ramsay of Mt. Savage, Md., also delivered addresses to the bankers.

Thursday morning George B. Caldwell of Chicago, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings and president of the Investment Bankers Assocciation of America, talked on the investment banker of to-day and his possibilities, and J. H. Arnold of the U. S. department of agriculture at Washington told of farm methods in relation to national wealth. After the report of the auditing committee, election and installation of officers and new business, the convention adjourned.

Thursday evening a banquet was held in the Blue Mountain House, the speakers being Governor Phillips Lee Goldsborough of Maryland and the Hon. John Skelton Williams, assistant secretary of the treasury, Washington, D. C. The toastmaster was the Hon. Ferdinand Williams, ex-judge fourth judicial circuit of Maryland, Cumberland. Tuesday evening there was dancing, Wednesday afternoon a ride over the mountains to Chambersburg, Pa., and in the evening vaudeville and travel pictures.

Andrew Ramsay, state road commissioner for Maryland, said that the government is spending a great deal of money in the improvement of our waterways and in other matters, but that it has been somewhat negligent in the matter of providing good roads. He said we need federal roads and not federal aid roads.

Officers of the Maryland Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, Daniel Annan, president Second National of Cumberland; vice-president, W. C. Page, president Calvert Bank, Baltimore; secretary, Charles Hann, assistant cashier Merchants-Mechanics National, Baltimore; treasuruer, William Marriott, cashier Western National, Baltimore.

George B. Caldwell, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, said: "The investment banker to-day is entirely at the mercy of the government and the banker, with the addition of an equally bad condition in foreign markets, while his possibilities depend to a large extent upon the strength of securities already sold to withstand the strain of the next three months. If this analysis is true, we must cultivate patience, for it is a condition that time only can remedy, with less loss if we have patience and use it than if we do not. To-day the business world is dissatisfied and restless. They feel that all explanations have failed, either in correctness or comprehensiveness, and their lack of faith will, I assume, continue until new laws are passed and prove their worth and our bank reserves, both here and abroad, are re-established and normal rates for money again prevail. I fully believe President Wilson understands this and I hope congress will likewise see the necessity for early and definite action. I make this statement because in his currency message delivered again in person to congress, politics stops talking for a minute and the voice that is heard is that of statesmanship. Woodrow Wilson has a plan. He has an ordered program of legislation. He correlates currency reform to tariff reform as closely and as sanely as would any business man who was putting two similarly important changes into his factory. The main effect of the presidential message will be, in my opinion, the reassurance that it will bring to the country as to the way in which the great questions affecting prosperity are being handled at Washington. The tariff is being revised upon a definite economic plan; the currency is to be reformed as an integral part of that same theory. We may not be convinced as to the wisdom of the theory, but an exceedingly able and wise executive is. Furthermore, he is proceeding to act upon it. We know what we are going to get. One element of uncertainty is removed. There is nothing of guesswork or careless haste in the presidential outlook."
